The Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, JULY 8, 1880.

TORONTO AND OTTAWA R. R.

In a recent article, the Review, under the heading of "a cowardly attack," charges Mr. Blezard with being a "cowardly assassin of private character," in connection with the remarks of the member for the East Riding in reference to the Toronto & Ottawa Railway enterprise. In the very act of preferring so serious a charge against Mr. Blezard, the writer in the Review assumes the congenial attitude of Satan reproving sin, and gives a garbled and incomplete quotation from Mr. Blezard's remarks to bolster up its attack upon that gentleman. What Mr. Blezard did say on this subject was as follows:

"I think that it would hardly be fair for me to sit down without referring to a question of some importance to this country, concerning which we have recently had some rather singular developments. I refer to the question of railway aid. As you are aware I took an active interest, according to the instructions given me by the vast majority of my constituents, in endeavoring to induce the Government to grant aid to the Toronto & Ottawa Railway, and I did exert myself to secure that object in the faith that the promoters of the scheme were honest in their desire to build the road and in the knowledge that the people desired it to be built. The Government, however, found it advisable to cheek the expenditure for railways, and in giving a refusal to other schemes, did so also to the Toronto and Ottawa Railway. I do not wish to make any reflections upon any person, but I would have you remember that I have been publicly accused by the Tory organs in this county, of having acted in the interest of the Grand Junction Railway and the Instructions has been made that the failure to secure a bonus to the Toronto and Ottawa was in some way blamable upon me. I did my best to secure aid for that undertaking, as Mr. W. H. Scott can testify, but at the time I believed as you believed that it was an honest enterprise being prosecuted in your interest. I do not wish to say more than that those who imputed motives to me can now look at home, and I can fearlessly ask the judgment of every man in this county as to which of the two, the Tory member for the West or the Reform member for the East Riding of this county, did best his duty to the people. If my worst opponent can trace a dollar of the proceeds of the Toronto and Ottawa Railway enterprise to my pocket, I shall be glad to resign the honorable position in which you have placed me.

The Review, it will be recollected, when the fact of the failure of the Government to grant a subsidy to the Toronto and Ottawa enterprise was announced, had the audacity to charge Mr. Blezard with having acted in the interests of rival schemes, and imputed that he had been working for the Grand Junction and not for the Toronto and Ottawa scheme. Mr. Blezard took the first public opportunity of repelling that unworthy and false assertion, and in doing so drew attention to matters which are in the ken of every ratepayer in the county. He spoke of no man's "private character," as the Review would insinuate, and said nothing of which he has any cause to be ashamed, or which he need have any desire to retract. Mr. Scott is a public man and is amenable for his public actions. If the Review imagines it can hurl false and cowardly charges against the character of Mr. Blezard, and then sneak behind Mr. Scott's illness as a refuge from the retaliation which it wantonly provokes, it is very much mistaken. If it were tender of Mr. Scott's feelings, as it pretends, it would be considerate enough not to provoke discussion of matters concerning which the public impression is by no means in that gentleman's favor. The fact is, its affected solicitude in Mr. Scott's behalf is a mask behind which it seeks to give force to the malice with which it pursues Mr. Blezard. It does not in fact care a brass button for Mr. Scott, and is perfectly indifferent as to whom it may involve, so long as it may have its fling at the gentleman whose seat it contemplates with the ill-concealed envy of disappointed ambition.

CIVIL SERVICE FRAUD.

A Commission is now casually sitting at Ottawa, charged with enqiry into the Civil Service and the best means of remedying existing defects in the same. The Commission consists of two lay figures, D. McInnes, of Hamilton, and E. J. Barbeau, of Montreal, both gentlemen well respected and having a thorough knowledge of mercantile pursuits, but as thoroughly ignorant of the status and requirements of the Civil Service as a couple of basswood saw-logs. The other Commissioners are Messrs. J. C. Taché, C. Brunel, W. White, and John Tilto of the inside service. (that is, within the golden gates at Ottawa), and Mr. W. K. Mingaye, a member of the outside service with considerable interest in the inside service. The Secretary appointed for this distinguished commission is Mr. Martin J. Griffin, the gentleman whose intolerable strictures upon and lying abuse concerning the leaders of the Reform party have made his name stink in the nostrils of all honest men—himself, a one-time Radical, of the most pronounced anti-confederation type, who sold himself to the Tory Herald of Halifax became the Radical Chronicle, for which he was a writer, refused to weigh his merits financially as he estimated them himself. Of the seven members of the Commission six are members of the "Civil Service," with all that the same implies. Mr. Taché is an official of the Agriculture and Emigration Department, at a modest salary of $3,300 per annum, with patronage under him which are conveniently filled by favorite friends or needy relations. Mr. White draws a salary of $3,400 a year and has likewise many perquisites, with which it is needless to say it is not his interest to quarrel. Mr. Brunel is Deputy-Minister of Inland Revenue, enjoys a salary of $4,000, and has at least three sons pensioned upon the public. Mr. Tilton is a gentleman who was originally a very efficient greengrocer at St. John, New Brunswick, but happening to place his opinions on the right market became an admired member of the Marine and Fisheries Department. All the gentlemen comprising the majority of the pseudo "Commission" are in themselves highly respectable men, very efficient no doubt in their own way, but at the same time gentlemen so prejudiced by their circumstances and surroundings in favor of the existing state of affairs, that it would be idle, nay worse, to expect them to pronounce in favor of a remodelling of an institution which has given them fat salaries which they could not command in any other walk of life, and enables them to pension off poor and needy hangers on, who would otherwise be dependent upon them. The whole aim and object of this precious Commission will be, on the part of those favored in the Civil Service at the expense of those out of it, to whitewash the Civil Service Board, to pronounce affairs, as they are, much better than any change that can be proposed, and to give with an unwinking eye countenance to the monstrous frauds of nepotism and corruption which prevail at the capital, in the inner and favored circle of officials of which the majority of members on this Commission are representatives. In a word the whole Commission is a most outrageous farce and fraud, with no other object in life than to find new reasons why the status quo should not be disturbed, unless it be to provide new openings for political friends of the present Government.

A TROUBLED ORGAN.

The truly good man of our contemporary the Review, or one of his wicked partners, appears to be exceedingly uneasy in his mind. It may be the heat, or it may be that he has eaten something that disagreed with him, or it may be that the proceeds of Government advertising have fallen below the running expenses of the seven-by-nine sheet, if we may dignify so small a superficies of paper by such a term, in which the powerful intellect of the truly good man for six days of the week wrestles with the flesh, that he may be the better able, by force of contrast, to contend with the spirit on the seventh. Whatever the reason may be, it is clear enough, at all events, that the truly good man's nose is very badly out of joint indeed. After a week of profound and (no doubt) dyspeptic meditation, our truly good contemporary has made the startling discovery that our reporter, in his report of the recent meeting at Norwood, had omitted to insert the periods of applause, which fact moves the truly good man into such condition of funereal merriment as befits one charged with the delicate task of balancing responsibilities betweed church and state. We can assure our anxious contemporary that its ghastly humor is entirely thrown away. Our reporter did not report interruptions of applause, because he was there for the purpose of taking notes of the arguments used by the speakers, which he did to the best of his ability, and, apparently, to some purpose, since our profound contemporary has not, as yet, seen fit to take up for discussion any of the statements or arguments advanced. The electors of the county will know how to weigh those arguments, and they will not find less difficulty in coming to a conclusion from the tacit admission of our truly good confrere of his inability to contend with them. Our facetious friend is pleased to honor us with the appelation of "Demosthenes." We are conscious of the distinction; but our natural modesty will not permit us thus to rob another of his laurels. It is well understood that the true, genuine, original, and only Demosthenes of this generation made his only public appearance in this county at a recent banquet in honor of the Minister of Canals and Government Advertisements. The audience with great difficulty survived the oratory of the occasion, but they rest in the hope devout that Demosthenes has been seized either of mortal illness or lockjaw.

"Like a Pump, which coldly spouts and spouts away,
In one weak, washy everlasting flood," did Demosthenes pour upon an afflicted and despairing assemblage the vials of his pent-up eloquence. The Demosthenes of that occasion bore a striking personal resemblance to the truly good man of our down-town contemporary—but perhaps it was only one of the wicked partners, in disguise. Our reporter would have been indeed at a loss to have struck the right spot for the insertion of the "cheers" in that ever to-be-remembered speech, which our contemporary appears to consider an essential element in a public address. Probably, after consulting the orator, and the oratory, and the suffering audience, he would have appended, in marginal note, this quotation from the Review: "Not a single cheer appears to have been elicitated." We will give the truly good man a word of advice, gratis, and he can put the "cheers" in where they seem to come handiest: Don't attempt to be funny; it an't in you; in the role of Joe Miller, you're not a success. Like the alleged piece of iron, in an old story, out of which an ingenious youth was trying to make a razor, "You're mighty sharp when you're whetted up, but the stuff ain't in you to make a razor out of."

BROWN MEMORIAL FUND.

Those in charge of the subscription list in aid of the proposed Memorial Monument in honor of the late Hon. Geo. Brown, are requested to return them at their earliest convenience to the Secretary of the Committee, Mr. J. R. Stratton, at the EXAMINER Office.

Cold Springs, Cumbers.

A SCARE.—One evening last week the neighborhood of Robinson's Landing was the scene of much consternation occasioned by the hysterical screams of two young ladies, who, while walking by the river's edge, suddenly beheld what they guessed to be a huge sea-monster—a mermaid, mermen. The mystery has not yet been solved, but unimaginative folks intimate that the fact that a party was camping into a cask of cloths and a gentleman from the hamlet, and charity after the discovery, is a sufficient explanation.

The Toronto & Ottawa Railway.

The Globe of Monday contains in its Ottawa correspondence the following. The correspondent is not usually happy in his surmises, but the statement subjoined appears to give strength to an impression that exists in some quarters that the Grand Trunk Railway Company, having found the cheapest way to get rid of the Toronto and Ottawa to be to buy it out, have resolved to construct the line as a loop line of the Grand Trunk Railway, for the double purpose of killing off an independent road, and accommodating their local freight. If such be the case, of course any bonus paid to the enterprise will be so much in the pocket of the G. T. R. The following is the report:—

The engineers in connection with the Toronto and Ottawa Railway yesterday visited the bridge across the Ottawa River, above the Chaudiere Falls, now being built by the Quebec Government for the purposes of the North Shore Railway. On Saturday morning Mr. W. Wedderburn, Jr., President of the Company holding the charter of the road, and Mr. John Leys, Solicitor, arrived in this city. Both were questioned as to the Company's intentions in regard to the road. Mr. Gooderham stated that the Company intended to build an independent line if it were feasible and municipal aid were granted. Both these gentlemen claimed that the new Directors had done more in one month to advance the interests of the road than the old Company in years. The old Directors had not even caused proper surveys to be made, while the new Board were having the whole route surveyed. Respecting the alleged connection of the Grand Trunk Railway Company with the purchase of the charter both Mr. Gooderham, Jr., and Mr. Leys declined to give a direct denial, and manifested a preference to deal in cryptic answers and suspicious insinuations. The former said that if he gave the rumour that the Grand Trunk Railway Company were connected with the road a direct denial the people would not believe him. He thought it preferable that the municipalities interested should give the new Company every encouragement, instead of seeking to hamper their efforts. A glance at the composition of the new directorate, he thought, ought to convince the public, whether or not the Grand Trunk Railway Company controlled them. Mr. Leys, however, appeared to be charmingly frank, and had no hesitation in saying that the Grand Trunk Railway Company had nothing whatever to do with the proposed road at present. Le Canada Gouvernement is that Sir Leonard Tilley, Minister of Finance, was interviewed at his office yesterday afternoon by both these gentlemen. What the representatives of a provincial railway company can have to do with a Dominion Minister of Finance is a [illegible] directors of the new company are misjudged they have themselves alone to blame, so far as Ottawa is concerned. It is currently rumoured that the Grand Trunk Railway Company are to take possession of the road after it has been built and the municipal subsidies obtained, and it is the conviction of that opinion which will prevent the City Council from extending the time in which the construction of the road must be commenced in order to obtain the bonus.

THE TRENT VALLEY CANAL.

To the Editor of the Examiner:—

SIR,—Permit me to ask you, as a not unimportant ratepayer of this County (so far as taxes is concerned), what has been done with the money voted by the various counties and smaller municipalities, for the promotion of the Trent Valley Canal. I have no doubt that the money has been wisely and well expended, and that there exists no reason why the ratepayers of the several municipalities should not be placed in possession of the details of that expenditure, as common propriety demands from and self-respect suggests to the Committee of gentlemen who have had the handing of the money. I do not doubt that the money has been judiciously and economically expended, but the question has been asked of myself so frequently that it is evident there is a feeling in the county, among those whose money has gone into this enterprise, that there should be an audit of accounts, so that not only the public generally, but those especially who pay the piper, i.e., the taxpayers, may have an idea of how and in what manner the money voted for the canal was expended. I repeat again, I do not make this request in the way of casting suspicion anywhere, but rather to avert a suspicion which will certainly arise if a proper and public account be not given of every detail.

I am, Sir,
Yours very truly,
PETERBOROUGH.

July 2nd, 1880.

DOMINION DAY.

AT HOME AND ABROAD.

How it was Celebrated.

Thursday last, being Dominion Day, was celebrated by the loyal town of Peterborough, in common with its sister towns and cities, by strict observance as a public holiday. Business in town was completely suspended, if we except such useful establishments as the livery stables, which did a thriving business during the day, and such places of resort as Long Bros., whither youths and maidens resorted to tempt the fates with incomprehensible compounds of syrups rendered coldly seductive by the assistance of the Arctic Radiant. In spite of the fact that a man died in Washington the previous week from eating cherries, the rising generation bid defiance to the colic and kindred ills and went in for fruit in a manner highly gratifying to such publicists as Messrs. Chamberlain, Lemay and Bailey. With such recreation holiday-seekers during the forenoon were compelled to content themselves, except ing those who chose to take the trouble to walk over to the cricket grounds at Ashburnham, where a very interesting was in progress from 10 o'clock. Quite a crowd gathered here, the greater portion being of the feminine gender, to witness the match, which was very well contested and proved to be a most interesting event. An admission fee of ten cents was charged, and it was highly edifying to observe the ingenuity of economy practiced by a large crowd who, standing up in buggies, peering through knot-holes and crevices in the fence, clambering up the roofs of adjacent houses, hanging on telegraph poles and lamp-posts and perched upon wood-piles and other classic eminences, fabulously and unlawfully participated in ill-gotten enjoyment of the national game. Our reporter noted with profound satisfaction that numbers of those enterprising individuals, in the salvage of the ten cents admission fee, sacrificed coat tails and pantaloons to convenient nails, and were put to a degree of personal discomfort which was regarded with baleful enjoyment by the defrauded ticket-seller at the gate. We would suggest to the Club, that prior to another match, a few hundred pounds of shingle nails be employed, and likewise a few first-class pick-pockets under honorable agreement to ply their trade outside the grounds. The club had hoped to be able to play the return match with the Belleville club on Dominion Day, but were disappointed. Two teams were selected from our own club, thereupon, and a very good match ensued. The teams were as follows:—(Blue.) Captain, Robert Lee; J. Corkery, Gaol; H. LeBrun, Point; M. Halpin, C. Point; L. MacNaughton, Home; J. Sheehy, Home Field; J. Joyal, Def. Field; J. Lynch, Field; T. Choate, Field; M. Macdonald, Field; J. C. Robertson Field; M. Dunn, Field; A. Craig, Field. (Red.) Captain, James Dolan; Wm. Davis, Gaol; Wm. Radkins, Point; Wm. Sanderson, C. Point; M. M. Hackett, Home; C. LeBrun, Home Field; W. Morrow, Def. Field; A. Moffat, Field; J. Mackinnon, Field; T. McBain, Field, S. Heathorn, Field; D. Fitzgerald, Field; G. Scott, Field.

After some very good play, time was called, each team having taken a goal, and the third game being undecided. The playing of C. LeBrun, Joyle and Robertson was particularly good. The Fire Brigade band gave some admirable selections during the progress of the game.

FIRE BRIGADE PARADE.

At 1 o'clock an alarm was sounded, to which the firemen promptly responded, though it was to a call of duty of not quite so arduous or disagreeable a nature as they are generally required to act upon. Assembled in front of the Fire Hall the Brigade was formed in procession, preceded by their fine band, and headed by Chief Engineer Mitchell. The procession comprised the Ashburnham Company, Hose Company, Hook and Ladder Company, with the reels and steam fire engine. The reels and engine were tastefully decorated with flags and flowers, the former the work of the Committee, and the latter of Mr. James English and presented a very handsome appearance. The men in their new helmets and uniforms looked very tidy and attractive, as the procession marched from the Fire Hall up George Street to Murray, along Murray to Water, down Water, to Hunter, along Hunter to Aylmer, down Aylmer to Charlotte, along Charlotte to the Fire Station. The apparatus being left here, the procession proceeded to the Agricultural Grounds where the afternoon's entertainment was opened by the

a most interesting exhibition of innocence and lungs, ribbons, boots, bibs and tuckers, smiles and squalls. The judges were Messrs. T. Goldy and Thos. Burke of the Norwood Register, both connoisseurs in this branch of art, and selected specially by reason of profundity of experience and a certain sang froid which rendered them oblivious of manifestations of the maternal wrath of disappointed exhibitors to the charms of whose progeny the judges were courageously blind. The awards being made in this exhibition, the programme of was opened and continued during the afternoon, to the great enjoyment of the assembled crowd. The following is the list of prize winners in each competition:

THREE-LEGGED RACE.—3 entries 1st. Erskine and Weir.

THE TORCHLIGHT PROCESSION.

This was decidedly the most interesting feature of the occasion, the darkness showing off the display of torches and the continual display of rockets which was kept up as the procession marched through the principal streets, to great advantage. The procession wound up at Court House hill. The boys deserve credit for this feature of the days entertainment.

FIRE WORKS DISPLAY.

By ten o'clock p. m. a very large assemblage had gathered at the Court House Park to witness the display of fireworks, which began about ten o'clock. Unfortunately the display was a great disappointment. Owing to a slight fall of rain in the afternoon the powder had to be taken down, and some delay occurred in re-erecting them. The damp, too, affected the combustibles, and the display was a very slow affair. The waits between pieces were very long and shortly after eleven o'clock the crowd became restless and began to move away. The programme was finished on the market square somewhere between eight and morning, the balloon ascension, said to have been a very successful affair, taking place about two o'clock in the morning—an hour, it is needless to say, hardly suited to the popular convenience.

The crowd in town during the day was not by any means up to the expectations of the public, and though the day was very pleasant to be taken generally, it could hardly be termed an unqualified success.

The Day at Idyl Wild.

Quite a number of citizens left town in the morning by the steamer Golden-Eye, for Idyl Wild, where a regatta was the centre of attraction. A large number of visitors were gathered at this picturesque island from Lakefield, Port Hope, and the villages around the lake. The Hastings Brass Band enlivened the proceedings during the day, and dancing was freely indulged in at the pavillion. The weather was most unpropitious during the day for a regatta, the "white-caps" breaking on the heavy swell plainly indicating that it was almost impossible for a shell to live at any distance from the sheltered of the shore. However, when time for the race was called the competing four-oared crews, consisting of J. C. Shaw, A. Lech, G. Lech, and A. Mercer; and Jno. McClelland, J. C. Smith, F. Burney and R. S. Cook, took the water. A good start was made, the latter crew taking the lead, when at some distance out, a heavy swell broke over the latter boat, which filled and gradually sank. Happily Dr. Harrison of Keene, was out in a yacht, and after one or two tacks succeeded in catching an oar from the boat, and the crew were brought ashore in an exceedingly unpleasant condition of moistness. The boat with Mr. Shaw's crew turned the buoy, and about the spot where the first accident occurred it too filled and sank, the occupants swimming ashore. The race was declared off and will be contested on the 22nd inst., when it is to be hoped Neptune will favor the waters of Rice Lake with a less exuberance of his rude caresses. The single canoe race was splendidly contested, though only two paddlers out of six entries answered the call of the starter—Mr. H. S. Cook, of Peterborough, and R. Landreville, of Keene. After a strong race in which both men put in some admirable work, Cook came in ahead, again asserting the prowess of Peterborough in a most creditable manner. The race for the Champion Cup, in which there were seven entries, had also to be postponed till the 22nd inst. A very pleasant day withal was spent by the excursionists, the Peterborough party reaching home by the Golden-Eye in time for the torch-light procession and pyrotechnic disappointment, which concluded the celebration here.

Dominion Day in North Monaghan.

Considerable rivalry of a commendable description has always existed between the four school sections of North Monaghan. The land and parents of each section have always been noted for offspring of no mean strength or order. The school teachers each imagined, and firmly believed, that he or she knew how "to teach the young idea how to shoot" to the highest pinnacle of knowledge. To settle the vexed question a written examination was held, the papers being examined by Messrs. J. C. Brown, MaKee, Hallett, Braden, and W. A. Stratton. On Wednesday last a competitive examination was held between the pupils of Miss Edmison, and Messrs. Strike, Adams, and Hill in the Hall, North Monaghan. The umpires appointed were Miss Walsh, Mr. O'Brien and Mr. W. A. Stratton, B. A. Several gentlemen of the district were present and by the eager anxiety manifested during the proceedings might safely be set down as parents. Mr. Brumley was unanimously elected secretary and president. This office was not a sinecure as he deserves credit for his calm spirit during sundry storms. The umpires were kindly assisted over several streams of trouble with the well-behaved sentiments of Miss Walsh. Below will be found a list of the prizes awarded. On Dominion Day a splendid pic-nic was held in Wallis' Grove, Rev. Mr. Bennett, and Messrs. Brown, Stratton and McKee took part in the afternoon's exercises. There were competitive readings and recitations. A short shower of rain only cooled the air and gave an opportunity of putting a curb and over the war-hatchet—the spirit of rivalry. It is gratifying to see the people take such an active personal interest in educational affairs and that the teachers are not averse to extra labor and trouble. We would just remind the trustees that there is no greater incentive to work than encouragement in a tangible form represented in an increased salary. The following is a list of the successful pupils:

FOURTH CLASS.—Reading—Minnie Goodfellow; Spelling, Dictation, Agnes Cromie; Writing, Hetta McCall; Arithmetic, Hattie Davidson; Geography, H. Davidson and Priscilla Payne, equal; History, Z. McCall; Grammar, Hannah Laing and P. Payne equal; General Proficiency, Minnie Goodfellow.

The Day at Young's Point.

The good people at Young's Point celebrated the day by a Pic-nic with a programme of Athletic sports in charge of a Committee consisting of Messrs Wm. McFarlane, P. A. Karney, P. Young, and J. E. Karney. A large crowd from the adjacent county was assembled and a most successful celebration held, all being highly delighted with the sports provided and the manner in which they were carried out.

JUST WHAT WE THINK.

Dr. Franklin's maxim was a wise one:—"Nothing is cheap that you do not want," to which might be added:—"buy just what you want to get along with at first, as it is only by experience you can tell what will be the wants of yourself and family." If you spend all your money now, you will find you have purchased many things which are not actually needed, and have little money left to get many things which will surely be wanted. This for the heads of families to ponder on.

WE MAKE THESE REMARKS

in view of the possible BONANZAS just now offered to the public in the way of the so called Clearing Sales.

NOW IT STANDS TO REASON

—and the close observer and careful buyer will readily admit the truth of the statement—that if a stock of goods is purchased with a due perception of what the public need, and nothing imposed off over the counter in the regular course of every day trade, there will be no necessity for Clearing Sales. This is just the position we stand in to-day.

OUR STOCK IS REDUCED,

and we are glad to be able to say so. Still, we have a nice assortment of goods to meet the present wants of customers, but nothing to carry over until next season. We knew our stock was purchased at prices that could not BE BEATEN, and therein was the key to our success, and further, our prosperity is mainly due to the popularity we have attained among people everywhere on account of the excellent character of the goods, and the VERY REASONABLE PRICES at which we have offered them. Hence we shall advertise no

Fine Cattle.—Mr. Henry Collins, Reeve of North Monaghan, on Monday last sold to Mr. Johns, drover of Colborne, three very fine cattle. A handsome three years old steer weighed 1,360 lbs.; a cow, 1,320 lbs., and another fine lot of beef, 1,320.

A Golden Opportunity should never be neglected—therefore those requiring cheap, comfortable and durable wear for their feet should not fail to examine Mr. W. J. Remember the stock is all new and this season's goods, and is being offered at prices much below the present ruling wholesale figures. 29-tf Serious Accident.—Last Friday, as Mr. Ellis, of the Grand Junction, was driving in pursuance of his duties near Keene, his horse became frightened at some object, and bolting, threw him out of the buggy, breaking a bone of his right leg and inflicting serious internal injuries. Under care of Dr. Millar. Mr. Ellis is improving, but will be unable to attend to his duties for some time.

Remembrance.—The following address to the late Janitor of the Collegiate Institute sufficiently explains itself:—

"DEAR SIR,—We the teachers and pupils of the 3rd and 4th forms of the Peterborough Collegiate Institute, in consideration of your kindness and affability in the conducting of your duties while janitor, beg you to accept this clock, as a small token of our esteem; and hope that you may long be able to answer to its summons in health and prosperity. With kindest wishes to yourself and wife, we beg leave to remain. (Signed by pupils and teachers.)"

Andrews' Bazaar for July is at hand and fully equals any of its former brilliant numbers. In the present number is begun a series of valuable articles, entitled "Lessons in Art. Art Drawing;" also a new serial story, "Nathalie Rey," which promises to be the most striking production of its talented author, Geo. L. Catlin, U. S. Consul at Stuttgart, Germany. The little folks will find a feast in the charming fairy story, "The Pink Pearl," by the popular young authoress, Fannie Palmer. Aside from its literary contents, this number is peculiarly rich in fashion intelligence; the styles of Andrews' Bazaar are always in good taste. This splendid family journal is published at the low price of one dollar per annum, and every subscriber is presented free with 80 cents worth of Andrews Pinned Paper Fashions. Those of our readers who are unacquainted with this excellent magazine, should send 10 cents for sample copy to W. R. Andrews, Publisher, Tribune Building, New York.

An Unfounded Attack.—In the Review of last week appeared an article referring to the detention of the steamer Golden-Eye, by logs in the channel of the river near the locks, on the morning of the 29th ult., in which it was stated that the logs were Mr. Ullyott's logs, and that that gentleman was the only lumberman who ever allowed his logs to impede navigation. The Review say:—"Somehow or another the boat hands say none of the other drives ever obstruct the passage, but Mr. Ullyott does the same thing year after year." Mr. W. Brownscombe, the lockmaster, states to us that of all the lumbermen doing business on the river Mr. Ullyott is the most careful and considerate, and that the above statement is entirely false. When Mr. Ullyott's logs get into the channel last year, Mr. Brownscombe says, Mr. Ullyott came personally at 6 o'clock in the morning, and had the logs all locked through by seven o'clock in the morning. This year Messrs. Ullyott and Gilmour's logs were driving together, and an arrangement was made that the former's men should keep the channel clear by day and the latter's by night. Mr. Ullyott's men did their duty during the day, but Gilmour's men left work in the night, and hence the delay with the boat on the morning referred to. It is very unfair on the part of the Review to single Mr. Ullyott out for attack, as he is, as the lockmaster says, "the best man we have on the river." There is no question, however, that the impeding of navigation on these waters by logs is a serious matter. It is not only a serious loss to the proprietor of the boats, Mr. Calcutt, but to the public. We cannot expect to attract travel from the West towards Lindsay and Bobcaygeon if passengers are to report such detentions as occurred on the day referred to. It ought to be the duty of the Government to instruct the officer in charge of the navigation to proceed against any person by whom obstruction or unnecessary trouble is delayed on the boats, and many a specific fine or penalty should be attached to any person who so allows or causes trouble to be obstructed. We would suggest to Mr. Bolsdon, the intelligent officer of our inland maritime interests, that he should ask for instructions from the department in regard to such cases.

School Examinations.—The Intermediate Examinations in connection with the Collegiate Institute are in progress, in charge of Messrs. J. C. Brown, L. P. S., J. Burden and Mr. Parslow, of Port Hope.

Long v. Berry.—In this case, before Judge Dean, on Tuesday morning Mr. D. W. Dumble, counsel for defendant, moved for a new trial on the ground that the damages awarded were excessive and the verdict contrary to the evidence. A rule nisi was granted returnable on Friday.

Accident on the Railway.—Yesterday morning on the train for Lakefield was near Nassau mills, the engine ran into a cow on the track, with fatal consequences for the latter. The engine and baggage were thrown off the rails, and a delay of two hours occurred before the track could be cleared.

Waterworks.—Referring to our suggestion as to waterworks, after the recent fire, the Port Hope Times says:—"We would recommend his Worship Mayor Lundy to organize a Monster Pic-Nic from Peterboro' to Port Hope as an early day, when one of the features of the visit might be made a thorough test of our waterworks."

A Bad Smash.—On Tuesday morning, as the Messrs. English were engaged in removing a safe from the office formerly occupied by the law firm of Edmison & Wood to their premises corner George and Brock streets, they met with a rather sudden and unpleasant surprise. It appears that the supports of the sidewalk over the excavation in front of Mr. Lesh's lower store had been washed out. Not being aware of this, and supposing the sidewalk to be solid, the safe was lowered on the sidewalk, when suddenly the timber gave way, and the safe was dropped plump to terra firma taking the sidewalk with it. A young lad named Andet had a narrow escape from serious injury. After some trouble the safe was successfully removed. The broken sidewalk was repaired yesterday.

Extensive Shipment of Cattle.

Tuesday last was a pretty busy day for Mr. Doherty, the Market Clerk, who was engaged in weighing the cattle purchased by Mr. Johns, of the firm of Acker & Co., for shipment to the English market. The most extensive purchase was from the splendid herd of Mr. Joseph Redmond, of Otonabee, comprising thirty head of magnificent animals. The gross weight of these cattle was 62,160 pounds or an average of a trifle over 1,665 pounds per beast. One splendid animal turned the scales at 2,270 lbs., another weighed 2,240 lbs., and a third registered exactly one ton. These cattle are all thoroughbred Durhams, and are a superior lot in every respect. Notwithstanding the departure from Mr. Redmond's stables of more than twenty-one tons of live stock, Mr. R. has still left in his stables fifty-four head of first-class stock. On the same day Mr. Redmond sold to the same firm 132 fine sheep, which showed on the scales 1582 lbs. average weight. Mr Johns also purchased from the firm of Webber & Winch, fifty-four head of fat cattle, weighing 78,480 lbs., or an average weight of 1,540 lbs.; also an animal from Mr. Northcott, which weighed 1,460 lbs. These, with the cattle bought from Mr. Henry Collins, make the shipment 122,880 lbs. bought at a cost of between $6,000 and $7,000, and will make about six car loads.

NORWOOD NEWS.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

NORWOOD, July 6th.

MAGISTRATE'S COURT.—Kesleher vs. Breckenridge—Before Messrs Pearce and Humphries. It appears from the evidence that Kesleher and Wm. Breckenridge (the father of defendent) traded horses and that the horse Breckenridge parted with belonged to his son John. John, however, not being satisfied with the exchange, went to Kesleher's field and captured his own horse, which he mounted and started for home. Kesleher immediately started off in pursuit, and after an exciting race, his nag not being sufficiently fast, he abandoned the chase. He afterwards procured a warrant and had Breckenridge arrested on a charge of horse stealing. The Magistrates after hearing the evidence decided to dismiss the case with costs, amounting to $10.50. Kesleher, we believe, intends entering an action for trespass.

DIVISION COURT.—June 30th, His Honor Judge Dennistoun presiding. No cases of any importance.

DOMINION DAY WEDDINGS.—There were two weddings in town on Dominion Day. The first was a runaway couple from Alnwick, who were tied together in the usual manner. The other was a local affair. Mr. Fred. Copperthwaite was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Miss Mary Ellen Moffat, only remaining daughter of D. Moffat. Both ceremonies were performed by the Rev. Mr. Fotheringham.

FESTIVAL.—A pic-nic and strawberry festival under the auspices of the Methodist church, was held in Mr. Grover's grove on Dominion Day. The affair passed off pleasantly.

ATHLETICS.—The people of Norwood have every reason to be proud of the physical development of their young men. On Dominion Day our Mr. McKay went to Peterborough for the purpose of taking part in the various games. He succeeded in capturing the hundred yard race and silver medal, and made a very creditable record in the other events, considering his condition. Fred. Brennan, Archie Fowler and Chas. Wilson went to Warkworth to uphold the honor of our village. The 200 yard race, in which there were six competitors, was won easily by Brennan, who turned a somersault on crossing the score. Running long jump—nine competitors—1st, Brennan, 20 ft. 8 in.; 2nd, Fowler, 20 ft. 2 in. Running hop, step and jump—5 competitors—1st, Brennan, 41 ft. 1½ in.; 2nd, Fowler, 40 ft. 7 in. Three legged race—1st, Brennan and Fowler; 2nd, names not known. In the half-hour go-as-you-please there were five entries. The distance covered was 4½ miles. 1st, Berry; 2nd, Wilson—about twenty feet behind the winner. Wilson is only a boy of about fifteen, and shows unusually good staying powers. The figures given in the above jumps are reliable and can be vouched for by the judges, and as these are the only events in which our young men competed we have every reason to feel proud of their success.

AGRICULTURE.—An agricultural meeting was held in the Town Hall on Saturday. The result or object we have not yet learned.

BUILDING.—The Presbyterian sheds are now almost completed. These will be a great convenience to the country members of the congregation.

Cobourg.

TRAGIC FATALITY.—One of the saddest occurrences that has taken place within this district for some time past happened on Monday morning last between five and six o'clock. Thomas Connolly and Patrick Cushen, aged 16 and 14 respectively, met with a horrible death, being run over by a west bound freight train. Young Cushen was so frightfully mangled that he could not be recognized, parts of his body being picked up for some yards along the track. Connolly was not so badly mangled. He was struck on the head and it is supposed to have lived some time afterwards. The young fellows who were paid off last night, had indulged too freely in liquor, and are believed to have been lying on the track asleep about a mile above here. Coroner Ewing empannelled a jury to view the bodies this morning. The inquest was adjourned till 7 p. m. to morrow. Cushen was interred this afternoon and Connolly will be buried to-morrow.

Brighton Circuit.—Rev. R. J. Stobo, of Cobourg, says the Colborne Messenger, "has received a very hearty and unanimous call to the pastorate of the Peterborough Baptist church. He has not yet decided whether he will accept the call, and if he does it will be owing to a hope that a change will prove beneficial to his health, which has been very poorly of late. Rev. Mr. Stobo's relations with his church people are of such an agreeable nature as to render his contemplated departure a matter of deep regret to his congregation, who entertain for him a feeling of the deepest affection. Should he leave, the Baptist church here will loose a faithful and zealous pastor, and the town will regret the departure of a gentleman who is held in the highest esteem and regard by all who have the pleasure of his acquaintance." Rev. Mr. Stobo will occupy the Baptist pulpit here on Sunday next, and we believe there is no assurance of the call is confidently anticipated.

BOARD OF EDUCATION

Attendance Reports — Accounts — The Prayers Question—Secretary's Salary—Over-Working Pupils—Mr. Jeffers, Resignation, &c.

The Board of Education held a regular meeting on Tuesday evening. Present,—the Chairman, Mr. Stevenson and Messrs. Dumble, McClelland, Shaw, Deane, Cox, Rutherford, Carlyale, Wrighton, Menzies, Hughes and Best.

The minutes were read and confirmed.

In answer to an enquiry, the Secretary stated that the usual demand on the town for funds had been made.

Statements of attendance for the months of May and June were submitted, that for the latter month being as follows:

	On Roll.	Attendance.
Collegiate Institute	162	139
Central School	459	404
1st Ward School	190	167
2nd do	198	174
Auburn	67	31

A letter from Miss Becket was received enclosing a medical certificate and stating that, as she had been obliged to engage a substitute during her illness, a portion of the expense be defrayed by the Board.

Miss Dowling applied for a higher position in the schools, should any vacancy occur.

Miss Panton wrote requesting information whether she was the person mentioned in the report of Committee reducing salaries, as teacher of No. 2 form, and complaining, that if so, her salary should be reduced while doing exactly the same work as the mathematical master.

A letter from Mr. Jeffers was read giving the requisite three months notice of his intention to resign. He referred to his four years' connection with the school, and the harmonious relations which had always existed between himself and the members and officers of the Board. He could not promise, under the proposed new arrangements to maintain the same degree of efficiency, as had up to the present existed, and felt, therefore, compelled to resign his charge.

The following accounts were received, and referred to the Finance Committee with power to act:—Ormond & Walsh, $7.85; Wilson & Davis, $10.05; Toker & Co., $14.95; Times office $10.10.

The Chairman stated that he had given his bond to the Government for the delivery of the arms of the Institute cadets when required.

Mr. Rutherford drew attention to the excessive studies imposed upon young children who were punished by the overwork they were compelled to do. He thought there was no necessity for this system of cramming. He thought steps should be taken to lessen the studies.

Mr. Dumble was glad the subject had been brought up. He thought the whole system imposed too much pressure on the little ones. There was much complaint among parents concerning it and it was time the Board took some action to reduce the studies.

Mr. McClelland said the children came home with, in addition to other exercises, five or six difficult questions in arithmetic. They did not dare to go to school without the solutions and this led them to seek the aid of older pupils, by which they were induced to scheme, and derived no profit. He had good reason to believe that after the pupils had taken the labor of solving their exercises, the teachers often never looked over their solutions, but threw them into the waste basket.

Mr. Hughes said there were two sides to every question. He did not believe the children were overworked, and thought if they were to enquire among all the ratepayers they would find 19 out of 20 would rather have more than less studies. It was a complaint on the part of many that their children did not get along fast enough.

The Inspector, Mr. Jas. Stratton, was requested to give his views upon the matter. He said the subject was one of great importance, and he did not think it possible to offer any suggestion that would lead to a conclusion satisfactory to all parties. There were some people who were desirous of having more work and others who thought the children were getting too much. He could not pretend at once to decide to suit both parties. There was no doubt the extra work which was complained of was often forced on the teachers by the request of parents. Parents often enquired why their children were not getting more work to do at home. He was rather inclined to agree that it was possible that there was too much pressure imposed and that there were too many studies, especially for the younger pupils. He thought it would be better to have only one study assigned for a night, and to have that one subject thoroughly mastered by the pupil. In this way the pressure would be lessened and the scholar would be better able to explain his task intelligently. He thought it would be better that the matter should be referred to a Committee who would be best able to arrive at a means of coming to the best conclusion. Whatever decision might be there arrived at could then be carried out after the holidays. He thought that particularly in the hot months, fewer studies would be better, both for the health and progress of the children. Arithmetic particularly he considered ought not to be assigned to the younger children.

The Finance Committee, through Mr. Shaw, reported in reference to the application of Mr. W. A. Morrow, for increase of salary, that it was the desire of the Committee to decrease and not to increase expenses, but in consideration of the extra work imposed on the Secretary by the Department, they recommended an increase of $40 per annum to take effect at once.

The report was adopted.

Mr. Dumble, from the Committee on Prayer, said the form to be adopted had been referred to a sub-committee which had not yet reported.

Mr. Dumble moved, seconded by Mr. McClelland, that the communications of Mr. Jeffers, and Misses Darling and Panton be referred to the Committee on Appointments, to report to a special meeting of the Board to be called for that purpose.

Mr. Dumble said on investigation he had come to the conclusion that the work in the Institute could be crowded together and that they could get along with one less teacher.

Mr. Deane said he understood that question had been decided already on representation of the Principal that it was impossible to get along with any fewer teachers than at present.

Mr. Menzies moved in amendment, seconded by Mr. Denne, that the communication of Mr. Jeffers be laid on the table.

Mr. Rutherford said if we could dispense with a teacher from the Institute they should do so. He had no objection to let the matter go before a committee, and did not consider it was treating the Principal with courtesy to lay his communication on the table without action.

Mr. Dumble thought the amendment not courteous to the trustees. They had better tell them at once they did not want them, and give them a chance to get situations elsewhere. He thought it was for the Board to say whether they should have one less teacher or not. He thought it was better to pay fair salaries and let the teachers understand they must do more work.

Mr. Menzies disclaimed any intention of discourtesy to the teachers. He wanted to dispose of the matter finally. What was the use of taking the action they had done in March if it was not carried out.

Mr. Dumble said the object was to reduce expenses not to reduce salaries. Expenses had already been reduced by the increased income arising from the proficiency of the schools.

Mr. Hughes said the reason the step of reducing salaries was taken was because Mr. Jeffers had insisted that he could not do with one less teacher. Mr. Jeffers did not bring the school into existence, and he thought it was for the Board to say how many teachers they should employ. He believed they could dispense with one teacher in the Institute.

Mr. Carlyale would uphold the action already taken by the Board, but had no objection to the matter going to a committee.

Mr. Menzies said if they could dispense with a teacher and still carry out the former action of the Board they would effect a two-fold economy.

Mr. Cox—You would increase the work and decrease the salaries.

The amendment was lost.

Yeas — Messrs. Menzies, Best and Denne—3.

Nays—Messrs. Dumble, McClelland, Shaw, Cox, Wrighton, Rutherford, Carlyale, Hughes and the Chairman—9.

Mr. Rutherford moved, seconded by Mr Carlyale, that Messrs. Dumble, Hughes, Denne, Carlyale and the mover be a Committee to take into consideration the advisability of reducing the duties imposed on children after school hours.—Carried.

The Board then adjourned

CHAPTER III.

THE EMERALD NECKLET.

Sweet seventeen! Now it looks out of a cottage door, simple, happy, and unambitious, and dreams of some peaceful love and life in native valley; and now it bids adieu to a fashionable school, where every impulse of human nature has been drilled down to one monotonous level of composure; now it stands timidly touching, for the first time, the waters that divide two lives; and now before it opens a gorgeous vista of excitement, pomp, and pleasure in the world of wealth and rank.

To Beryl it brought none of these visions. There was, for her, neither the tranquility of rustic content nor the exulting pride of one who, by right divine of exceeding loveliness and patrician birth, was about to enter the enchanted circles of what is called "society."

Nevertheless, she had been invited to the coming of age of the heir of Templetowers, nephew of the present Baronet, who was childless; and if she was singularly thoughtful for her age, so, also, was she singularly romantic. As to what it would all be like, there was not, in her mind, the faintest idea.

Beryl absolutely refused to wear the dress which Stephen Quail had brought from Templetowers town—a sort of ethnic, made up in the fashion which, in a later time, came to be known as the 'Dolly Varden.'

'It would look like playing at shepherdess!' she said indignantly. 'Pray, Mr. Quail, am I to have a crook, and a broad straw hat with roses round it, and a dog, and you sit at my feet, and play the flute for me? No,' she added, turning to Anne Clayton; 'I will have white muslin, and we can make a window-curtain of this.'

She carried her point; and, when the eventful evening, arrived, stood before her companion, or guardian, or whatever she might be termed, arrayed in all the glory of a full-flowing tarletan and blue sash. Her sole ornament was a very small sprig of holly fastened in the bosom of her dress.

Anne Clayton looked at her, and sighed.

'A strange idea, child!' she said; but her eyes glowed with admiration of the beautiful picture before her.

Tall, fair, of slender, graceful and supple form, with pure blue eyes, and golden masses of hair falling in thick locks back from her white brow, a flush of animation on her face, and something of pride upon her petulant lips,—was this the child who had been reared in the grim and sordid atmosphere of Drury Lane?

'What is strange, Anne Clayton?' she enquired.

'Those green leaves and that red berry. Won't they make you look singular? Have you no better ornaments?'

'It is time to go,' replied Beryl. 'Cinderella's carriage ought to be at the door by this time.'

She ran up-stairs, with a laugh, and came down again, muffled to the chin in a woollen wrapper.

'Since Cinderella's carriage is not punctual, she went on, merrily, as if some secret cause of glee inspired her, 'the future Princess must walk.'

They set out. The snow lay white, dazzling, and crisp upon the ground. The tall elms and branching oaks were heavily laden with it. The heights of Templetowers glistened in the rays of the midnight moon. Loud bursts of music came, clear and brilliant, through the frosty air, and the young girl danced, rather than walked, along.

'Child! child!' the woman called after her, 'you must really tame yourself down. Remember, you are only to be there as looker-on.'

'Oh, I shall be quiet enough when we get there,' answered Beryl; 'especially when the young Prince comes to try on the glass slipper.'

She was quiet enough, indeed, when, having entered a side-door—an arrangement by no means approved of by her—she stood with her companion in a row of people who had been invited on similar terms with herself, and were ranged along the grand entrance-hall of Templetowers, with its Gothic walls and lofty groined roof, and pictures, and suits of armor, and antlered heads of deer.

They swept by,—dowagers in diamonds and plumes; youthful beauty in tiara and train, haughty and resplendant; stars, crosses, uniforms; fashion at its height; riches in their pride; but all calm, regulated, indifferent, as though such revelry and splendour were the merest every-day affair.

Yes; Beryl was very quiet now. She seemed scarcely to breathe. The scene surpassed her every imagination. It was like another state of existence. And her heart smote her, and her memory went back to the parent or friend of her childhood (she could not know how bitterly he had been her enemy), who had died in penury beneath the attic roof of a miserable Drury Lane lodging-house.

The wrapper had fallen from her head, but it lay upon her shoulders, and encircled her neck.

Presently Anne Clayton said, 'We will go into the great ball-room, and see the dancing. Young Mr. Evelyn—Percy Evelyn, Sir Percy's nephew—will open the ball with the Lady Geraldine Stuart, a distant cousin. Leave your wrapper in this room. The servants will take care of it.

Beryl followed her into the ball room, a vast hall, hung from ceiling to floor with heavy festoons of blue and gold silk. In a gallery at the further end, but concealed from view by a screen of exotic flowers, were stationed the musicians, who were just tuning-up for a quadrille.

At the head of the great room stood Percy Evelyn, with the Lady Geraldine Stuart on his arm.

Beryl had only seen the young man once before, when he was top-booted and clad in 'pink' and buckskin—a costume in which every man looks vulgar.

Now, when dressed as a gentleman, he had all the appearance of high breeding, and was strikingly handsome, though wanting, perhaps, in the dignity which belongs to maturer manhood.

The Lady Geraldine was a beautiful girl, about a year younger than himself, with a dark, proud countenance, eyes that flashed like the jewels on her neck and arms, and her skin smooth as the robe of French-white silk in which she was attired.

Suddenly Beryl heard a stifled cry, and, turning, saw Anne Clayton rising at her with a countenance full of fright and horror.

Encircling that pure white throat gleamed the rich radiance of the emeralds, with the cross of brilliants, which Beryl had discovered in the ebony coffer.

The slight cry the woman had uttered attracted no notice amid the clash of the music and the whirling of the dancers. With a violent effort, holding her hands to her breast, she controlled herself so as not to repeat the ejaculation, but for a moment or two appeared unable to speak. At length she said, in a whisper, 'Beryl, we must leave at once. Every minute we stay is dangerous. Beryl, if you have any affection for me——Ah, it is too late!'

For the young heir of Templetowers, who had already danced with many a buxom daughter of his father's tenants, and almost lifted a plump little dairymaid off her feet in endeavoring to teach her the art and mysteries of waltzing, as he sauntered round the room, caught sight of Beryl, recognised her as the maiden who had opened the gate for him, bowed low, and asked her hand for a dance.

But he, in his turn, fell back a step or two though the polish of his demeanour prevented any other expression of surprise. His eye had been caught by the jewels that flashed on Beryl's beautiful neck.

It was no longer the heir of Templetowers condescending to a young girl who inhabited the gate-lodge of Templetowers Park. It was a gentleman accosting a girl who an equal.

His reflections were, 'I am certain that this young girl would not wear any ornaments that she had picked up at random—it would be equivalent to a theft. How, then, did they come into her possession? And why did that woman look so haggard?'

'You are tired, Mr. Evelyn,' said Beryl, breaking off the dance; for he had fallen into a dream, and moved as if mechanically.

'Forgive me Miss Rutherford,' he answered, with a sudden recall of himself to things around him. 'I was thinking how much I should like to introduce you to my father.'

'He, Mr. Evelyn! I do not belong to the circle of his friends. Besides he is not here.'

'Not in the ball-room, but in that little cabinet apartment with the purple portieres. He is chained to his arm-chair by the gout—an old family friend of ours; yet he enjoys our amusements almost as if he took part in them. Do come with me; he has heard of you, but has never seen you! See, all the people are going away!'

'No, Mr. Evelyn. It would be an intrusion—an impertinence!'

'I entreat you, Beryl—Miss Rutherford!' he urged; and she passively allowed him to place her arm within his own, and make a way through the crowd towards the Baronet's sacred retreat.

At the curtained entrance he stopped, and his countenance betrayed every sign of extreme agitation.

'Will you be offended with me, Beryl,' he half-whispered, forgetting this time to apologise for the familiarity, 'if I make a strange request? Try to believe that I have a reason, which you yourself, did you know it, would be the first to respect.'

'Tell me what it is, Mr. Evelyn,' she replied 'I am sure you would not willingly affront me.'

'Not for my life!' he said, with a fervour that made her shrink. 'Take off that emerald necklet with the brilliant cross before you meet my father!'

'It is indeed a singular request,' she replied; 'but I will do as you desire.'

The young girl unclasped her necklet, and held in her hand the jewels, warm from her white throat.

'Where shall I put them?' she asked.

'Only to say that I leave Templetowers to-night, never to set foot in it again.'

Advice to Consumptives.

No man, however uncleanly, would drink muddy, dirty water. A party which occupies a room for hours, breathing the same air, might be compared to a party of bathers drinking the water in which they bathe. The patient must keep the window of his bedroom open. Night air is fresh air without daylight. In close, crowded rooms, the patient suffering from lung complaints breathes consumptively. By taking these precautions and using Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and Pleasant Purgative Pellets, fully one-half of the cases of lung complaints would be cured in six months. For cough and irritation of the lungs do not always indicate the presence of consumption although it may result in that disease, and if consumption has already become deeply seated in the system, this is the most efficient course of treatment that can be pursued outside of any institution that provides special facilities for the treatment of this disease. Dr. Pierce's celebrated Invalids' Hotel is such an institution. Send stamp for descriptive pamphlet containing also a complete treatise upon consumption, treating it, together with valuable hints concerning diet, clothing, exercise, etc., for consumptives. Address World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y.

Thomas' Eclectric Oil! Worth Ten Times its Weight in Gold. Do you know anything of it? If not, it is time you did

Pain cannot stay where it is used. It is the cheapest medicine ever made. One dose cures common SORE THROAT. One bottle has cured RHEUMATISM. Fifty cents' worth has cured an Old STANDING COUGH. One or two bottles cures bad cases of PILES or KIDNEY TROUBLES. Six to eight applications cure ANY CASE of EXCORIATED NIPPLES or INFLAMED BREAST. One bottle has cured LAME BACK of eight years standing. Daniel Plank, of Brookfield, Tioga County, Pa., says: "I went thirty miles for a bottle at your Oil, which affected a WONDERFUL CURE of a CROOKED LIMB, by six applications." —Another who had had ASTHMA for years, says:—"I have half a bottle left, and $100 would not buy it if I could get no more."— Rufus Robinson, of Nunda, N. Y., writes: "One small bottle of your ECLECTRIC OIL restored the voice where the person had not spoken above a whisper in FIVE YEARS."——Rev. J. Mallory, of Wyoming, N. Y., writes: Your ECLECTRIC OIL cured me of Bronchitis in one week."

It is composed of SIX OF THE BEST OILS THAT ARE KNOWN. It is as good for internal as for external use, and is believed to be immeasurably superior to anything ever made. Will save you much suffering and many dollars of expense.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS.—Ask for Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. See that the signature of S. N. Thomas is on the wrapper, and the names of Northrop & Lyman are blown in the bottle, and Take no other. Sold by all medicine dealers. Price 25 cents. NORTHROP & LYMAN, Toronto, Ont., Proprietors for the Dominion.

NOTE—Eclectric—Selected and Electrised.

The Most Valuable Gifts—Restoration of the Health.

During the past ten years the Great Shoshonees Remedy has faithfully redeemed every promise and guarantee made to the public. Alarming and apparently hopeless cases of Lung diseases, Dyspepsia, Liver Complaints, Afflictions of the Kidney and Chronic Complaints of every description, including Scrofula and Skin Diseases of life-long duration, have been permanently removed and eradicated. Those who volunteered their testimony to the efficacy of the Remedy are not begus people in sideboard-of localities in foreign countries, but respectable citizens of this country, easy of access and open to question, upon whose verbal recommendations we are willing to rest the reputation of the Great Shoshonees Remedy. If you are afflicted, do not delay until medicines may be powerless to aid you. No injurious effects can possibly follow the use of these Indian Remedies, as they contain no minerals, by which the fate of the invalid is so often sealed under the form of some temporary sedative or stimulant. These Indian Remedies are widely known and still possess the public confidence, after the lapse of sufficient time to test their efficacy.

The Shoshonees Vegetable Sugar Coated Pills have won for themselves the most favorable reputation of any pill before the public. Their efficacy has been fully proved as a remedy for billiousness, Sick Headache and inactivities of the stomach. Price of the Remedy in vial bottles, $1; Pills, 25 cents a box. Sold by all medicine dealers.

Joy Among the Children.

COPELAND'S SWEET CASTOR OIL, equally suitable for children and adults. Endorsed by over 600 doctors in Canada.

The difficulty of administrating nauseous medicines, and the desirability of having the pleasant to the taste, induced T. Copland to undertake research which resulted in the discovery of a Sweet Castor Oil, perfectly palatable, of the same strength and medical qualities as the ordinary Castor Oil, and while equally safe and immediate, yet acting with more certainty, and producing neither nausea nor griping. Some children say it is honey; others call it syrup—they all say they like it. One parent says—"My children drink it like water," another—"We had to hide the bottle or they could have finished it right off;" another—"My little girl has taken it twice without any trouble, and does not know what it is, though she hates the ordinary Castor Oil, and we could never get her to take it without a fight;" yet another—"I wish you success of your Sweet Castor Oil; it is a splendid thing—sure to take the place of all the common oil."

The extraordinary demand for this improvement on a staple household medicine has brought fraudulent imitations into the market, but the public can guard themselves against substitutes (which unprincipled parties are attempting to sell on the reputation of this article) by seeing that the name, "Copeland's Sweet Castor Oil," is on each and wrapper and direction label.

The undersigned having purchased Messrs. T. Copland & Co's interest in the above preparation, are now manufacturing it from the original recipe. NORTHROP & LYMAN, Toronto.

PETERBOROUGH, JULY 15, 1880.

THE VAGRANT COW.

If there is anything under the sun calculated to upset the equanimity of the most well-regulated citizen, and to destroy the most wholesome impressions of the previous Sunday's sermon, it is to get up in the morning and find his neighbor's cow placidly discussing the cabbage plants he had set out the evening before, or contentedly browsing from his choicest shrubbery. Unfortunately for the peace and happiness of those who delight in horticultural embellishment, the cow is not endowed with that peculiar faculty which enables that other vagrant, the goat, to thrive and grow fat upon a diet of old boots, scrap-iron, broken crockery and lobster cans,—the bovine stomach yearns for fresh vegetables, and, in fact, vegetation of every description, and is only appeased by a weak garden gate, a faulty fence, or such other facility as enables it to enjoy the sweetness of forbidden fruit. If one were to regard the existence of affairs as they are in Peterborough as a correct condition of things, one would be forced to the conclusion that it is the inalienable right of every ratepayer to allow his cows to run at large upon the streets, and that the aforesaid cows have the compensatory privilege of seeking in convenient gardens and from cherished shade trees the nourishment which the community owes them. Unfortunately, the owners of the property thus laid waste by the ravages of the bovine appetite for fresh vegetables, is not yet educated to that pitch of communistic philosophy which would lead them to recognise that society owes the vagrant cow a living, and the consequence is, much anxiety of mind at nights, wrath and profanity in the mornings, brickbats, boulders, and boot-jacks, with results highly unsatisfactory, equally to the owner of the garden and the cow usually found therein by the man who has the enterprise to get up early enough in the morning. Thus a conflict is engendered, which is in violent progress at this present, between the wandering bovines and the exasperated ratepayers, in which, so far, the cattle, protected by the apathy of the municipal authorities, seem to have the best of it. At all event when the field of battle is cleared away, the scene almost inevitably presents demolished shade trees, desolated cabbage beds, wrecked vineries, and ruined aspirations, while the moral aspect of the contrast afforded between the flushed, panting, and irate citizen as he nails fresh pickets on the fence or goes down town for a new hinge to his gate, and the serene placidity of the cow as she takes her departure amid a salute of verbal and substantial missiles, for pastures fresh and fields more green, is strikingly in favor of the cow. Not unnaturally, as the Press is the palladium of all our liberties, the citizen comes to us for protection, and on his behalf we have to say that it is highly desirable both for the tranquility of our homes, and the welfare of society, that this cow nuisance should be abated. On the whole we are of the opinion that the citizen is entitled to protection from the vagrant cow, and that the owner of the cow which is allowed to run at large upon the streets is an enemy of society and must be suppressed with a strong hand. Not only are private gardens ravaged and laid waste by these animals, but the shade trees with which the liberality and enterprise of our citizens seek to beautify and embellish the streets are ruthlessly destroyed, and the fruit of much labor and expense thrown away. It is within our knowledge that, finding repeated experiments in gates and fences unavailing against the superior enterprise and ingenuity of a cow which had a weakness for his shrubbery, a prominent citizen had actually to seek the owner of the animal and purchase it for the sacrificial knife of the butcher, to protect his garden from destruction. The destruction of shade trees has become so regular a proceeding that we are only led to wonder that any one should go to the trouble of planting them, while the cow is allowed to remain master of the situation. We seriously trust that the Council will take the matter up, and make some attempt to put a stop to the nuisance. It is not necessary to revive municipal feuds by the passage of a "cow by-law." An Ontario Act forbids the running at large of cows within half a mile of any railway track, and if that law were given effect here a complete remedy would be found. Let the Council pass a resolution authorising the clerk to pay a reward of 25 cents for each cow running at large to any person impounding the same, and we venture to predict that shade trees will soon be left to flourish unmolested, and the cultivators of flower and vegetable gardens allowed to enjoy slumbers undisturbed by apprehensions of what the morn may bring forth. The present would be a good time to inaugurate such a movement, as it would afford a healthful and remunerative occupation for the schoolboys during the holiday term, with the most gratifying and beneficial results for the community at large. We trust some Councillor who desires to earn the grateful regard of a long-suffering people will make an early move in the matter.

MESSRS. TURKEY & BILLINGS are often asked to sell their "Myrtle Navy" tobacco to retail dealers. They never in any case do so, and for the best of reasons. The wholesale trade of the country have a distributing machinery which handles the "Myrtle Navy" without any addition to its permanent expenses. If the manufacturers were to undertake that work as they would by selling to the retail trade, it would require an independent machinery, the whole cost of which would have to be borne by the proceeds of the tobacco sales, and of course it would fall upon the consumer. Selling to the wholesale trade alone is, therefore, for the consumer's interest, and it is a consideration to the retail trade, because every traveller who calls—in the grocery line—can take orders for "Myrtle Navy."

WANTED, A SIGN OF THE HUM.

Our citizens will recollect well the glowing promises of the autumn of 1878. Heaven-born orators like Messrs. Hilliard, Carnegie, and other pillars of the political temple, told the confiding people of this town and county that straightway on the return of the Tory party to power "Plenty with her golden horn" would bestow her choicest gifts with lavish hand upon a land suffering from Grit affliction, that wheat would be $1.25 per bush., oats 35 cents a bush., and the other fruit of the earth in like value,—that laboring men were to get $2.50 per day, and work would go begging to the hand of industry —that the splendid natural resources of Peterborough would at last be utilised—that Mr. Stevenson's machine shops, a silent reproach to Grit mis-rule, would speedily require new wings to accomodate the throng of busy mechanics who would be employed under the beneficial influence of the N. P.,—that the brickworks' smokestack no longer would gloom smokeless over a silent factory—that life, vigor, animation and prosperity would at once return to bless the labor and enterprise of our people. The people listened to the voice of these charmers, and they were placed in position to carry out their promises. The reins of Government were given into the hands of the Conservative leaders, the N. P. in all its glory was ushered in, the people accepted the burden of increased taxation, which they were told was essential to the highest prosperity, and waited with patience for the miracle to work. Two years of waiting are fast approaching completion, and patience becomes stale and the people weary of it. Has a single one of the promises of the fall of 1878 been fulfilled? Not one. The workmen lie idle at home or seek for employment in the neighboring republic. Instead of new accessions of an industrial population the mechanics we had are leaving us for foreign homes. The wheels of industry which were to be set in motion by the magic N. P. wand give not the slightest sign of life or action. The factories still remain idle and unoccupied, save by the silent machinery. Our glorious water privileges are still here, but the motive force which was to propel those industries which were to spring into existence with the Taxation Tariff, flows on upon the way of the Trent Valley Canal, and bears not upon its bosom the slightest sound of the "hum" which was to gladden the ears of the people. Of all the fair promises which were made to the people but one has been fulfilled. They agreed to increase the taxes of the consumers, and they have done so; but as to the hum, it has proved to be hum-bug, fraud, delusion. Prosperity has come to needy politicians, office-seekers and political pensioners, but to the people who pay for that peculiar kind of prosperity, nothing but taxes, taxes taxes.

ANOTHER HOLIDAY TOUR.

The announcement that Sir John Alexander Macdonald, Sir Charles Tupper, Hon. John Henry Pope, and Col. Dennis, of the Department of the Interior, have sailed for England, to be absent for two months, on business connected with the Pacific Railway and North West settlement gives naturally reason for surprise and enquiry. By the legislation of last session of the Dominion Parliament, Sir Alex. Galt was appointed Resident Canadian Minister to England, with the quasi status of an Ambassador, an official residence, a military aide-de-camp, and at a cost to the country of $15,000 a year. The reason advanced for making so extraordinary an appointment, on behalf of the Government, were that such an appointment would obviate the expense and inconvenience entailed by the frequent trips of Ministers to London and the consequent delay in public business at home occasioned through absence of the heads of Departments. Sir Alex. Galt was specially empowered, as a member of the Canadian Government, to conduct the business of the Dominion and to advise the Imperial Government on all questions involving Canadian interests, yet within a few months of his appointment, we find three Canadian Ministers on their way to England to conduct those very duties which the people of Canada pay Sir Alex. Galt 15,000 a year to perform. Clearly the Premier has either lost all confidence in Sir Alex Galt's fitness for his position, his ability to discharge them properly, or his trustworthiness, or it is necessary to admit that he was merely appointed for the purpose of finding an emolument for him, and possibly, as was intimated during the debate which took place in Parliament on the appointment, to get him out of the way. It is stated that one of the reasons which involved the visit of the trio of Ministers to England just now, is that they have received an offer from a syndicate of English capitalists to build the Pacific Railway, for the public domain in the North-West. The entertainment of such an offer by the Government will be watched with the most anxious concern. If the fertile lands of the North-West are to be handed over to land speculators, as is indicated, we may bid adieu to the hope of the rapid settlement and progress of that country which has already cost the older provinces of Canada so many millions of dollars, and the throwing open of which to settlement, on terms calculated to rapidly people the country and develop its resources, has been looked forward to as the means of giving an impulse to our national progress. From another point of view, this change of base on the part of the Government affords an interesting aspect. It is a complete acknowledgement of the utter failure of the Government policy announced last session. It is a confession, and the proof, that the specious arguments promulged by Sir John Macdonald to induce Parliament to vote down the offset of Hon. Mr. Blake to purpose the appropriating of ten millions of dollars in British Columbian dollars, were inducements hypocritical and false. Last session Sir John declared that the ten millions of the Government would discharge obligations, and would fully satisfy the claims of British Columbia, and that no further demands from the latter province would be made. Now without a very serious breach having been made upon the funds of the Syndicate, he is compelled to send three Ministers to England to negotiate for the construction of the Pacific Railway, and to ask for a further grant of public money. Such is the result of the Government's policy, and such the fulfilment of the promises made to the people. The people have to pay for the failure of the Government's policy, and the fulfilment of the promises made to the people, and they will have to pay for the new scheme of the Government, which is to be carried out by the three Ministers who have gone to England. The people have to pay for the failure of the Government's policy, and the fulfilment of the promises made to the people, and they will have to pay for the new scheme of the Government, which is to be carried out by the three Ministers who have gone to England. The people have to pay for the failure of the Government's policy, and the fulfilment of the promises made to the people, and they will have to pay for the new scheme of the Government, which is to be carried out by the three Ministers who have gone to England.

Deaf and Dumb Instruction.

MR. R. Mathison, Superintendent of the Ontario Institution for the Deaf and Dumb, is sending circulars to every county in Ontario, with a view of ascertaining the number of deaf mutes who have not been sent to the Institute, and who have never received any instruction. He has received replies from only about half the counties, and has definite information of 150 mutes still without the benefits of an education so generously provided for them by the Government. Mr. Mathison believes there are not less than 300 such persons in the Province, and intends to use every means possible to induce their parents, guardians, &c. to send them to the Institute. It is probable that when all the mutes of Ontario are under instruction, there will be fully five hundred attending the Provincial Institution. There are at present only 237 under instruction. All deaf mutes between the age of seven and twenty, not being deficient in intellect, and free from contagious diseases, who are bona fide residents of the Province will be admitted as pupils. The regular term of instruction is seven years, with a vacation of nearly three months during the summer of each year. Parents, guardians or friends who are able to pay, are charged the sum of $50 per year for board. Tuition, books and medical attendance are furnished free. Deaf-mutes whose parents, guardians or friends are unable to pay the amount charged for board will be admitted free. Clothing must be furnished by parents or friends, except in the cases of indigent orphans, who are clothed by the Province. The trades of carpentering, cabinet-making and shoemaking are taught to the boys; the female pupils are instructed in general domestic work, sewing, knitting, the use of the sewing-machine, and such ornamental and fancy work as may be desirable. It is to be hoped that all will take advantage of the Institution.

Peterborough Presbytery.

At the regular quarterly meeting of the Peterborough Presbytery held at Millbrook on the 6th inst. there were present Rev. Messrs. Hodnett, (Moderator,) Clelland, Ewing, Windell, Smith, Andrews, Bennett, R. J. Beattie, Bell, McWilliams, Ballantine, F. R. Beattie, Clarke, Sutherland, Cameron and McFarlane, and the following Elders.—Messrs John Hoey, Peter McNeil, D. Morrison, J. Carnagie, J. Kerr and W. Mann.

After the confirmation of the minutes of the previous meeting, Rev. Mr. Clarke was chosen Moderator. An application to be received as a Minister from Rev. Peter Flemming, of the Episcopal Methodist Church, was referred to committee, who recommended communication with the Lindsay Presbytery before taking action, and the application was laid on the table till next meeting. The transfer of the Blairton mission from Kinyston to Peterborough Presbytery was read. Rev. F. R. Beattie, Rev. J. R. Beattie, Rev. Mr. Andrews and Rev. Mr. Bennett were added to the Home Mission Committee, and Rev. F. R. Beattie appointed to visit the Round Lake Mission, and Rev. Messrs. Andrews and Bennett those on Burleigh Road. A resolution was adopted instructing the Home Mission Committee to have printed for the information of the January and June meetings of the Presbytery, full reports of the work under their charge. The following motion by Rev. Mr. Bell was carried:—That in accordance with the regulations contained in the book of forms laid down as a guide for the office bearers of the Church, the Presbytery agree to establish a system of congregational visitation—to stimulate the work of Church and to give counsel and help to ministers and people." The next meeting of the Presbytery will be held in Cobourg on Tuesday, Sept. 28th inst.

Interest on Mortgages — The Change in the Law.

The following is the new act relating to interest on moneys secured by mortgage of real estate, assented to 7th May, 1880:—

Whereas it is expedient to make certain provisions concerning interest on moneys secured by mortgage of real estate; therefore her Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate and House of Commons of Canada enacts as follows:

1. Whenever any principal money or interest secured by mortgage of real estate is by the same made payable on the sinking fund plan, or on any plan under which the payments of principal money nd interest are blended, or on any plan which involves an allowance of interest on stipulated repayments, no interest whatever shall be chargeable, payable or recoverable, on any part of the principal money advanced, unless the mortgage contains a statement showing the amount of such principal money and the rate of interest chargeable thereon calculated yearly or half-yearly, not in advance.

2. Whenever the rate of interest shown in the statement referred to in the next preceding section is less than than the rate of interest which would be chargeable by virtue of any other provision, calculation or stipulation in the mortgage, no greater rate of interest shall be chargeable, payable or recoverable on the principal money advanced than the rate shown in the said statement.

3 No fine or penalty or rate of interest shall be stipulated for, taken, reserved or exacted on any arrear of principal or interest which shall have the effect of increasing the charge on any such arrear beyond the rate of interest payable on principal money not in arrear: Provided always that nothing in this section contained shall have the effect of prohibiting a contract for the payment of interest on arrears of interest or principal at any rate not greater than the rate payable on principal money not in arrear.

4. In case any sum is paid on account of any interest, fine or penalty not chargeable, payable or recoverable under the foregoing sections, such sums may be recovered back or deducted from any other interest, fine or penalty chargeable, payable or recoverable on the principal.

5. Whenever any principal money or interest secured by mortgage of real estate is not, under the terms of the mortgage, payable till a time more than five years after the date of the mortgage then in case at any time after the expiration of such five years, any person liable to pay or entitled to redeem the mortgage, tenders or pays to the person entitled to receive the money, the amount due for principal money, and interest to the time of payment as calculated under the foregoing sections, together with three months' further interest in lieu of notice, no further interest shall be chargeable, payable or recoverable at any time thereafter on the principal money or interest due under the mortgage.

9. This act shall apply to all moneys secured by mortgage on real estate executed after the first day of July, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and eighty.

PETERBOROUGH, JULY 15, 1880.

ENCOURAGEMENT OF PAUPER IMMIGRATION.

The Ottawa Citizen, pocket organ of Hon. J. H. Pope, comes thus to the defence of the section of the government in connection with their proposed advance from the public funds to enable 3,000 laborers to obtain employment on the Canadian Pacific Railway:

"Now, the exercise of a little common sense might have shown that there need have been no very great risk in the operation, supposing it to have been entered upon and carried through with mere ordinary prudence. Imposing whiskey to be rigidly excluded from the vicinity of the various works, and this we believe the Government is prepared to enforce, a man in good health should be able with ease to repay the cost of his passage from Quebec in two months at the outside. Taking it for granted which we have a right to expect, that the men would agree beforehand to repay in two or three months, and that the contractors would act with common decency and fairness in the matter, there should be but little trouble in securing the repayment at an early date of all but an accidental fraction or two of the sum advanced."

The Citizen loses sight entirely of the just ground of complaint raised against the Government for the policy adopted in this matter. It is quite possible that the Government might be recouped by railway contractors from the wages of the men, though it is still more likely that men brought out under such conditions, would take the earliest opportunity of evading payment by leaving for the United States—at least such was the experience of the Citizen itself a few years ago when its proprietor imported English printers to take the place of his Canadian employees, at lower wages, advancing their fares to be repaid from wages. However, that is not the point at all. We have pointed out that there are fully three thousand unemployed laborers in Canadian cities, who would be most anxious to go west to get employment on the C. P. R., if they had the means of doing so. These men have for years, for the most part, been paying taxes into the public treasury; many of them are eating up the little accumulations of earnings they had been able to save before the N. P. came into operation. When at Ottawa some of this class applied to Sir John for aid to go West for work, they were told that the Government had no power to grant such aid. Now, we contend that so long as there is a single industrious unemployed man in Canada, who is willing to accept employment on the same terms as the Citizen says are given to these English navvies, it is an outrage that they and their families should be left to starve or to dependence on municipal charities, while the public money, to which they have helped to contribute, is used in extending loans to British pauper labor. Charity should begin at home—in this case if ever.

Just received at Hall, Innes & Co's, over 3000 yards of All Wool Canadian Tweeds from one of the Leading Manufactories. If you want anything in this Line call in and see them.

MEETING AT KEENE.

There are some persons whose ears are so long that the air to them is always thick with rumours. With this special facility for gathering in the signs of things to come, the gentleman who does the misleading articles for the Review, has been troubled for a short time past with violent premonitions of a meeting to be called at Keene, by Mr. Blezard M. P. P., at which both Conservatives and Reformers were to be invited. Our confrere is, so to speak, thirsting for the gore of the obnoxious "Grit," and wants somebody to hold him for fear he may do Mr. Blezard's political reputation grevious harm. In order to gratify the bellicose humor of the writer of the Review, Mr. Blezard, we are permitted to announce, intends calling such a meeting as our contemporary desires, at Keene, at the earliest date that will suit the convenience of the farmers—probably about the latter end of the next month. The date will be announced in due course, and every facility afforded for the gratification of the Review writer's evident desire to be let loose upon the member for the East Riding. This timely notice is given in order that the Review orator may have ample time to get up and rehearse his piece, so as to be enabled to give it with the best possible effect, and with all the appearance of forensic talent. We trust that the mouth of the local Tory party will not find it necessary to furbish up the old speech which was heard so often last year that the schoolboys have got it by heart, and that it will give the people the views of the Conservative party in Peterborough county, upon the ($10,000,000 expenditure in the Fraser river gorges, the quarter of a million for an Esquimalt graining dock, and, more especially, what it thinks of the action taken by the Premier last session, through the member for Algoma, to cheat the Province of Ontario out of the territory awarded to it by the North-West Boundary Commission. We might suggest other headings for the occasion, but concerning these subjects particularly, the electors generally are anxious to be enlightened.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

IN THE CONFIDENCE expressed by the Government, in the continual support of their policy by public opinion, only simulated after all? It looks very much like it—else why the incomprehensible delay in issuing the lists for new elections in the three vacant constituencies of North Ontario, West Toronto, and Selkirk, and in making the appointment of Hon. John O'Connor to the Manitoba Judgeship, long ago settled on, and which would create a vacancy in Russell?

"PROTECTION TO OUR STRUGGLING INDUSTRIES" was the motto of the N.P. advocates in 1878, and nowhere were there more active or energetic supporters than were Messrs. T. W. Currier and A. Fleck, of the city of Ottawa, in the general elections of that year. Not long since the extensive furniture, sash, door and blind factory of Messrs. Currier & Co. at the capital was closed down, and a few days since Mr. Fleck's foundry and machine shops was also closed. Those gentlemen are by no means the only victims of the delusion that riches could be legislated into the people's pockets, who have had their eyes opened by unpleasant experience of a similar nature.

THE MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE is away to England, probably to distribute some of his celebrated pamphlets inviting the emigrants of the old country to go to Dakota, and the Deputy-Minister is doubling his salary on the Civil Service Commission. The Postmaster-General is "inspecting the Pacific Railway" in Manitoba, and the Secretary of the Department is also engaged on the Civil Service Commission. The Departments are left to run themselves, it appears, though probably the second-class clerks are able to manage the public business quite as efficiently as any of the absent officials.

A DEPUTATION from the City of Montreal Council, consisting of Aldermen Hood, Greece, Allbord and Laurent, and another from the Montreal Harbour Commissioners, comprising Messrs Andrew Robertson, Bulmer, McLennan, and J. B. Rolland, will arrive here to-day, and proceed to Lindsay, Fenelon Falls, Coboconck and Midland City, in charge of Trent Valley Canal Committee, to make a personal inspection of the proposed Trent Valley Canal route. The Montreal Board of Trade and City Council have already expressed their approval of the scheme from a commercial point of view, and it is hoped to enlist their active co-operation in behalf of the enterprise.

IN ANOTHER column will be found the first of a series of letters, which we have been permitted to publish, giving a graphic and unvarnished account of the experience of a settler on his way to, and after his arrival at and departure from, Winnipeg. The writer, Mr. Edward Calcutt, formerly of Ashburnham, will not be accused of any leaning towards "Gritism," and we venture to draw the attention of the Review to this suggestive extract from the letter: "Arriving at "St. Vincent WE PUT OFF MOST OF OUR PASSENGERS FOR DAKOTA." We may safely leave the natural comments to the reader.

SAYS THE Port Hope Times:—"The Hon. John Beverley Robinson is gazetted Lieut.-Governor of the Province of Ontario. The appointment is not quite to our liking, or calculated to strengthen Sir John's reputation for choosing the best incumbent for a vacant office." Coming from so pronounced and influential a Conservative organ as the Times, this simple expression of disapproval speaks volumes. The fact is, however, that Sir John is not always at liberty to refer the subject of appointments to his own judgment. Resorting to questionable instruments and questionable means of securing political ends, he is not always able to refuse the demands of the instruments he has used. As with T. C. Patterson, and the Toronto post office, so with the Northern Railway milkman—Sir John did not like to make the appointment; but he dare not refuse.

MOST OF THE Reform journals agree in questioning the propriety of putting into the second position in Toronto University, with the reversion of the Presidency, a young and comparatively inexperienced person, for the reason, apparently, that he is an old-countryman. The fact that the new Vice-President is young, or that he is an Englishman, is not in itself a crime, nor could any objection be raised on that account if the material were not available in our midst; but as long as we have at home scholars of ripe experience, matured judgement, recognized ability and profound acquirements, we cannot approve of going abroad to seek talent to fill places which are the legitimate and proper ambition of those of our own people who have the proper qualifications to fill them. We cannot admit that there is anything in the air of this Canada of ours which prevents the attainment of as full intellectual stature as obtains anywhere, nor do we believe that the average of natural ability among our students is any lower than may be found elsewhere. If among all the graduates who hail from Toronto University as their alma mater, we cannot find many qualified to fill with credit the various chairs which may from time to time become vacant, then the University has not been doing the work for which it exists, and which we believe it is doing in a thorough and effectual manner. Moreover it is a poor incentive to scholarly attainment, on the part of our students, if they find the avenues to the highest distinction closed to them.

A Cooler Suspended.

The London Advertiser of the 13th says:—A rumor slowly passed from mouth to mouth last night that a very sudden and perhaps altogether unexpected convulsion in the quiet order of things had happened at the County goal. It appears that the irregularities which were some time ago alluded to in the columns of this paper were reported to the Government. The jailer had been charged with suspending the strict rules of prison discipline on several occasions, and in a considerable way. He was accused of over-stepping his authority when there was no reasonable pretext for his doing so. Perhaps the most glaring violation of rules was the opening of cell doors, admitting the wives of prisoners and allowing them to remain in the cells with their husbands all night. Such an extraordinary relaxation of rigid prison rules had never been heard of before.

Yesterday Mr. J. W. Langmuir arrived in the city. Soon after he visited the goal, commenced Mr. Lamb inter his presence and demanded the keys of the institution. Last night the office of gaoler was merged in that of the Sheriff, and will remain so until Mr. Lamb is reinstated or his successor appointed.

The Irish Question.

THE TENANT CONFEDERATION BILL.

Opposition to the government BILL—An amendment by Mr. Gladstone—representation of the House of Lords—A crisis apparent.

LONDON, July 13th.

In the House of Commons this evening Mr. Gladstone said the Government intended to confine themselves in regard to the ballot to the simple continuance of the existing Act, abandoning the Irish Borough Franchise Bill. All other Government bills will be persevered with. Mr. Gladstone stated he hoped that there would be no reason for Parliament to sit into September. He said he thought the necessary business could be finished before the last week of August. The motion was agreed to.

Mr. Gladstone gave notice of an amendment to Mr. Forster's Compensation for Disturbance Bill so that the last clause shall read as follows:—

And the tenant shall be entitled to compensation in the discretion of the County Court judge, if non-payment of rent is caused by prevailing distress, and the tenant is willing to continue in occupation upon reasonable terms as to rent, arrears of rent, and otherwise, and if such terms are refused by the landlord without a reasonable alternative.

A London correspondent says:—I believe the chief subject for consideration at last Saturday's Cabinet Council was the Irish Compensation Bill, and that three courses were discussed depending upon contingencies which are foreseen. If the Bill is defeated on its second reading Mr. Forster may feel bound to resign from the Chief Secretaryship for Ireland, but the Government would accept the situation and not attempt to renew the measure. If the Bill is passed by a narrow majority it would become a question for serious consideration whether it would be better to withdraw it, or submit it to certain defeat in the House of Lords. The Government by modifying the Attorney-General's amendment can regain the support of Irish members, and the Bill might go to the Lords backed by such a majority as would render their responsibility in rejecting it very grave.

The whole 3000 yds. of Canadian Tweed just received from one of the leading Manufactories, must be cleared out before the 1st August, to give place for Fall Goods, at Hall, Innes & Co's.

12th July Celebration.

Monday last, for a 12th of July, was a remarkably quiet day for Peterborough the various lodges of the town and vicinity joining in the grand celebration at Cobourg. In the morning the Orangemen met at their Hall, Water street, where a procession consisting of lodges Nos. 49 and 80, and the O. Y. B's, and True Blues, was formed, headed by the Fire Brigade band in full strength. The procession made the route of the principal streets, and embarked on the cars of the Midland Excursion Train, which took them direct through to Cobourg. After reception by the Cobourg and surrounding lodges, a procession was formed as follows:

Port Hope Band.
County of East Durham
Peterborough Band.
County of West Peterborough.
Band.
County of East Peterborough.
Cobourg Band.
County of Northumberland.

After a parade through the principal streets, the procession was broken up for dinner. At two o'clock the procession was reformed and the way taken to the Agricultural grounds where addresses were delivered by Brother Cochrane, County Master and Warden of the United Counties; Bro. Evan, D.M., Port Hope; Bro. Weir, C. M., West Peterborough; Bro. Butler, D. G. M. of O. Y. B.; Bro. Henderson, representative of the "Prentice Boys, and others. The bands varied the proceedings with some choice selections. It should be remembered that by request the Peterborough Band remained in the town to edify the people of the ancient burgh. The return home was accomplished in good time, the train arriving at 9 o'clock. After their arrival here a procession was formed marching from the station to the Orange Hall, where three cheers were heartily given for the Queen, the band concluding the day's proceedings by playing the National Anthem.

School Examination.

The mid-summer public Examination of School Sec. No. 1 Smith was held on July 7th, there being present a very fair attendance of visitors. The examination was ably conducted by the teacher, Mr. Metcalfe, assisted by Mr. Hill. The chair was occupied by Mr. Middleton. The answers elicited from the pupils in the various subjects taken up were very satisfactory, showing a previous thorough training. The reading was particularly good, and many very excellent recitations were gone over. Mr. Metcalfe, who I understand is giving up teaching for the present, may well be proud of the condition in which he leaves his school and of the high esteem in which he is regarded by the section at large. After the programme, which was lengthy, had been gone through, the pupils were placed in an orderly manner in the aisles by the Trustees and the following address was read by one of the pupils:—

DEAR TEACHER,—Now that our examination is well concluded by you, has drawn to a close, and we as pupils and you as teacher soon must part very likely never to meet again in the same capacity, we feel it our duty in love and regard to offer you this our parting address. You know our youthful hearts are now full of mirth and glee in hope of the happy days we expect to enjoy during the weeks of vacation; but, no doubt, when we return to look upon these old familiar desks and think of days gone by, we will then begin to feel the loss we to-day sustain. We earnestly hope, however, that our loss will in every respect be your gain, and that you will always remember us and call to see us when convenient. Though we cannot expect in future to hear your kind and thoughtful words, we can remember the way and manner in which you taught and influenced our youthful minds. Our most sincere wish is that the influences you exerted over us in the day school as Teacher, and in the Sabbath School as Superintendent, may remain with us in all our pathways in life. And now in compliance with the wishes of our parents and the feelings and approbation of the whole school, we present you with these presents, in token, a purse and an album, which we hope you will keep as a memorial of your pupils. You have to-day our best wishes for your future happiness and useful life. We will now in conclusion bid you a kind good-bye, and should we never all chance to meet you here, we hope to meet you on yon bright and happy shore to which we are all fast hastening." Mr. Metcalfe at the close of the address made a suitable and touching reply.

South Dummer.

(From Our own Correspondent.)

PICNIC AND PRESENTATION.—A picnic was held in Mr. Lynch's Grove, at the close of the school term between South Dummer school and Section No. One, Dummer. The day was fine and a large number of people assembled at the grove, where provision had been made for amusing the young people in the way of swinging and such like. The older people were well entertained by some friends of the vicinity and the pupils, who rendered quite a programme of music in good style. Before separating, Mr. Kidd, Teacher of South Dummer school, was presented with a beautiful Photograph Album which was given by his pupils. The following address was read to Mr. Kidd.—

ADDRESS.

Mr. R. J. Kidd.

HONORED AND BELOVED TEACHER,—We cannot allow you to say good-bye without first giving you a token, however small, of our love and regard for you. For nearly three years you have instructed us most faithfully, and governed us, not with the rod, but with love and firmness combined. Sorry, indeed, are we that your health has failed, but hope and pray that by the blessing of God on the means employed your health may rapidly be restored, so that soon you may return to your approbative school. But should kind Heaven order it otherwise, be assured we will ever remember you with pleasure. And now, dear teacher, please accept this album from your pupils as a small memorial of appreciation and affection, and should we never be permitted to associate together as teacher and scholars, O, may we at least meet together in Heaven's grand home gathering, never more to take the parting hand or say a long farewell.

Plainville.

DEPLORABLE ACCIDENT.—We regret to announce a sad accident which befell Mr. Thos. West, of Plainville, on Friday last. Mr. West got into a cherry tree for the purpose of securing some fruit, when the limb broke and he was precipitated to the ground. He sustained an injury to the spine, not fracture, but such a concussion as resulted in paralysis.

Emismore.

VITAL STATISTICS.—During the six months ending on the 30th day of June, there has been registered for this Division Births, 12; Marriages, 3; and Deaths, 9: two of which have reached a long age, first Mrs. Mary Killin, mother-in-law to Timothy Murphy Esq., who came into this township with the first settlement, and have seen the forest taken place of by fertile fields and comfortable homesteads attained the good old age of 90 years. Another worthy of passing remark is Mrs. Agnes Lawes relict of late William Lawes who settled near the boundary of Emily nearly half a century ago; who lived to see fruitful fields, pleasant valleys, and happy homes take the place of the forest whose only occupant was the Indian and wild beast. For a number of years previous to her death, which took place on the 14th day of March, at the age of 88 years, she resided with her son-in-law, David Cooly, Esq., lot 1, con. 1., Ennismore. One noticeable fact of sons, daughters, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren—of which there is a large number—she requested that six of her grandsons be her pall-bearers which was fulfilled, 4 out of the six being married and having families. Our old landmarks are wearing away one after another.—COM

CROPS.—The crops on the whole look very well, particularly barley and peas; but the spring wheat in some places is rusted badly. The farmers have now commenced cutting their hay, which has been damaged considerably by the heavy raine.

BRICKMAKING.—Mr. Thomas Welch is now doing a rushing business in brick-making. Passing by there at times you may see bricks being moulded, burned and loaded at the same time.

HEAVY STORMS.—Two very heavy hail and rain storms passed over here lately, testing Mr. Spilsbury's newly-plastered house.

PIC-NIC.—A private pic-nic was held at Savigney's Landing on July 7th to which quite a number of people gathered from different parts. A very pleasant time was spent during the afternoon and evening after which the participants dispersed, some of them not arriving home until the "wee sma hours."

ROAD IMPROVEMENTS.—The County Council have wisely expended a sum of money on the road just below the school house, which is a great boon to those who have occasion to travel that way.

ACCIDENT.—While Mr. John Shaughnessy was removing some stumps one day lately, one of them fell, and, striking him on the side, broke one of his ribs.

SEA SERPENT.—We are glad to inform our readers that the two young ladies who went into hysterics at the sight of the sea serpent seen at Robertson's Landing one evening lately, are rapidly becoming convalescent.

JUST WHAT WE THINK.

Dr. Franklin's maxim was a wise one:—"Nothing is cheap that you do not want," to which might be added:—"nor just what you want to get along with at first, as it is only by experience you can tell what will be the wants of yourself and family." If you spend all your money now, you will find you have purchased many things which are not actually needed, and have little money left to get many things which will surely be wanted. This for the heads of families to ponder on.

WE MAKE THESE REMARKS

in view of the possible BONANZAS just now offered to the public in the way of the so called Clearing Sales.

NOW IT STANDS TO REASON

—and the close observer and careful buyer will readily admit the truth of the statement:—that if a stock of goods is purchased with a due perception of what the public need, and disposed of over the counter in the regular course of every day trade, there will be no necessity for Clearing Sales. This is just the position we stand in to-day.

OUR STOCK IS REDUCED,

and we are glad to be able to say so. Still, we have a nice assortment of goods to meet the present wants of customers, but nothing to carry over until next season. We know our stock was purchased at prices that could not BE BEATEN, and therein was the key to our success, and further, our prosperity is mainly due to the popularity we have attained among people everywhere on account of the excellent character of the goods, and the VERY REASONABLE PRICES at which we have offered them. Hence we shall advertise no

Young's Point Improvements.—Mr. Geo. J. Chalmers, of Young's Point, has been awarded the contract for the construction of piers in connection with the locks there, by the Ontario Government. Mr. Chalmers has commenced the work and is progressing rapidly.

Personal.—We regret to learn that Mr. S H Dewart, of Norwood, is so ill that Dr. Dewart of Toronto was telegraphed for on Tuesday evening and passed through here on Wednesday on his way to Norwood. The many friends of Mr. Dewart earnestly wish for his speedy recovery.

Change of Business.—Mr. T. Esterbrook, late of Cannington, and formerly of Toronto, has purchased the business of Mr. R. Thompson & Son, Photographers, and will continue the business at the old stand, George street. Mr. Esterbrook brings an excellent reputation as a first-class artist.

The Town Clock.—Mr. Joseph McClelland, caretaker of the town clock, has been engaged during the past two weeks in thoroughly readjusting the weights and mechanism, lessing the strain of the wire rope, suspending the weight, and otherwise placing the time-keeping machine in the best possible order.

Midland Railway of Canada.—Traffic receipts for week ending July 7th, 1880, were:—Passengers and mails, $2,236.56; freight, $6,268.87; total for week, $8,504.73. For the corresponding week in 1879.—Passengers and mails, $2,235.35; freight, $3,468.39; total for week, $4,753.95.—Increase, $1,843.78. Aggregate from 1st of January, 1880, $144,579.69. Increase over 1879, $42,977.56.

Trip to the Sea-shore.—The following comprised the party which left town last Thursday for Old Orchard Beach, to spend a few weeks at the seaside:—Mr. and Mrs. John Bertram and family, Mr. and Mrs. T. Bradburn and family, Mrs. W. G. Ferguson, Mrs. Robt. Hall, Mr. Adam and Miss Florence Hall, Miss Cochrane, of Lakefield, and Miss Nichols, daughter of W. C. Nichols, Esq.

A Golden Opportunity should never be neglected—therefore those requiring cheap, comfortable and durable wear for their feet should not fail to examine Mr. W J. Larmour's stock, previous to the closing of his great clearing sale of imported and ready-made work. Remember the stock is all new and this season's goods, and is being offered at prices much below the present ruling wholesale figures. 32-tf

Cheese Market.—The usual semi-monthly cheese market was held at the drill shed here on Tuesday afternoon. There were ten cheese factories represented, and 84 cents per pound was asked. Buyers being scarce and dubious on account of the heat, the sellers determined to hold over for another fortnight, till the next regular market, when there will be about six car-loads ready for shipment.

Fire Protection.—The Chief of the Fire Brigade having applied for new suction hose for the steam fire engine, the Town Clerk has been instructed to ascertain the price of cotton suction hose, from Messrs. Blackwood, of Toronto. The suction hose are wanted very badly indeed, and should be got at once. They would probably be procured from the manufacturer of the engine in shorter time and more conveniently than otherwise.

Another Citizen Gone.—On Thursday of last week, Mr. Archie Moffat, long and favorably known in our midst, left Peterborough for Winnipeg having accepted an engagement with John Ashworth & Co., the extensive hardware dealers of the prairie city. On it becoming known that Mr. Moffat was about leaving, a few of his friends—joined together and purchased a handsome gold albert chain and locket, which, with a suitable address, were presented to him previous to his departure.

The Flood.—The rain of Monday afternoon last was the most violent that has visited this section for some time. The water poured down in torrents and flooded the streets. Cellars in George street held five and six feet of water when the rain was over. At Mr. Lett's lower store, the side of the street was washed in and the water poured into the excavation like a miniature falls of Niagara. The sidewalk was undermined, and required the assistance of the corporation gang, under the superintendance of Mr. Beavis, for repairs.

PERSONAL.

—Judge Dartnell returned home on Friday last.

—Mr. D. A. McDonald, of the Point St. Charles saw mill, is recovering from a severe illness.

—We have to acknowledge receipt of Glasgow papers from Mr. Alex. Elliott, of the firm of Rush & Elliott.

TRENT NAVIGATION.

Owing to the placing of brackets on a private dam at Young's Point last week low water was caused in the river below here. The owners of the dam were notified to remove them by the Superintendent, Mr. Belcher, but have neglected to do so. It seems that it will be necessary for vessel owners and lumbermen to complain to the Department of Injury by the interference with navigation before steps can be taken to force the removal of the brackets. On Monday Mr. Colaghan's man removed the brackets at Hastings, thus empowering the want of water in the river. Mr. Belcher subsequently left Mr. Colaghan, the man in charge, to put the brackets on at once, which was done. Colaghan will be subject to a fine of $200 for removal of the brackets. It appears that there is abundance of reserve water in the upper lakes. Hall's Lake, Buckhorn Lake, Indiantown Lake, etc., and if these reservoirs were opened in June the water would arrive here just at the time when it is most required, about six weeks afterwards, leaving the lower reservoirs till the later season, when water would be more immediately available at any time when required. As it is now the northern waters are let down at a time when they reach the river we have to be of any advantage to navigation. There is abundance of water supply, if it were managed with some system under one supervision.

LACROSSE.

Peterborough v. Millbrook.

On Monday a match game of Lacrosse was played between a team from the Peterborough Club and the Millbrook Club, in which our boys exerted their muscle and skill to such good advantage that the Millbrook were put hors de combat in three straight games. The following comprised the Peterborough team:—H. LaBrun, the popular President of the Club, Field Captain; W. Sanderson, W. Rudkins, M. Halpin, J. Sheehy, W. Morrow, J. C. Robertson, J. Joyal, C. LaBrun, M. McDonald, Harry Phalen, D. Fitzgerald and L. McNaughton. Umpires, John Hackett and J. Delaney. The Millbrook team, Mr. Davis, Field Captain, were George Scotcheran, W. Breakey, A. Gant, J. Brandon, W. Sloan, A. Hetherington, W. Davisey, F. Welsh, J. Breakey, A. Duncan. Umpires, R. Howell and F. Armstrong. Referee, W. Vance, of Millbrook. On taking the field, Peterborough put the ball through the goal in three minutes, as claimed by their umpires, and as seemed the general impression. The referee, however, awarded the game to Millbrook, and the second game was called by the ball going between Millbrook's flags, in 48 minutes. The third game was hotly contested, the Millbrook boys working splendidly, but to no avail, as after an hour and thirteen minutes struggle, Peterboro' again sent the ball through the Millbrook goal. The fourth game was won by Peterborough in eleven minutes. All the games were hotly contested, and the Millbrook men proved no mean opponents, but the results of the steady practice of our Club proved too much for them. Messrs. Sheehy, LaBrun and Phalen put in some exceptionally good work. After the conclusion of the game the boys were most handsomely entertained at the Dominion Hotel, by the Millbrook Club, and the day wound up in the most pleasant manner. The Peterborough team returned home by the night train.

The return match with the Belleville Club is expected to come off about the 28th inst.

A match is expected to take place with the Bowmanville Club shortly, but the date is not yet definitely fixed.

What they Say.

They say the filling in of the Hunter street drain didn't do any credit to the corporation.

They say they would like to see some signs of the "hum" in business, of which they read so much in the Review.

They say they don't find sugar or tea, beef, bread, or clothing, any cheaper than they used to be. How if this N. P.?

They say, if firemen refuse to make use of the tanks provided for supply of water, they would like to know of what use the tanks are?

They say a medal should be given to the engineer who devised the means of taking water down hill and drawing it up again with a cart.

They say it would be a good thing to have the waterworks question brought up while the lessons of the recent fire is fresh in the public mind.

They say they would like to know why it is that the corporation property fronting on the river below Sherbrooke street is not opened up to public use.

They say that bathing and swimming baths ought to be erected, by private means or otherwise, in order to promote the cultivation of the virtue next to godliness.

They say Corporation Messenger is an encyclopedia guide to the foot, and that lamps should be lit all the year around on dark nights, no matter what the Almanac says.

They say they can get printing of every description more neatly executed, more promptly turned out, and at more reasonable rates at the EXAMINER Office than at any other printing establishment in the county.

They say it would improve the looks of the town if the long grass and thistles on the sides of the streets were cut down. N.B.—Let the town council appoint a "thistle boss" at a good salary who shall see to the cutting down of these street fringes.

They say they can't understand how Peterborough Town Council should have to devote charity to pay a citizen's passage to Michigan to find work, while the Dominion Government is advancing passages to British paupers from Quebec to Winnipeg.

They say that owners of vineyards and cultivators of shade trees will be forced to the conclusion soon, that the first gun in the only sure protection from the depredations of marauding cattle, and if the Council don't soon take some action, a large shooting public will be compelled to take the law into their own hands.

They say that the printed boast that "The Weekly Review is undoubtedly the Best newspaper in the Midland District of Ontario, and confident year by year to keep the Leading position. It has a League Guaranteed Circulation and a Wealthier class of Readers than any other in the County."—is continually every week by the complacent owners of that paper and its contemporaries, and that part of it referring to the "wealthier class of readers" is a piece of mockery of which it is contemplating that the truly good editor should allow his wicked partners to be guilty.

DIARY OF A PETERBORO' EMIGRANT.

Graphic Description of the Trip.

An Unvarnished Picture of the Journey, and what Lies at the End of it.

FORT AND LA PRAIRIE, April 29, 1880.
CAMP No 2.

(After arrival at Winnipeg.)

The evening we left (7th April), we arrived in Toronto the same night at 12.40. Stayed that night at the St. James Hotel—the only place open—a poor, miserable house. Paid $1 for beds and breakfast. Left Toronto next morning at 8.30 and arrived at Sarnia about 5.30 p.m. and crossed to Port Huron; remained there somethoughwaggage hour hours, and then on for Chicago, where we had to wand up our cars from the fences, and water from the ditches, at the side of the track. On our train there was quite a crowd—seven passenger cars and sixteen with stock and baggage, and two other trains followings. The weather was very cold, but the fall wheat all through Michigan looked splendid. They had no winter and little or no snow. Wheat four inches high, and from one end of Michigan to the other in full wheat. It looked beautiful in its extreme—the admiration of all on the cars. Arrived at Chicago, we were shunted on the Milwaukee and Chicago track, a mile or so from the city proper, and there kept 13 hours—no wood or water until we were leaving next day at noon. We could not leave the cars as the locomotive was attached, and expected to start every moment. However, the general passenger agent came down to see us and we were soon supplied with beautiful water, &c. He came on with us to Milwaukie, but telegraphed ahead, and when we arrived a lot of cars with hay and oats came along aside for the stock—beg. $7.50 per ton, cash, 25c. per bush. The next change to St. Paul was a repetition of the Michigan train—steel rails when we got a chance, &c., but on the whole we had good fun on the cars. There were two good fiddlers and over al good singers on my car, which was dubbed by passengers on the other six cars, as the Pullman or Palace car. When we had to change cars the gentlemen made a bolt and secured seats for all, so we had the same crowd all the way to St. Vincent. Leaving Chicago, the country for thirty miles was beautiful—ploughing, and everything looked spring-like. From St. Paul the country was very wet—occasionally a good farm and house. I noticed that they ploughed as we went through, all day Sunday, men and women. We caught up to a train at Sauk Centre, where Mr. Gould was killed. It was a hard sight to see him. He had bought a farm within two miles of here, and brought out his stock, furniture, and a house complete to put up. He sold his farm for $11,000. On same train, Keanedys had two mules and seven horses burnt. Arriving at St. Vincent, we put off most of our passengers for Dakota, and from thence to St. Boniface, opposite Winnipeg, a distance of sixty miles, you could hardly see anything but water, and as you looked from the car windows on each side, as the moon shone, it appeared as if you were crossing an arm of the sea. The wind blew stiff from the west, and the white caps rolled as you have often seen them on the Little Lake. Arrived at St Boniface at 11 o'clock p. m. on the sixth day, weather 13 degrees below zero; met a stick of wood at the station, so we got what we had in the cars. After spending the night in them built a fire in an old worn-out box stove; took the Mrs. to a half-breed house to get warm, but she would not remain, so I took Mrs. Lewis to Winnipeg. Now the ice was not out of the river, only about twenty yards on each side, the ice in the centre being about four feet thick. So they gave us the privilege of paying $5cts. each, in old leaking punts to the ice, footing it across, and $5cts. more to reach the other side, making 10cts. each, and you walk on the ice in the centre of the river. There are about forty punts in this business and make a good thing out of it in the spring before the regular ferry boat runs. Willie and I camped on the St. Boniface side, fifteen feet from the railroad track at the depot, but the Lord Bishop sent one of his priests from the Convent to say we were trespassing and to dig out. We did so and went on the Winnipeg side, west of the Queen's Hotel, on the open prairie or common, when we got the benefit of an inch of water to sleep on, but we made a raid at night on a haystack and some new houses building some quarter of a mile off. This we had to do every night; it was very cold and exposed. We would have bought wood at $8 per cord for poplar, had we known we were to stay so long waiting for our trunks; there are three missing and no checks to them—this is on a par how Marvin managed. Winnepeg is a wretched dirty town, mud! mud! mud! Although there are a good many fine buildings, yet it is so flat, dirty and wet and with Manitoba mud you can hardly lift your feet. We left Winnipeg at 3.30 p.m., on Wednesday, our train composed of three prairie cars, and two waggons, ten oxen, and thirteen persons, bound for Prince Albert and Bird Tail Creek. We have kept together helping each other as we get stuck. I got my yoke of oxen from Mr. J. Roberts—$150. They are small, short-horn breed, but good and gentle, and pull until their tongues hang out as a dog's would in July. We arrived at camp No. 1, six miles from Winnepeg, at 6 p.m., called Sturgeon Rock. I will call it camp No. 1 from Winnipeg. Willie and Marvin drove the oxen. On leaving tant the oxen were put in the whoa-haw side instead of gee, so they went into the ditch and the waggon and top were nearly going to glory. As we pass to the west we have the prairie on our right side, being north-east, and the Assiniboine River on our left, some two miles away; and between it and the prairie is poplar, &c very small, full of prairie chickens, but from the snow drifting from the prairie you can't get in, as it is over eight to ten feet deep. The prairie extends to the north up to here as far as the eye can see, mostly covered with water and thousands of wild geese and ducks; but you can't get at them, the water being too deep unless you ride an ox. There is a tremendous cold wind always blowing off the prairie and from the one direction—N. E. Water Camp No. 2.—A bleak spot; no wood. Water Camp No. 3, Pigeon Lake.—Full of ducks, &c. Stole wood to do us—dry poplar poles as good for our stove, you bet. Camp No. 4, Bay of St. Paul's.—This is a stretch of prairie, overflowed some 20 miles. We had to go through 2 miles up to the box of our waggon. Willie got on the pole, but Marvin remained behind with our guide to put up a flag to warn four of our party which road to take, as they could not make our tent the night previous; as Marvo had to wade the two miles up to his middle. However the party is used to it, and forward is the word. We continue at it as long as the oxen hold out. When on in the day, you will hear the shout, "Ox down! used up." So we lift him up, get six or so at the wheels, and push him through to good footing. We often get stuck, but double up at once. It is hard to make 1 mile an hour; it keeps up a constant excitement—such licking and shouting! Such is all the road from Winnipeg to here. Camp No. 5, on the Assiniboine River.—An old barn or lumber yard, very warm and dry—plenty of wood. To get to it we debouched from the main trail two miles, and forded the river another 2 miles, thus saving water driving four feet deep, but I thought the waggons and tops would go. One of our party lost his Pointer dog through here. Camp No. 6.—At this point we had to remain one day, there being a driving snow storm from the N. E., which was hard on the cattle. Hay $36 per ton, and no potatoes to be got on the road. Camp No. 7, Portage L. P., West End.—Warm last night (first time)—it has frozen in the tent, every night since leaving Winnipeg, so you could not get your boots on in the morning. Last night a good-end. We stay over to-day to get plough, &c., and leave teal cheese to go up by boat from here. Some 20 miles from here there are 20 tents struck. Can't go any further—all our train is unloading to ship by boat to Fort Ellice—and push on to-morrow. Now, you may ask me how I like the country. Up to Poplar Point it is the worst country you ever put foot in. From Poplar Point to here good farms and lands, and getting better going west, but still water, water, and mud. For 40 miles from Winnipeg I wouldn't take it as a gift and be obliged to live on it. So it makes 100 miles from Emerson nearly all water up to July. When the country is drained it may be good enough, as the land is black and rich. There are a good many people travelling west, and so many returning disgusted. A person who came on the cars with us to Winnipeg and left for Bird T. Creek the day before us, sold his two yoke of oxen to-day, shipping his house by N. P. Line Steamers for Winnipeg, and off with his two boys for Canada again. There are hundreds the same. Marvin is down in the village as ox to get our beans stored for boat. There is four feet of ice on river yet, but we must push on, if it takes all summer. Willie is a good boy and splendid with the oxen—he drives. I do the cooking and washing dishes, and I hate to get the poor boy up at 5 a.m., he is so tired, but we must move while the ground is hard.

Yours, etc.,

E. CALCUTT.

Tit for Tat.

"Good mornin', Miss Kate," said young Mickey Foe;
"Good mornin' again; it's yourself says I see.
Lookin' bloomin' as iver." But Kate turned away
As she said, "Mister Mickie, I wish you good day.
You're a heartless deceaver—now don't spake a word!
Pretty sales about you and that Norah I've heard.
You knew you danced with her the day of the fair.
And praised her gray eyes and her very red hair.
You called her an angel; quite to love with her fell;
And at night, when you parted, you kissed her as well!"
Then young Mickey gave a sly wink as he said,
"I deaved her my darlin'—this way turn your head—
Yes, faith, I deaved her; my darlin' it's true;
For I shut both my eyes, Kate, and fancied 'twas you!"
Yes, that's what I did:
Kate, it's true;
I shut both my eyes,
And fancied 'twas you!"

"Well, I've no time to stay, so good-bye Mickie Foe,
You may deave her, but you don't deave me;
I'm not to be blarneyed. Mick, a word in your ear:
You had better be off, for my dad's comin' here."
"O, your dad's comin' is he? That's not him I see
Now bobbin' behind that owld blackthorn tree!
For it's Paddy Mahon I" "O," said Kate, with a smoor,
"You've got your eyes open at last, Mickie dear.
And since you were right; 'tis my own darlin' Pat,
So take my advice, Mick, and get out of that:
For he's comin' to coort me. Now listen my lad:
When that boy kisses me, O, won't you be glad!
For when his lips meet mine, why, what will I do!
But shut both my eyes, Mick, and fancy it's you.

That's what I'll do:
Mickie it's true;
Shut both my eyes,
And fancy it's you."

CHAPTER V.

COMING HOME.

The three stood together in that room, a singularly awkward group for the time, and Percy cast a glance towards Beryl.

'You need not fear on that child's account,' said the Lady Geraldine, with a proud movement of her head. 'I do not blame her for this scandalous scene. I hardly suppose that a girl who lives at the kate-keeper's lodge of Templetowers has been taken so far into the family confidence as even to know of our engagement, Mr. Evelyn.'

'I did know of your engagement, Lady Geraldine,' Beryl broke in, every whit as haughtily, 'and reminded Mr. Evelyn of it; but I have nothing to answer for to you.'

Mr. Percy Evelyn, bowing to the two girls, passed out through the door.

'Your name is Beryl?' asked the Lady Geraldine, looking fixedly at the fair young creature, through whom her pride had been so bitterly wounded.

'I am Miss Rutherford.'

'Of the lodge? Well, Miss Rutherford, don't imagine for an instant that you are to consider yourself my rival.'

And she was sweeping out of the room, when the Baronet made his appearance, white with anger.

'What's all this that I hear?' he exclaimed. 'No, don't go, Geraldine; don't go, Beryl. It's my nephew who's made a fool of himself. Beryl, you are not to blame. Geraldine, he must have been indulging in wine. Great goodness! to think that he should forget his father's last wish and my solemn promise in in this way!'

He was going on in a similar strain, when Geraldine interrupted him, laying her hand on his arm.

'Sir Percy,' she said, calmly, 'all is over between your nephew and myself. I heard him repudiate our unhappy engagement, both for himself and for me. I cannot tell, of course, whether his devotion to the young lady from the gate-keeper's lodge will be a lasting one, but Geraldine Stuart will not be told twice that her betrothal is a fiction!'

And this time she did sweep from the room. The Baronet would have stopped her, but his looks fell on some object that lay glittering on the floor.

With an exclamation, he picked it up.

It was the cross of brilliants that had been attached to the emerald necklet.

'Who was wearing this?' he cried, so fiercely that Beryl shrank from him.

'It is mine, Sir Percy, she answered; 'but I was not wearing it. It must have been accidentally dropped.'

Sir Percy Evelyn continued to gaze at the trinket, turning it over in his hand, closely examining the setting, and looking up again and again from it to where Beryl stood, flushed and frightened.

Then he said, 'How did you come by it? How long have you possessed it? Was it given to you?'

The young girl paused before replying; then, 'Sir Percy,' she said, 'I have already brought trouble to this house, which is no longer a home for me. Kind as your wishes have been——'

'But the cross?' he interrupted.

'I have one friend,' she went on, 'who will advise me what to do. Let me go back to the lodge in the morning, Sir Percy, and consult Anne Clayton.'

'What has Anne Clayton told you?' he asked, taking her hand, and still speaking vehemently. 'Has she seen this jewel?'

'Yes, Sir Percy; I was wearing it when I first came.'

'What did she say?'

'That I ought to leave the ball-room at once.'

'And my nephew?'

'When I was coming to be introduced—or exhibited—to you, Sir Percy,' she laughed, 'Mr. Evelyn suggested that I should put aside the necklet I wore—of emeralds—and this ornament also. He took charge of them, and must have dropped this cross.'

'Will you leave it with me until to-morrow?' said the Baronet.

'If you wish it, Sir Percy.'

He bade her good-night, passed long and earnestly at her, and was gone.

His first proceeding, when he reached his own room, was to look the door; his next, to open a large bureau that stood against the wall, and take from it a magnificent jewel-casket. But it seemed long before he could persuade himself to turn the gold key in the little steel lock, or to lift the enamelled lid.

At length, with something between a shudder and a sigh, he appeared to overcome his reluctance, and the dainty cabinet lay open.

It was empty.

'Sophie could take even these, my gifts, with her!' he groaned, burying his face in his hands. 'Beryl, it was even worse, more pitiless, more shameful than I feared!'

Long he sat there brooding. The gray dawn found him seated still, and the morning light shone upon a haggard, sleepless countenance.

At breakfast he inquired for his nephew.

No one had seen him as yet.

For the Lady Geraldine.

She had left the castle with the last of the other guests.

For Beryl.

Anne Clayton had come from the gate-keeper's lodge to fetch her.

For Stephen Quail.

That worthy presented himself, cheek and cheekbone, waiting to be addressed before uttering a word.

'Quail,' said the Baronet, 'you went to London, on a certain day, about seven years ago?'

'I did, Sir Percy.'

'You remember your errand?'

'Perfectly, Sir Percy.'

'Where was the man buried?'

'I am forbidden to say, Sir Percy.'

Sir Percy uttered an imprecatory ejaculation.

'What did you see?' he asked.

'A miserable den in a miserable court; and one who had lately died; and a little, pale girl—now at the lodge; and funeral arrangements that would have baffled the rank of an earl.'

'Did the child bring away anything with her?'

'Yes, Sir Percy; she would not stir without a small black chest, which was left at the lodge with her.'

'Do you think, Quail,' said Sir Percy Evelyn, 'that I could get possession of that box for half an hour? Not, mind you, to take anything from it; only to obtain a sight of its contents.'

'It would be awkward work, Sir Percy,' the man replied. 'For you it might mean nothing; in me, it would be housebreaking and robbery.'

The Baronet remained silent for a time.

'If,' he presently said, 'you can do this for me, Quail, I will give you a hundred guineas.'

Still the other hesitated.

'Is it not enough?' was Sir Percy's impatient question.

'It is not that, Sir Percy,' replied Stephen Quail; 'but would you also give me a written certificate that I was employed in this business by you?'

'I will do it,' assented Sir Percy, and wrote the required testimony.

But Stephen Quail had made the request simply to exaggerate the importance of his own services. There was nothing either dangerous or disgraceful in what he had been asked to do.

He went straight to the lodge, and told Anne Clayton of the Baronet's wish.

'It can do no harm,' she said. 'But will Beryl consent? The key is never out of her possession.'

'With or without her consent, it must be done!' he answered. 'Who knows what may come of this, for me, or for you?'

'Nothing can come to me, Stephen,—she spoke these words in a weary and hopeless tone—'until my mistress goes back to her home.'

The man started.

'Is she really living?' he asked, trembling; 'and do you know where she is? Does she know how unconscious was my treachery?'

'She lives; she never heard of the part you played; she is not aware even of her child's existence!'

And you?'

'The time has not come. Stephen Quail, for me to reveal myself. When it does come, you will be conscious of the folly which I so often have rebuked.'

Beryl was summoned, and came down from her room. She seemed extremely agitated. That reckless young man, Percy Evelyn, had, in fact, made a frank declaration of his love for her—this time a written one, left by himself at the lodge—which sufficiently accounted for his absence from the Baronet's breakfast-table.

'Beryl,' said Anne Clayton, 'what other ornaments have you belonging to that set?'

'I shall not tell you,' answered the young girl, 'while he is here;' at the same time indicating Stephen Quail by a gesture.

'Miss Rutherford,' he interposed, respectfully, 'I am no enemy of yours, believe me. If I am reserved, it has been in fulfilment of my duty towards yourself, above all. My dear young lady, consent; say what jewels you have, and show them to Sir Percy.'

'Well, take them,' she said; 'they are upstairs,'—and she gave him the key. 'Do as you please with them.'

'In return,' he said, 'I will send you a letter.'

CHAPTER IV.

GONE AND COME.

In the domain of Templetowers there was a piece of broken woodland. This woodland was intersected by four cross-roads. At the junction of them was a little Gothic edifice, used of old times as a forester's lodge. It was now inhabited by an aged woman and a lady, who, though past the prime of early youth, retained the grace of form and countenance that had belonged to her in the happy days of girlhood.

Tall, stately, always pale, yet never emotional—to observers, at any rate—she led the life of an absolute recluse; never visited, nor received a visit; never wandered in the park, and confined her exercise to a narrow alley of the forest, whence, on the approach of a stranger, she could instantly escape into the lodge—or cottage, as it might more properly be termed.

The lady had lived thus for the last seventeen years.

Yet it was to her, instead of to the Baronet, that Stephen Quail carried the casket of jewels which Beryl reluctantly had placed in his hands.

She, when he laid the jewel case on the table, said, 'Do not open it, Stephen Quail; I will not see them! Who gave them to you?'

The man was silent.

'I know, I know!' she cried. 'The child! Oh, Stephen, as you have been so long faithful, be faithful still, and tell me of her!'

'I must not, and will not, Lady Evelyn!' he answered, in a firm though deferential tone. 'When the cloud has been cleared away—and these jewels will help to clear it, perhaps—I may speak. They must now be taken to my master.'

Thus saying, and with another grave bow, he left her, carrying the casket with him.

'Who gave you these?' was the Baronet's first question.

'Miss Beryl Rutherford, Sir Percy.'

'Dog! Have you been harbouring her? Is this your fidelity? Then, perhaps, she is with Beryl at the gate-keeper's lodge.'

'My lady, Sir Percy, has not seen Miss Beryl for the last seventeen years. And, with the utmost respect, I can say no more, except that neither has she ever seen these jewels.'

The Baronet was left alone, and groaned and wept as he handled the delicate and sparkling trinkets.

Presently, however, he rang, and again asked for Beryl.

She was at the lodge.

'Send' said he; 'I desire to come to me,' he said.

Within half an hour the young girl was once more in his presence.

'Beryl,'—he took her hand tenderly—'look at these jewels.'

'I know them, Sir Percy,' she answered. 'They have been in my possession since I was a very young child.'

'My nephew, Percy,' he went on, with a change of subject so sudden that it startled her—'he loves you, Beryl.'

She hung her head, and replied, in a low tone, while a sweet blush heightened her face, 'He has told me so.

'And you?'

'I never uttered no word of love to your nephew, Sir Percy Evelyn.'

'Your life, you think, has a secret in it Beryl?'

'I am sure of it.'

'Well,' he said, rising, and laying his hand on the casket, 'on the day when that secret shall be solved, Percy Evelyn, who loves you, will be utterly and irretrievably beggared, ruined, and disgraced.'

Beryl looked at him in wonder.

'If that be true,' she said, after a moment's silence, 'I will leave this place—will go far away.'

She was leaving the room, but he called her back.

'Take these with you, Beryl,' he said, pointing to the jewels.

'I will not touch them, Sir Percy,' she replied, with a firmness that astonished him.

'Take them,' he repeated, and Beryl almost fancied that he regretted a sob—'take them, child. They may have been your mother's.'

Beryl took the casket, and, with one sad glance at the agitated countenance of the Baronet, left him again alone, and he immediately sent again for Stephen Quail.

'Miss Rutherford has just left Templetowers,' he said. 'Go after her. Keep out of her sight; but do not leave her out of your own until you ascertain where she and the woman who is with her take up their abode. Then find out under what name they are living, and let me know.'

When Mr. Stephen Quail, in obedience to his master's bidding, hurried down the broad avenues leading from the great entrance hall of Templetowers to the gate lodge, he soon came in view of Beryl, who was slowly taking her way along, amid the fall of the melancholy winter branches.

But to his surprise, she did not pursue the path straight towards that which had so long been her home. Instead, she turned, in a languid, sauntering manner, down a winding walk, which, after many a curve and undulation, terminated in the woodland.

Then she looked back at the vast mansion she was quitting for ever, and he saw that her face was covered with tears.

Percy Evelyn, coming suddenly upon the young girl in that sequestered path, and seeing how bitterly she wept, said not a single word until he had caught her in his arms, and kissed her streaming eyelids.

Then he whispered, tenderly, 'My darling! why is this? What has happened?'

'Let me go, Percy!' she answered, struggling out of his embrace. 'This must never be again! I am dismissed from Templetowers for ever! Why, your uncle must explain; I understand nothing. Once more, release and leave me. Go back to your first betrothed, and forget me, Percy—I, who have been driven, like a vagrant, from these lands, that will be yours!'

'We soon shall meet again, for I will never give you up! I swear it!' he passionately exclaimed. And strode towards the house, resolved, at all hazards, to 'have it out' with his uncle. But a quiet voice arrested him.

'Don't take on in this way, Mr. Percy!' said Stephen Quail. 'I am to keep Sir Percy well-informed about all that happens in connection with the young lady, and there is no reason why you shouldn't be well-informed also.'

'If you spy for my uncle you won't spy for me!' replied the infuriated young man, dashing rapidly on. Yet it flashed into his mind, 'She will not be able, then, utterly to disappear. I will not watch her; I will watch over her!'

Could he have seen her then!

She was lying senseless on a bed of moss, outside the gates of a garden, in the centre of which stood a little Gothic structure.

A lady, tall, pale, and beautiful, was bending over her.

'Have her carried in, Ellis,' she said to a woman who stood near. 'And, see, she is clasping something to her breast! Be careful of her and it. What a lovely child!'

Not the slightest Affinity

exists between the numberless cough mixtures with which the market is flooded and that successful preparation—Northrop and Lyman's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda. It stands alone, distinct, is like itself and nothing else. It embodies the best results of advanced pharmaceutical science. It accomplishes positive decisive results, effectually relieving coughs (when the lungs are not tuberculous or hopelessly affected), colds, laryngitis, and diseases of a scrofulous origin. While it does not cure consumption, it is the most reliable means of defence against the dreaded scourge The invigorating properties of the hypophosphites reimburse the system debilitated by the constant tear and wear of a cough, while the paroxysms rapidly diminish in violence, in consequence of the soothing, emollient action of the cod liver oil on the inflamed lung membrane. The phosphorus, lime and soda, in combination with it, are all natural components in the construction of the bodily edifice, which, in a state of decay, lacks a sufficiency of the elements. These the hypophosphites supply, increasing the nutritive properties of the blood, and building up and rehabilitating the tottering human structure with a degree of promptitude as astonishing as it is gratifying to the invalid. A perceptible gain in flesh as well as in strength is one of the consequences of using this standard preparation, which both time and experience have demonstrated to be fully worthy of the confidence reposed in it. Prepared by Northrop & Lyman, Toronto, and sold by all druggists.

The American Eye-Salve is presented to the public with the assurance of its efficiency as a curative of most diseases of the eye, acute or chronic inflamation, whether induced by scrofulous origin or otherwise, weakness or defect of vision, diminished tone of the optive nerve, or a diseased state of the tissues constituting that organ Also, for all persons whose vocation requires an incessant action of the eyes, the salve will act as a charm in restoring a uniform healthy action, where weakness, pain, and misery may have been long threatened with a fatal termination. It is the most simple, safe and effectual remedy ever discovered. The materials of which it is made are pure, perfect, and costly, compounded with elaborate care and exactness, safe in its application, being used externally, and, of course, avoiding the pain and danger which necessarily attends the introduction of caustic minerals and eye-washes. Ringworm and old Chronic Sores, of scrofulous origin, or resulting from whatever cause, yield to the American Eye-Salve. IT IS USED SUCCESSFULLY FOR PILES. Its soothing effect is immediate, and a permanent cure requires but a few applications. The proprietors of "Dr. J. Joy Among the Children.

Copland's Sweet Castor Oil, equally suitable for children and adults. Endorsed by over 600 doctors in Canada.

The difficulty of administrating nauseous medicines, and the desirability of having the pleasant to the taste, induced T. Copland to undertake researches which resulted in the discovery of a Sweet Castor Oil, perfectly palatable, of the same strength and medical qualities as the ordinary Castor Oil, and which equally safe and harmless, yet acting with more certainty, and producing neither nausea nor griping. Some children say it is honey; others call it syrup—they all say they like it. One parent says—"My children drink it like water," another—"We had to hide the bottle or they would have finished it right off;" another—"My little girl has taken it twice without any trouble, and does not know what it is, though she hates the ordinary Castor Oil, and we could never get her to take it without a fight;" yet another—"I wish you success of your Sweet Castor Oil; it is a splendid thing—more to take the place or all the common oil."

The extraordinary demand for this improvement on a staple household medicine has brought fraudulent imitations into the market, but the public can guard themselves against counterfeits (which, regardless of purchasers, are attempting to sell on the reputation of this article) by seeing that the name, Copland's Sweet Castor Oil, is on both the wrapper and direction label.

The undersigned hereby purchased Messrs. T. Copland & Co's interest in the above preparation, are now manufacturing it from the original recipe. Robinson & Lyman, Toronto.

HOW LOST, HOW RESTORED!

We have recently published a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical and permanent cure (without medicine) of Nervous Debility, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediment to Marriage, etc., resulting from excesses.

☞ Price in a sealed envelope, only 6 cts., or two postage stamps.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicines or the use of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

☞ This lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

REFORM IN AGRICULTURE.

There can be no doubt of the importance, nay the necessity, of an early practical recognition by the agriculturists of the country, that it has become desirable that a radical reform should be introduced into the system of agriculture generally pursued in this Province. We don't wish to alarm any of our Conservative subscribers, and we hasten to say that we do not use the term in any sense politically, and that the reform which we advise refers simply to husbandry, and is equally needed among husbandmen of all political creeds. Experience, the wisest but the most expensive of teachers, has taught the lesson that if our farmers desire their operations to be uniformly successful, or to achieve the highest average of success, they must decide to abandon the practice of relying solely upon grain crops as their only resource and means of income. Although Ontario will always remain a great grain producing country, yet her importance as such ceases with the first large exportation of wheat from the Nor'-West prairies. Indeed, not only must we be supplanted in the ordinary course of things by the development of the rich and fertile West, but it is becoming more and more apparent that as a matter of business economy, the interests of the Ontario farmers point to a radical change of system. We can no longer safely rely rely upon the yield of grain as a steady and exclusive source of income. With the changed condition of affairs wrought by the clearing up of the forests, and certain alterations of climatic influences, an element of uncertainty has been introduced into the production of grain, which formerly did not exist. Not a great many years ago the farmer put in his crop of fall wheat, and very carelessly at that, and spent his winter in the sure hope of an abundant crop the following summer. Now the wheat crop has become like a venture in a lottery. We recognise that it is the barest chance whether the crop planted in the fall will not have to be ploughed under in the spring, and it is, in fact, but a sort of "trust to luck" spirit that induces people to go to the trouble and expense of seeding. Spring wheat, too, has become, not quite so capriciously uncertain, but at all events very unreliable. And this condition of affairs obtains notwithstanding the great improvements which have of late years been introduced into the science and practice of agriculture. Formerly we had but to scratch the bosom of mother earth with the most primitive implements, and it bloomed like the rose. Now, with the most improved machinery for cultivating and planting, and with the greatest care which is taken in the work of tilling, we find the result is never looked upon with confidence, and is always looked upon as a chance. Two questions now suggest themselves—why is this? and what is the remedy? In answer to the first, we believe we might correctly say that the practice of clearing up the country without regard to the necessity of sheltering belts of forest for raising fall grain, has had largely to do with the failure of this once reliable crop. That, however, would not be the case with spring grain, whose average return has become equally uncertain. We must look for the solution of the difficulty in the fact that our farmers have not reciprocated with liberality to the generosity of the soil—they have, in fact robbed the earth of its fruitfulness, as Pharoah ground the faces of the Egyptians—the soil has been taxed by years of incessant cropping, each year of which extracts the productive elements without any effort being made to restore the vital principle which is so essential to the best results in vegetation. Fading fertility and weakening powers of reproduction are the reasons why, of late years, a poor crop is more to be relied upon than a good one, and why the hopes of our farmers are so frequently blighted by the least adverse circumstance. The land has not the vigor left in it that will take its crop through hardships of climate and weather, and hence we find failure so frequently the reward of the best efforts of the farmer. The remedy is fortunately pointed out to us by our late experience. We have found a great and growing trade sprung up, between Canada and the motherland, in the export of fat cattle, sheep and hogs, for which there is afforded an expanding and almost inexhaustible market. We have found in dairy farming another source of income whose returns are sure, and whose profits are remunerative. The best of our agriculturists, have already entered upon the raising of stock both for export and and for dairy purposes, and have found steady profit to accrue where, when their returns were dependent solely upon the yield of grain, all was chance; but what is wanted in the general adoption of a system of mixed husbandry—more attention, less not exclusive attention to the raising of stock, not only as a means of income, but for the purpose of securing the means whereby fertility is restored to the soil, and whereby a lesser area of grain crops may be made to yield more abundantly than the larger area of ill-nourished soil now does. The sooner farmers generally recognize the changed condition of affairs, and adopt the remedy suggested by experience the sooner will the element of uncertainty be removed from the operations of farming, and success made certain.

The remedy that has the most remarkable success in the cure of diarrhœa, dysentery, cholera morbus, and, indeed, every kind of summer complaint, brought on by eating improper food, such as raw vegetables, unripe or sour fruits, bad milk, impure water, etc., the remedy that is the most pleasant, quick, safe, sure, and effectual, is Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. It is the fastest remedy for summer complaints known. For sale by all dealers. 30-2 ins.

THE TRENT VALLEY CANAL.

The gentlemen from Montreal, who have during last week explored the inland navigation of the province, agree in expressing a surprise that so much of a natural water highway should have existed without their previous knowledge. They were given the most convincing of all demonstrations—that the Trent Valley Canal will be such only in name—that the word canal is a misnomer—that the project simply contemplates the connection of existing water stretches, by short works which will afford a complete barge navigation from the waters of the Georgian Bay to the harbor of Montreal. They have convinced themselves very clearly that it is in the interest of Montreal and of all those interested in the through trade of the country, that this highway should be opened up and made available for the carrying of at least a large portion of the existing trade from the Western States, and as well to afford a natural cheap outlet to the ocean for our own productive prairies west of Winnipeg. What now remains wanting is the countenance and assistance of the Dominion Government. Let those who have influence with that government exercise that influence to insist upon the canal being built, and though politics weigh a trongly, yet material interests are deserving of, and must command, the principal share of consideration. Should Sir Charles Tupper be so impressed with the importance and the necessity of this canal, as to recommend its construction to Parliament at its next session, it will be for the people along the line to consider the service he will thereby have done them; but the Minister of Canals may rest equally assured that if there is any sign of temporising with the matter, or attempting to hold it over as an influence in the next elections, the people along the route, who are vitally concerned in this project, will not be slow to resent any such trifling with a scheme in which is bound up a large proportion of the prosperity to which we look forward. Verbum sap—the Government may either build the canal and make friends; or they may trifle with it, and make friends for the Opposition.

A Genuine Outrage.

The Government of the Dominion have announced their intention to sell the beautiful Islands in the St. Lawrence, between Brockville and Gananoque, to private purchasers. If this infamous project is persisted in, and if the citizens of Ontario stand by and see it consummated, it will furnish about as bitter a commentary on the sordid and contemptible spirit of the age as anything we can conceive. To sell the Thousand Islands, which are at present the free and beautiful heritage of the public, would be an outrage, the mere suggestion of which out to bring down a storm of indignation upon the heads of the Ministers. Looked at from the most unsentimental standpoint, nothing could justify it but the immediate danger of national bankruptcy; under our present circumstances of reviving prosperity, it is altogether scandalous Of a truth the age of chivalry has passed. We are now prepared to hear that the Government have opened negotiations for the sale of the Canadian portion of Niagara Falls; and that they propose to cut up Parliament Square and sell it off for building lots. But after all there is perhaps no occasion for surprise in the announcement concerning the Islands, for men who would sell themselves, would naturally have few scruples about selling anything else. Grip hopes, however, that an expression of public opinion may be given earnestly and emphatically against the shameful proposition, and in time to save the country from the impending humiliation.—Grip.

Cutting Rice Plant on Rice Lake.

The owners of the paper mill in the east ward have asked permission to cut rice on Rice lake for making pulp at the works here. Mr. Cockburn, the member for Northumberland, sent communications to several individuals asking if there was any valid reasons why the request should not be granted, and there came the following protest from the village of Cobourg: That instead of $50 worth of rice being gathered as had been represented, there was over a thousand dollars worth gathered annually. That the rice is gathered from the first of September to the middle of October, some portions maturing before others. The cutting as done before was begun in September. The cutting interfered with the next crop, and in the course of the cutting the roots are pulled up, and being a perennial plant it is thereby destroyed. That experience has shown that seed does not produce a plant which rises above the water in one season. That the reason no complaint was made when the cutting took place in 1872 was because the people wanted to ascertain what effect it would have on the reproduction of the plant; and last that the experience of the majority of the people in and about the locality to say nothing of the Indians, who look upon the rice as a chief means of support, is against the rice being interfered with, and they would enter a strong protest if necessary. The rice, by special clause of the Indian treaty, is reserved to the Indians, who would have to be bought out, and it is understood they would rather sell their farms than part with the rice.—Lindsay Post.

Lime in Agriculture.

The Journal of Forestry briefly sums up many of the uses of lime when applied to the soil. The effects of lime, as will be seen, are in part mechanical and in part chemical.

1. Upon deep alluvial and clay soil it increases the crop of potatoes, and renders them less waxy. Sprinkled over potatoes in a stone-heap it preserves them, and when riddled over the cut sets it wonderfully increases their fertility.

2. Lime eradicates the finger-and-toe disease in turnips, and gives greater soundness to the bulbs.

3. It gives, when applied to meadow land, a large product of more nutritious grasses. It also exterminates coarse and sour grasses, destroys coach grass, and acts powerfully upon rye grasses.

4. Upon arable land it destroys weeds of various kinds.

5. It rapidly decomposes vegetable matter, producing a large amount of food for plants in the form of carbonic acid gas.

6. It destroys or neutralizes the acids in the soil; hence its adaptability to sour soils.

7. It acts powerfully upon some of the inorganic parts of the soil, especially on the sulphate of iron found in peaty soils, and the sulphate of magnesia and alumina.

8. It proves fatal to worms and slugs and the larvæ of injurious insects, though favorable to the growth of shell-bearers.

9. Slacked lime added to vegetable matter causes it to give off its nitrogen in the form of ammonia. Upon soils in which ammonia is combined with acids, it sets free the ammonia, which is seized upon by the plants.

10. Its solubility in water causes it to sink into and ameliorate the subsoil. When the soil containing fragments of granite or trap rocks, lime hastens their decomposition and liberates the silicates.

11. Its combination with the acids in the soil produces saline compounds, such as potash, soda, &c.

12. Strewed over your plants, it destroys or drives away the turnip fly.

13. Worked in with grass seeds the beneficial effects of lime, chalk, marl, and shell-sand have been visible for thirty years.

14. Applied to the rot heap, lime effectually destroys the seeds of weeds.

To sum its advantages: when properly applied to the soil, it purifies and stimulates the action, thereby promoting the growth of healthy vegetation of all kinds.

THE PETERBOROUGH BAND ABROAD.

The Cobourg World of last week contains the following notice of the Fire Brigade Band of this town:

"On Monday afternoon, the excellent band of our sister town of Peterborough, while here in connection with the Orange celebration, favored our citizens with a couple of open air concerts. Of the playing of this Band we cannot speak too highly; though, of course, it would not do for us to put on the airs of a musical critic. But we heard it said by parties who are judges, and whose breasts are no longer swayed in the matter of musical discrimination, that the Peterborough Band rendered the best music of the kind they had heard for years. And we feel quite safe in endorsing this opinion. Their appearance is fine, their uniform is pretty, their bearing is gentlemanly, their music is enchanting; and it was very kind of them to favor our visitors and ourselves with their delightful strains."

The Sentinel-Star also says:—

"The Peterboro' Fire Brigade Band is a credit to that town, and their playing on Monday showed they are still able to uphold the honors they won at Toronto last fall. They played for an hour in front of the Horton House and among their selections we noticed one, "Round the World in 20 Minutes," which attracted very great attention. It was a well arranged collection of the national airs of this mundane sphere, and was nicely and carefully played, some of the solo parts, particularly the B flat cornet and the trombone, being very sweet."

Thousands of children are lost annually from cholera infantum, diarrhœa, and the summer complaints, whose lives might be preserved by using Extract of Wild Strawberry. Physicians recommend and use it constantly. It is a remedy well known, and more highly valued the longer known. It is for sale at all drug stores, and is within reach of every one. The Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, JULY 22, 1880.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

THE ANNOUNCEMENT is displayed in the shop windows of our coal oil dealers that in consequence of the N. P., coal oil has been advanced to forty cents per gallon. The deluded workingmen who were promised $2 50 per day, in 1878, and who are still waiting for it, doubtless realize the significance of this fresh inroad by the Government upon their too scanty earnings.

THE CONDEMNED MAN Bennett who will be hanged to-morrow morning, is fully prepared for the gallows. Of late he has been indulging in poetry, and the following lines are indicative of the state of his mind :—

"This world to me is dark and drear.
Fond dear h on you I wait,
The hours are quickly passing by
My day is growing late.
On God, alone I place my trust.
My life I freely give,
And in peace await his kind release
From out this living grave."

WHAT HAS BECOME of the boasted confidence of the Government in the vox populi? Three constituencies are open, North Ontario, Selkirk and West Toronto. The Speaker has issued the writs, and yet the Government refuses to fix the date of the elections. The natural inference is that they fear to appeal to the popular judgement, conscious of the deceit and fraud by which they seduced the confidence of the people at the last general elections. That sorry experiment, the N. P., has, in practical operation, rudely opened the popular optic, and the Government fears to meet its gaze.

IN 1872 Sir George Cartier, for Sir John A. Macdonald, in acknowledgment of the Yankee money advanced to secure the elections of that year, though Sir Hugh Allan, wrote : "Whatever sums you or your colleagues shall advance will be recouped to you." Is the bargain about to be fulfilled? Returned to office, Sir John has carefully surrounded himself with all those men who attained bad eminence during that disgraceful period. Now we hear ominous whispers that having assumed the construction of all the difficult and unprofitable sections of the Pacific Railway, in the British Columbia mountains, and the tastnesses north of Lake Superior, the government are about to hand over the public lands of the North West to "Dear Sir Hugh" Allan, to enable him to build the easy and profitable portion of the line across the prairies of the North West. We shall see how far these rumors are correct in the course of a few weeks, and if they be, the government may prepare themselves for the retribution which awaits them in the next general elections.

WE WOULD draw attention to the advertisement, which will be found in another column, of the Ottawa Ladies College. This institution, of which Rev. A. F. Kempt is the Principal, has established for itself during the few years of its existence, a reputation not excelled by any other on the continent, as a College for young ladies where their parents may rely upon their being surrounded with every safeguard and moral influence, and at the same time acquire the highest knowledge and those accomplishments without which the education of no young lady of the present day is complete. The Conservatory of Music in connection with the College is the rest in Canada, and holds high rank in the musical world. A young lady of Peterborough brought home a gold medal at the close of last term, and we hope some other will be found among us to follow up her success. The College had the patronage and frequent visits of the Countess of Dufferin, and has the same from the accomplished and amiable consort of our Governor-General, the daughter of our Queen. Special attention is paid to useful acquirements and we can thoroughly recommend the institution to the patronage of those who have daughters to educate, and who wish them to have the best facilities for acquiring knowledge and accomplishments, and to be attended with Christian guardianship.

"THE HUM IN PETERBOROUGH"—We notice an article in the down-street daily intended to give people the impression that the "hum" had at last reached Peterborough, but as usual it turns out to be as groundless as the many other indications that have been brought before our notice from the same source. We are told that a certain mill in town is being refitted with a new engine and another run of stone because the demand for flour made at this mill is so great that they are now unable to meet it; hence the improvements, and this of course is due to the great "N. P." It is a well known fact that the millers in Peterborough have had since last August about six weeks of paying business; since then some of the mills have not run half time. From the middle September until the first of November, or the close of navigation, has for the past two or three years been the only time they could do anything, and it is with a view of turning out a larger quantity during these possible few weeks of paying business, that the mill in question is being enlarged. Last year was to millers in Ontario the most unprofitable for many years, and yet in the face of these facts our cheeky contemporary can see indications of the genuine "hum." If the hum-hunter of the Review would publish the private opinion of the Conservative member of the firm on the N. P. it would be nearer the mark.

TRENT VALLEY NAVIGATION.

Visit of the Montreal Deputation.

EXAMINATION OF THE ROUTE.

From Harwood to the Mouth of the Severn and Return.

Discussion of the Project—Both Sides of the Question—Results and Incidents of the Trip.

As indicated last week the waters of the Trent Valley Canal, so-called, were examined during the course of the week by a delegation from Montreal, representing the Harbor Commissioners and the Council of that city. On Wednesday evening last Messrs. H. H. Smith, Secretary of the T. V. C. Committee, with Mr. M. Sanderson, Warden of the County and Messrs. John Carnegie and I. H. Brock left by train for Port Hope en route to Cobourg, to meet the distinguished visitors at that point, reaching Cobourg by the steamer Spartan at 9 p. m. The Montreal party arrived at Cobourg G. T. R. station by the morning train west, and were at once taken in charge by the Peterborough delegation. Breakfast had been arranged for, but the party had anticipated that hospitality by having breakfast on the train, (dining cars being now a regular institution on the G. T. R.) and a start was at once made for the Cobourg Railway train, which through the kindness of Mr. Barber, the Superintendent of the Railway, had been brought down to the G. T. R. track, and the party set out for Harwood. Having now time to count noses, we find the following on board: Mr. Andrew Robertson, Chairman of the Montreal Board of Harbor Commissioners, and Messrs. J. B. Rolland, and Henry Belmer, Commissioners; Aldermen Hood, Gillman and Laurent, representing the Montreal City Council, James Gordon, Reeve, C. Francis and T. McCabe of Trenton, G. M. Kinghorn, of the Montreal Transportation Company, and the following representatives of the press, Geo. Young, Trenton Courier; Rob't White, Montreal Gazette; J. Harper, Toronto Globe; W. T. B. Preston, Toronto Mail — Chambers, Montreal Star, and C. Fruit, Montreal Witness. After a rapid ride through a charming country, with evidences on either side of abundant crops, among which the farmers were busy haying, and the wheat and barley was fast assuming the golden hue of harvest, the party arrived where they found the steamer King-Fisher in charge of Commodore Calcutt, and having on board Mr. T. D. Belcher, Superintendent of Government Works on the Trent, and from this point the examination of the scheme commenced. Charts were produced, maps laid out, Government reports, engineers' estimates, &c., brought into requisition, and an energetic discussion of the merits of the scheme entered upon, which, indeed, was maintained during the whole trip. Mr. Rolland, of the Harbor Commissioners, had thoughtfully provided a case of nautical instruments, which were brought into frequent use and enabled the gentlemen to observe with greater distinctness the magnificent water stretches and the splendid country skirting the lake and the borders of the Otonabee. n due course the King-Fisher, after a rapid trip, landed the passengers where cabs where in waiting, conveying them thence to the Huffman House. Here an excellent dinner was waiting, prepared in mine host Huffman's usual irreproachable style, and having been joined by Mr. D. W. Dumble and Mr. D. G. Hatton, who were to proceed with them over the balance of the journey, all enjoyed a comfortable and hearty meal. A short time was then given to visiting about the town, the Montreal visitors expressing themselves as much pleased with the appearance of both business streets and the portion devoted to private residences. Time was, however, too limited to allow of much of a stay, and in the course of an hour the party were "all aboard" for Bridgenorth whither they were taken by cabs supplied from Messrs. White, Morgan & Sharan and Henthorn. Good time was made over the six miles of excellent roadway which led to Bridgenorth, and the visitors had an opportunity of observing the splendid farms of Smith in their best aspect. None of the visitors had ever passed through Ontario except by the Grand Trunk, and much surprise was expressed at the evidence of so much agricultural wealth in the interior of the Province. On arriving they found the steamer Vanderbilt, of Lindsay, in charge of Capt. Crandell, awaiting them. A splendid sail was enjoyed up Chemong Lake, a beautiful stretch of water, through Buckhorn Lake, and Little Pigeon Lake, past the classic village of Bobcaygeon by lockage, into and through Sturgeon Lake, one of the handsomest of the northern waters, and up to Fenelon Falls. A splendid opportunity was afforded of obtaining an idea of the unrivalled natural navigation which extends west and north from the Trent waters, and ocular demonstration given, verifying the advantage of the route as set forth by its promoters, in the very short connections which would require to be made to make the navigation continuous throughout. On board the Vanderbilt, at Bridgenorth, was a portion of an excursion party of the Presbyterian Church of Lindsay in charge of Rev. Mr. Hastie and on reaching Oak Orchard Beach, a very pretty summer resort and pic-nic ground, the balance of the excursionists were taken on board. Altogether a very pleasant time was spent, Aid. Gilman organizing a Sunday School, and leading the juveniles in a choice selection of Moody & Sankey contributing much to the edification of the company. We had the unexpected pleasure of a pic-nic supper on board, with some old friends from Lindsay, a treat in both ways that was duly appreciated.

AT PETERBOROUGH,

FENELON FALLS

was finally reached, about 9 o'clock, and after a farewell shake hands with the excursionists the T. V. C. party landed and were conveyed in 'busses to the the town. Through some misunderstanding on the part of the local committee here, delay in securing accomodation ensued, but finally all were comfortably lodged, and the wants of the inner man properly attended to. Most of the party were lodged at the MacArthur House. Messrs. Hatton, Belcher, White and our representative had the good fortune to find room in the Mansion House, a splendid hotel, capitally conducted by Mr Ingram, who understands his business and made his guests very comfortable indeed. Messrs. Smith and Dumble were indebted to the hospitality of Mr. Green a former resident of Peterborough. Shortly after the arrival of the party at Fenelon Falls, a terrific lightning storm set in accompanied with violent rain, which continued during the night. The morning of Friday broke clear and pleasant enough, however, and the party at once set out to examine the fine scenery afforded by the Falls, by which the waters of Cameron lake find their descent to the Sturgeon lake. The extensive mills of R. C. Smith & Co., were visited, and the slides where large quantities of logs were passing down. Then came the unwelcome intelligence that there was

NO BOAT TO BE HAD.

It had been intended that the party should pursue the navigation up Cameron and Balsam Lakes to Coboconk, but it appeared that the boat had gone up Balsam Lake with a pic-nic party, on Thursday afternoon, and had got stuck on on a rock, where they had to pass the night in the terrible storm. Waggons were however speedily brought into requisition, and fortified by a good square meal at Mr. Isaram's, we set forth for the location of Jimuel Brigg's famed University. A drive of seven miles took the party to Rosedale, at the junction between the two lakes, and here we learned from a man who had just brought his wife off in a row, that the steamer was still held fast on a rock. From there to Coboconk a rain set in, which made the party anything but comfortable, but all kept up good spirits, till and the party put up at Mrs. Kay's hotel for dinner. This essential feature of the day's proceedings had been telegraphed for by Mr. H. H. Smith, who acted throughout as chaperon and purveyor, guide, philosopher and friend of the expedition, but the telegram only reached Cobocconk a half an hour after the arrival of the party. "Pot luck" was appealed to with good success, and in a short time abundance of ham and eggs, which seem to be in the north country the highest attribute of luxury, was pinced before the crowd After regaling themselves on these dainties the party took to the

COBOCONK WAS REACHED,

and were soon en route for Woodville. On the way down the additional features of the Trent navigation scheme which had been brought under observation were gone into and fully discussed, the party without exception agreeing in expressing surprise at the wonderful reaches of navigation provided by nature, through these northern counties. In due course we reached Woodville Junction where we found a special of in waiting, in charge of Mr. A. White, the popular and energetic Passenger Superintendent of the road. Running at the rate of 26 miles an hour the party proceeded without stoppage to Midland City. The trip up from Woodville to the northern terminus of the Midland is one of the most delightful in Canada. A splendid view was had from the cars of Lake Simcoe, the finest of our inland lakes, and thence to the Narrows between lakes Simcoe and Couchiching, the road passed through a rich level of the finest agricultural country, presenting everywhere most luxurious crops with the finest woodland. Crossing the Narrows, Orillia was passed, presenting a charming appearance, and about five o'clock was reached. Here the party put up at the Gladstone's Hotel, and a capital supper was soon prepared by Mrs. Gladstone the hostess, and was done ample justice to by an hungry a lot of excursionists as ever sat foot in Midland. After a short stroll about town the party returned to the hotel and were waited upon by the Midland Council, consisting of the Reeve, Mr S. Fraser, Councillors G. Chew, S. Chew, M. Nicholson, and N. Cootsniah, with Mr. L. McFarlane, editor of the Midland Argosy. These gentlemen tendered the hospitality of the town to the deputation and made them their guests. They warmly appreciate the importance of the scheme to their interests, and took an active part in the lengthy discussion which occupied the attention of the party during the evening. In the morning the party visited the town, which presented a thriving appearance and is, without doubt, destined to become the most important centre of trade and population on the Georgian Bay. There are two extensive mills, with a capacity of ten and twelve million feet, and a large number of buildings in progress. The Midland R. R.

GRAIN ELEVATOR

for the accommodation of the western grain trade is in course of erection, and when it is once in working order will give a considerable impetus to the business of the place, by affording employment. and will give an important impulse to the progress of this enterprising railway. Shortly after eight o'clock the party paid a visit of inspection to having the use of the elegant steam yacht of Mr. Thomas Buck, Manager of the Georgian Bay Lumber Company. The Montreal Harbor Commissioners, after an examination of this vast sheltered basin of water, were most enthusiastic and unanimous in giving it the credit of being the finest harbor of America, as it undoubtedly is. All agreed that, with its natural advantage of being almost on the direct line to Montreal from Chicago and the western ports, with suitable elevators at each end, and with the use of so unequalled a harbor, the Midland is destined to become the favorite and most successful rail connection for the movement of western traffic. The elevators are to have a storage capacity of 600,000 bushels, and will be completed, that at Port Hope in September next, and that at Midland City in the February following. Mr. White stated that 120,000 million feet of lumber would be forwarded by the Midland Railway this year. The boat steamed up to the mouth of the Severn River and where the party landed and found the Midland special in waiting for them. A short stay was made here to allow the party to inspect the Georgian Bay Lumber Company's model mill, and the route was taken again to ORILLIA.

Here the party were taken in carriages to the Orillia House, one of the best conducted hotels in the Province, where a capital dinner was in waiting, which was discussed with zest and appreciation, convincing everyone that mine host Kelly's reputation as a caterer is founded on a substantial basis. An hour was spent in viewing the town, which is one of the most charming spots in the province, located at the foot of and overlooking Couchiching lake, the prettiest of the northern lakes. Proceeding on the way, the deputation made their next halt where they were met by Mayor Taylor, Mr. S. McMurtry, Mr. C. D. Barr, our enterprising confrere of the Lindsay Post, and Mr. Flood. The Montreal people were taken in carriages round the town, and expressed themselves highly pleased with the evidences of business prosperity.

The party then proceeded to Millbrook, where on board the cars an impromptu meeting was organized and some exchanged between the Trent Valley Committe and their visitors.

Ald. Hood extended the heartiest thanks for the kindness and courtesies which had been extended to the Montreal visitors, and stated that he had been very much impressed with the magnificent water stretches they had visited and of which they had never had any adequate idea. He wished them good speed in their enterprise, and thought, though it might not be undertaken as soon as they expected, it would sooner or later be accomplished.

Mr. Andrew Robertson reiterated the appreciation expressed by his colleague of the handsome manner in which they had been treated and his admiration of the water ways they had visited. Still it was to be looked at as a question of money, and they could not be expected to arrive at a conclusion without the fullest data respecting its expense and feasibility. In view of the enlargement of the Welland canal to fourteen feet he thought a five foot canal would be hardly able to compete, and it was a question whether it would be wise to undertake this canal before they had seen how far the Welland would answer the expectations with which it had been constructed.

Mr. Sanderson, Warden of Peterboro', expressed his satisfaction with the visit of the gentlemen from Montreal, and was sure that they had seen enough to merit their serious consideration of this scheme. He reminded them that it was not a canal which was to be built, but a few works to connect the stretches of water they had seen, and make existing navigation continuous. He believed the interests of Montreal would be greatly advanced by this enterprise, and had no doubt that it would, in spite of all obstacles, be successfully consummated.

Mr. Dumble pointed out the reasons why the canal was being agitated now. In view of the vast trade which was being developed in the North-West, in a few years that trade would exceed the capacity of existing facilities for moving it. It would not enter into competition with the Welland canal, but would be the means of securing to Canada a large trade beyond the capacity of the Welland Canal which, if not provided for, would go to the United States. In view of the experience and success of the Erie Canal, which was only a ditch of six feet, he felt sure that these magnificent water stretches, connected with five feet locks for barges, would be found adequate for all requirements. Welland Canal interests and Toronto interests were not disposed to look favorably on it, and it was to Montreal, which would be principally benefitted, that we looked for aid and co-operation. He believed fair consideration of the enterprise, aided by what they had seen by personal observation, would ultimately convince the Montrealers that this canal was a necessity for commerce and trade from which they would derive the chief benefit.

Mr. Young, on behalf of Trenton, spoke warmly on behalf of the enterprise.

Mr. Carnegie thanked the representatives of Montreal for their presence. He believed the speedy development of the North-West would soon require the construction of this route as a necessity of commerce, and hoped their Montreal friends would consider what they had seen and heard, and give the subject that careful and mature consideration which he believed would convince them that their interests lie in the speediest possible construction of the canal.

Mr. Belmer hoped they in Montreal would have an opportunity of returning the courtesy and hospitality they had received at the hands of the gentlemen promoting this scheme. He had been very strongly impressed with the importance of the water stretches they had visited, and had no doubt they would one day be utilized in affording additional facilities to trade. He would advise them, however, to go for something more than a five foot canal if they wanted the project to be successful.

Mr. J. B. Rolland also expressed his hearty sense of the kindness they had received, and his gratification at finding in the west here such a large country and fine people, whose energy and progress was shown by the fine towns and the prosperous country they had passed through. He thought with the spirit they had shown they most ultimately succeed, and advised them to keep up their agitation till they did succeed.

The train being compelled to move at this junction a shake hands all round ensued, and the gentlemen from Peterboro' bade adieu to the Montreal and Trenton people and returned to town by the evening train, after an exceedingly pleasant and profitable trip.

WHAT WAS LEARNED DURING THE JOURNEY.

It must not be supposed that the journey was one devoted to pleasure, though it certainly was a pleasure to have the opportunity of viewing the magnificent country traversed, and the splendid stretches of navigation brought under review, while the thoughtful provision made by Mr. Smith and the Canal Committee for the comfort of the excursionists, made the journey a most agreeable one. During the whole route, careful examination was made of the character and extent of the navigation, and the obstacles to be overcome to make the short connections necessary to make the navigation continuous, and the merits of the scheme pro and con, were discussed in an impartial and thorough manner. We may briefly summarise the information brought under the notice of the visitors. The project was first brought into notice in 1832, and in 1835 Mr. H. N. Baird C. E., was authorized by Sir John Colborne to "examine the most eligible route "for a canal between Lake Simcoe "and Rice Lake, by a series of running "levels," and to report "respecting the "practicability and expense of connecting "these lakes." Mr. Baird made his examination and estimate upon a canal with locks 124 x 33 feet, and 5 feet depth. Mr. Baird recommended a scheme almost identical with that now proposed, and reported it practicable and feasible, and the cost to be not more than $1,052,000. This estimate, it must be remembered, was based upon the pick and shovel facilities for work which then existed, and would be materially reduced by the modern appliances now available for public works. Mr. Baird reported: "I really do feel an inadequacy to do the subject the justice its importance demands, whether considered in a political or a commercial point of view," and at considerable length pointed out the advantages it offered for internal improvement, and for the movement of the western trade for which he declared it to be the natural outlet. No doubt had not the trouble of 1837 intervened, this work would at that time have been gone on with and completed. Since the revival of the project, another survey and estimate has been carefully made by Mr. Stark C. E. whose examination confirms Mr. Baird's recommendations, with but two changes, suggested by economy of construction and shortening of navigation, being the substitution of cuts for a canal, in the place of the river, from Chisholm Rapids to Crow Bay, near Trenton and from Katchewanooek and Chemong lakes. By these two cuts a saving in distance of 32 miles would be gained. In both cases the conformation of the ground is reported favorable to the change. Mr. Stark reports the total cost of construction of the 60 miles of canal to be constructed between Trenton and Lake Huron to be $2,500,000. There are 136 miles of navigation, already practicable, and the number of locks to be built would be 57, making with the 5 already built and available, 62 in all. By the route followed by the party they were enabled to keep the connection of the various stretches of navigation almost constantly in view, and to obtain ocular evidence of the feasibility of the scheme as laid out upon the map. The engineering obstacles to be overcome to make a complete continuity of navigation, and the method of overcoming them, were explained at each point by Mr. Belcher, as well as the great natural reservoirs lying in the lakes to the north, all easily under control, and affording an inexhaustible means of supplying water to the canal.

OBJECTIONS TO THE SCHEME.

Mr. Kinghorn, who accompanied the party, represented Kingston and Lake Ontario interests—which would of course suffer by the diversion of the carrying trade from the dangerous and circuitous route round the lakes, to the more direct still water navigation from Midland Harbor to Bay Quinte and the St. Lawrence—was very fertile in objections to a scheme which he is interested in opposing, and though the objections were rather courted than otherwise, as they afforded the opportunity of controverting them, it is to be regretted that they so impressed the reporter of the Globe with the expedition, that that journal gave but one side of the question, and that adverse to the canal. Mr. Kinghorn objected 1st, that a five foot canal would not be sufficient to command the trade; 2nd, that the number of locksages was so great that no advantages would be gained over the Welland; 3rd, that it would be unwise to go to the expense of building this canal to compete with the Welland, in which so much money has been expended.

THE OTHER SIDE OF THE QUESTION.

Mr. Kinghorn admitted that, had the country to make a choice to-day between two canal systems, the Welland and the Trent, the latter was vastly preferable, thus admitting the great commercial advantages which are attached to this enterprise. As to the contention that a five foot canal would be inadequate, it was pointed out that the Erie Canal which is a mere ditch, and not such a route of navigation as the Trent, has successfully competed with all opposition in the movement of grain from the west, and that with the superior advantages of distance and navigation, it is a reasonable inference that the Trent route would be equally if not more successful. In regard to the number of lockages, it was shown that the Welland canal has 40 miles of lockage. With the aid of the long reaches of first-class navigation, there would be so much saving in the movement of tows of barges that between the Severn and Trenton there would be economy in time as compared with an equal distance on the Welland. Locks would be constructed with a view of speedy passage, and tows of 15 to 20 barges could be handled with ease, each barge carrying a load for two railway trains. It was shown, moreover, that a most important saving in the cost of moving grain from the western ports to Montreal would be effected by bringing the insurance of cargoes to the minimum, as the risk of the dangerous navigation of Lake Erie and Lake Ontario would be avoided, by the adoption of still water navigation from Georgian Bay to Montreal. As to the question of competition with the Welland it was shown that if the enlargement of that canal enables it to compete successfully for the traffic already in existence, that canal would be compiled to its fullest capacity. With the continuous expansion of grain production in the North-West, which from this time forth must continue to develop in extent and importance, a vast trade would open to the Trent Canal by the time of its completion which would not in any way bring it into competition with the Welland, and for which the Trent Canal offers the cheapest, the most favorable, and the most direct outlet to the seaboard. As to the question of cost, taking the outside computation, $3,000,000, as a basis, at the present rate of borrowing the canal would cost the country $150,000 a year for interest and sinking fund for thirty years. It is reasonably considered that the direct advantages to the trade and commerce of the country, the facilities afforded to our internal trade, the development which must ensue in the country opened up by a direct and cheap route to Montreal, the water-privileges created and the cheapening of freight for manufactured goods, for which this canal would afford the most advantageous route to the North West, which is to be our most important market for manufactures, are worth a thousand fold to the country the comparatively trifling amount required for the construction of this enterprise.

MR. KINGHORN'S MOTIVES.

It is not difficult to analyze Mr. Kinghorn's reasons for demanding a nine foot canal as a necessity in any event. He is perfectly aware that a five foot canal would be as practicable and as successful on the Trent Valley as on the Erie, but Mr. Kinghorn represented the capital which has control of the forwarding from Kingston through the St. Lawrence canals. The Trent Valley five foot barges would have no difficulty in passing through the St. Lawrence canals with their nine feet of water, but Mr. Kinghorn's eight feet barges would not find it so easy to pass through a five foot canal, and as a consequence the trade would be lost to him. In his own interest Mr. Kinghorn is no doubt right, but it is to his own interests, and not to the public interests that he looks. Hence his misleading suggestions to the confiding reporter of the Globe, and his desire to insist upon a depth of water in the Trent Valley, if built, which would accommodate, not the trade, but the barges in which his money is invested.

COMPARISON OF ADVANTAGES.

To compare the relative merits and advantages of the two routes it would be necessary to enter into a simple calculation. The time required for lockage of each barge would be six minutes, or on the 62 lockages, required by the Waubashene route, 372 minutes; that is to say, for a tow of 15 barges 5,580 minutes, or say four days. The 136 miles of clear navigation would require an additional day—five days from Georgian Bay to Kingston. From the Straits of Mackinac, or Sault St. Marie, occupies a day and a half, making 6½ days from either point to Kingston. Fifteen barges convey 12,000 bush. each, or 180,000 bushels, which would be moved between those points in that time. From the same points for Welland Canal navigation shipment for propellor and consort occupies 7½ days. The capacity of a propellor going through the Welland is 15,000 bushels, and consort 30,000 bushels, so that it takes 7½ days to move 35,000 bushels from the Straits of Mackinac or Sault St. Marie to Kingston by Mr. Kinghorn's route. By the Trent Valley scheme 145,000 more bushels would be moved through in one day less time. The following

NOTES EN ROUTE.

Retribution overtook Mr. Kinghorn on the Georgian Bay, and blew his hat away upon the waters.

Ham and eggs seemed to be the principal article of hotel diet in the north country.

One excursionist lost his over-coat, another his valise, and another his voice. All have been recovered.

Seven miles of drive through a rainstorm from Rosedale to Cobocconk enlivened the tour and the tourists.

Peterborough members of the deputation had to bunk in the cars at Midland.

The thanks of all the party are due to Mr. A. White of the Midland Railway for the excellent arrangements made for the comfort and accommodation of the tourists. The excellent condition of the Midland Road was remarked.

Several excursionists were badly used up by sea-sickness on the Georgian Bay.

The boat which was to have taken the party from Fenelon Falls to Cobocconk, started out with a pic-nic party for Camerons lake on Thursday afternoon. It got stuck on a rock and the pic-nicers had to pass the night in one of the most furious storms of the season. Where the party passed Rosedale at ten o'clock on Friday a gentleman who had just brought his wife off in a punt reported the steamer still hard and fast.

Pilgrims for the North—Huckleberries—Mending their ways—Saving life—The Fire.

The steamer Cruiser brought down some 40 pails of huckleberries one trip last week, the work of some camping parties from this place.

The road master is making a good job of the new sidewalk on Church street and one which will be appreciated by not only the residents in the north part of the village, but by all the young people, as it is the principal promenade of the place.

Large numbers of strangers are passing through the village on their way to our back lakes to camp out. The islands of Stoney lake are dotted in every direction with tents, and in the evenings the water is covered with canoes, filled with merry parties out fishing or enjoying a paddle.

Our friend "Jemmie" Buchanan, engineer of the steamer Cruiser, has placed another feather in his cap by his gallant efforts to save life. Last week he saved R. C. Strickland's little boy from drowning; this week Dr. Bell's. The children were up the lake with Mrs. Bell on the Cruiser and when near Hurricane Point, Master Allen, a lad of about nine years old, while playing with the tow line attached to a crib the steamer was towing, fell overboard. The little fellow swam for the tow-line and held on, but upon the boat being stopped, which was done at once, the line took him down. But Jimmie was over on the first alarm and reached him just in time to prevent him going under the crib, and held him up until the small boat reached them. The little fellow was soon all right, but will not try walking the tow line again. It is needless to say how much the Dr. and Mrs. Bell appreciate "Jimmie's" courage and promptitude in saving the child.

Fire has again visited our village and swept the steam mill out of existence, it was first observed about 8 p. m. and seemed to come from the board-way. In a few moments the entire mill was a sheet of flame, and beyond all help, no thes all efforts, were directed to preventing the fire spreading to the lumber piles. Many refused to assist, being afraid to go near the fire for fear the mill boilers would explode. About 10 p. m. a special train with the Peterboro' steam fire engine arrived and assisted to drown out the fire so that all danger to the lumber was past. Gangs of men were employed all Tuesday digging up the burning sawdust and getting out the fire brands, so that all is now safe. It will prove a great loss to the village, but the men employed are not so badly off, as all were offered work next morning at the Red mills, and other places. Ross & Co. have an insurance on the mill to the extent of $10,000 as follows : $3,500 in the Royal, $3,500 in the Phœnix and $3,000 in the Canada Fire Marine Insurance Companies.

The free bathing stage to be placed on the river near Blackfriars bridge, London, will be ready in three weeks, and will cost $500. It will be 60 feet by 80 feet, and will have a depth of water of 3 feet 6 inches at one end and 7 feet at the other. There will be a walk around the bath two feet wide, and two dressing rooms.

Henry Ward Beecher, on Sunday, in his Plymouth church pulpit, made these emphatic declarations : "I don't hold the theory of the atonement. I reject the Roman ceremony. I hold a grander theory. If the record of God's works in the infantile period of the world are applied to us all will go over. It is a gigantic lie that men were created and then fell; that in Adam and Eve the human race fell; the system of the Old Testament is not the system for to-day.

MUNRO & ALEXANDER

JUST WHAT WE THINK.

Dr. Franklin's maxim was a wise one:—"Nothing is cheap that you do not want," to which might be added:—"buy just what you want to get along with at first, as it is only by experience you can tell what will be the waste of yourself and family." If you spend all your money now, you will find you have purchased many things which are not actually needed, and have little money left to get many things which will surely be wanted. This for the heads of families to ponder on.

WE MAKE THESE REMARKS

in view of the possible BONANZAN just now offered to the public in the way of the so called Clearing Sales.

NOW IT STANDS TO REASON

—and the close observ'r and careful buyer will readily admit the truth of the statement—that if a stock of goods is purchased with a due appreciation of what the public need, and disposed of over the counter in the regular course of every day trade, there will be no necessity for Clearing Sales. This is just the position we stand in to-day.

OUR STOCK IS REDUCED,

and we are glad to be able to say so. Still, we have a nice assortment of goods to meet the present wants of customers, but nothing to carry over until next season. We knew our stock was purchased at prices that could not BE BEATEN, and therein was the key to our success, and further, our prosperity is mainly due to the popularity we have attained among people every where on account of the excellent character of the goods, and the VERY REASONABLE PRICES at which we have offered them. Hence we shall advertise no

The Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, JULY 22, 1880.

The Fire Engine.—Now caution here for the steamer has been ordered from Mr. Blackwood, of Toronto—certainly not before it was needed.

"Tuskerry."—Emphatic testimony of its super excellence is by it. Delightfully refreshing. Every body uses "Tuskerry." 52-18ins Music.—The Band gave their usual open air concert on Friday evening last, to a large and appreciative audience, in the Court House Park.

C. O. F.—Peterborough and Lakefield Courts of Foresters have arranged for a joint pic-nic to take place on Thursday next.

Dislocated.—Friday last was an unlucky day. In addition to other accidents, a little boy, son of Mr. John Smith, of Ashburnham, fell from a fence, dislocating his left arm at the elbow.

Fire Alarm.—Quite an excitement was caused in town on Monday night by a fire alarm which was sounded to collect the firemen to take the engine to Lakefield.

The Jolly Pumpkeeners.—On Friday last Major Milligan, Pensions Staff Officer, paid off the pensioners of this district. The usual amount of old reminiscences was washed down with the usual quenching of beer.

The Boss Saw Again.—Fred. McLennan, a young man who works in Mr. J. S. Rogers' mill, at Ashburnham, had one of the fingers of his right hand cut off last Friday by being brought into contact with a circular saw.

Runaway.—Mr. Wand's team enjoyed a lively runaway on Friday last, from the corner of Hunter and George streets up to the Post Office. The load of flooring was scattered promiscuously.

Got Shod.—Those who desire to secure stylish, durable and substantial foot-wear can get the best and most fashionable goods at S. White's, George street, near Simcoe. Mr. is selling out a handsome stock for what it will bring. 52-tf Turned Up.—Mr. R. A. Carew, of Chicago, who left the home of his father, the late Joseph Carew, thirty-two years ago, at the age of fourteen, and had not been heard of since, surprised his relatives in town over a week ago by paying them a flying visit.

Correction.—Mr. F. W. Banks, Foreman of Fountain Hose Company, Cobourg, writes to the Sentinel-Star to say that the report copied from the Review of the Trenton celebration, as published in the Sentinel-Star, is incorrect.

Worried by Dogs.—Last week Mr. Jos. Walton of Smith had twelve sheep worried by dogs and on the same night Mr. Wm. Tully had three of those peaceful animals harried by these canine depredators. Steps should be taken to exterminate these noxious animals, which are giving a bad reputation to all the decent dogs in town.

A Golden Opportunity should never be neglected—therefore those requiring cheap, comfortable and durable wear for their feet should not fail to examine Mr. W. J. Larmour's stock, previous to the closing of his great clearing sale of imported and ready-made work. Remember the stock is all new and this season's goods, and is being offered at prices much below the present ruling wholesale figures. 52-tf

Midland Railway of Canada.—Traffic receipts for week ending July 11th, 1880, were:—Passengers and mails, $6,215.74; freight, $4,398.; $8; total for week, $7,102.36. For the corresponding week in 1879.—Passengers and mails, $3,726.41; freight, $3,339.70; total for week, $6,069.11.—Increase, $1,033.45. Aggregate from 1st of January, 1880, $163,621.57. Increase over 1879, $44,021 01.

P. O. Money Orders to the States.—A change in the tariff on post-office money orders to the United States has been made. Formerly on all orders up to $25 25 cents was charged, and on sums from $25 to $50 50 cents was charged. The tariff now is 10 cents on all sums up to $10; 20 cents on sums from $10 to $20; 30 cents on sums from $20 to $30; 40 cents on sums from $30 to $40, and 50 cents on sums from $40 to $50. The orders now issued are the same as used in the Dominion.

Vagrants.—The approach of the work on the Grand Junction Railway has brought to our doors the brigade of tramps who invariably follow works of this kind. Several have already been before the Police Magistrate, and complaints of their misdoings are loud and frequent. We would recommend the Mayor at once to appoint two or three special constables to assist the police authorities during the next few weeks in protecting the public from this dangerous and undesirable class of visitors.

Good News.—No more Chills and Ague in this section. Our Druggists are selling an article called "AGUE CONQUEROR." It is about the only satisfactory preparation sold for the cure of Fever and Ague, Dumb Chills, Intermittent or Bilious Fevers. The Proprietor of the AGUE CONQUEROR has used but little energy to make this medicine known, and yet its sale is immense in Ague Districts. It purifies the blood, Liver, and other Secretory Organs so effectualy that the Chills do not return even where persons have had them for years. Entirely vegetable preparation. Price, 50 cents and $1.00 per Bottle. Two doses will stop the chill. 52-16ins

Whoa, Emma!—The lively paragrapher of the Review gives an elaborate and graphic account of the proceedings of "a regular thoroughbred comedy company," which our contemporary says: "kicked different to all other horses and makes we have seen kick, it let fly the rear feet at the same time towards the four points of the compass." We were under the impression that Maccagno was a Prince and not a horse, neither is such the "four points of the compass," in an equestrian which puts us to confusion, and leaves a bewildering sort of impression that our early education must have been neglected.

Off his Base.—Mr. W. L. Orde, of Bentinck, writes a long letter to the Review, of which the following is the initial paragraph:

"I notice in one of the late issues of the Peterborough EXAMINER, a resume of a lecture delivered at Peterborough by Mr. R. L. Tupper, of the Canada Pacific survey."

We are not aware that Mr. R. L. Tupper ever delivered a lecture in Peterborough. If he did no resume of it ever appeared in a recent or any other issue of the EXAMINER. Ask consequence, Mr. W. L. Orde never saw the same in the EXAMINER. Evidently he is laboring under a delusion of some sort.

A Flattering Opinion.—Referring to a recent excursion from Port Hope to Lloyd-Wind, the Guide of that town says:—

"We take great pleasure also in inviting the attention of any who contemplate a holiday trip to that most picturesque route of taking the Midland Route to Peterborough, and Ontario's line of steamers to Lloyd-Wind. On the occasion of our trip, enhanced by Our Host and Pioneer Editor, one could not help but admire the scenery, as the boat in passing Hiller and Cobourg, the latter of which presents a very fine appearance, and the scenery all down the lake, which is unsurpassed, of course, excepting Lloyd-Wind, which is charming beyond description. We would say to all who contemplate a trip to Peterborough, or more all who require a change of air, that they will receive the most courteous treatment at the hands of Mr. Hall."

Board of Education.

A special meeting of the Board of Education will be held to-morrow (Friday) evening.

R. G. Stratton.—The annual picnic of the Rev. Charleton Baldwin Sabbath-school will take place on Tuesday next. The Golden-Eye will leave Peterborough at 7 a.m., call at Ashburnham and proceed to Lloyd-Wind. Tickets 75c. for adults; 50c. for children and connected with the schools. All are invited. 52-2c

Rideout House, Lakefield.—Mr. James Mackinnon, for several years an efficient employee in the Hutchison House, has leased the Rideout House, Lakefield, and thoroughly refitted and refurnished it. Mr. Mackinnon's courteous and obliging manner, and his competency to cater for the requirements of his patrons, will, we believe, secure for him a large share of the patronage of the travelling public.

Lost and Found.—On Tuesday the 20th inst. one of the old pioneers of Otonabee departed this life. The late Michael Creagh settled in Smithboro from Tipperary, forty-five years ago, and during that period to the day of his death bore an irreproachable and upright character. He leaves a family of five sons to perpetuate his name and good reputation.

Assessment Appeals.—On Tuesday, John Donaldson presided as the County Judges Court of Appeal, from the Court of Revision. Mr. Fenwick, on behalf of the Mechanics' Institute, argued that the property of that institution was exempt from taxation.—Decision reserved. Mr. Wood appeared for the Peterborough Club, similar argument. The Examiner will come up at next sitting to obtain the evidence of the assessors. Mr. Thomas Sanders not being present his appeals were adjourned till next sitting of the court.

The Lakefield Fire.—A telegram from some party came from Lakefield on Monday evening asking that the fire engine be sent up to that town, as the mills, village, etc., were being destroyed by fire. Some excitable individuals promptly rang the fire-bell, and the steam engine was put aboard the cars, with the fire company, and transported to Lakefield, where they found the fire out and the people nearly all gone to bed. The steamer played on the embers of the fire, while the Hearts of Lakefield expressed his apprehension lest the village should be obliged to pay for the coal they burned. Sympathy with a neighbor in misfortune is a common duty, and those who sent the steamer up were actuated by the best of motives, but deploring the heavy harm of the only protection it has from fire in a serious matter and we hope the experiment will not be repeated. We understand that the mills, which originally cost the Messrs. Strickland $20,000, and were bought by J. S. Ross, of Quebec, for $30,000, were insured for $24,000 Royal, $3,500; Phœnix, $3,500; Canada and Marine, $3,000.

Correct.—The Guelph Mercury has at last awakened to the necessity of putting its foot down on the free advertising system. The practice of giving free advertising is dying out among all respectable journals, and there is no reason why it should be kept alive. It says:—"All notices appearing in the local columns of the Mercury, calling attention to public meetings or entertainments, religious services, cricket or base ball matches, or to any business matter, will be inserted only as advertisements, and charged at special rates. No distinction will be made in this class of notices." A newspaper is in private property the same as a machine shop or store, and people would think it very cheeky to enter the former and purchase anything from or driving the press and ask the proprietor to throw in an eight horse-power engine, or to purchase a pair of suspenders from the merchant and ask him to throw in a suit of clothes. This rule, if adopted by all newspapers, would be of great advantage to them.

The Keyl-Wind Response.—This remarks, the the most promising sporting event of the season in the Midland district, takes place to-day, and we believe promises to be a most successful affair. The champion cup, for amateur oarsmen, appears to be the object of keener competition, as well it might, as it is decidedly the handsomest trophy ever offered in Canada for competition in aquatic sports. The following amateurs have entered for the race: J. Donnegan, Toronto; E. Jarvis, Hamilton; J. Griffith, Bewdley; T. Wallis, Gore's Landing; A. Paton, Harwood; J. Sutherland, Stirling; and W. F. Shaw, F. Dobbin, and J. Cameron, of Peterborough. An exciting contest may be looked for. The four-oared race, which was postponed on July 1st, will be rowed between J. McClelland's crew, P. Smith coxswain, and C. Shaw's crew, C. Calcutt coxswain. For the canoe race the following will compete: H. Cook and S. Hilton, Peterborough, R. Landreville, of Keene, W. Delaney, of Cobourg, F. Beaver, of Alnwick, and Jerry Crowe, of Hiawatha, are entered.

MIDLAND CRICKET MATCH.

North v. South.

Cricketing circles seem to have awakened from the lethargy into which they had fallen, and should the comatose state of existance not return with a change of weather, a bright record may be expected. The match between the North and South will have good results. The initiative in a series of matches has been taken, and a little energy and trouble will continue what has been so auspiciously commenced. In the first innings for the North, the batting of Crosswaite, Logan and Stratton was considerably commented on. The bowling for the South as no time was far above the average. In the second innings Mr. Scadding, of Orillia, put together the top score, closely followed by Stratton and Rogers. No member of the team for the South got into double figures in the first innings. In the second, Mr. Hayden, of Cobourg, batted carefully and in good form for 18. The bowling of the North, especially Mr. Logan's, was excellent, and prevented the acquisition of large scores. The fielding of both teams is worthy of notice. Mr. Ray, of Whitby, Mr. Allan, of Millbrook, and Mr. Montgomery, of Peterborough, distinguishing themselves above others. The Umpires were Dr. Geo. Burnham and Mr. Fred. Hamlain. The quickness of their decisions and the lucidity of subsequent explanations were fully appreciated. On Thursday evening a dinner was given to the cricketers, in the grounds of Mr. R. D. Rogers, by the ladies, and was graced by the presence of many fair devotees of the game. Short speeches were made by Messrs. Kirchhoffer, Baines, the Rev. V. Clement and Mr. Scadding. Subsequently a meeting was held by the cricketers, at which it was resolved to play a return match at Cobourg in the first week in August. The following is the score:—

PERSONAL.

—Mr. S. E. Dawson, of Norwood, we are pleased to be able to say, is recovering from his attack of sickness. Dr. Everett left for Toronto on Friday evening.

—J. F. White, Esq., of Kingston, has been in town during the past week, visiting his cousin here, Mr. J. F. Austin.

—Mr. O. B. Sharpe, after a six successful season in Burlington, Iowa, returned to Peterborough on Saturday evening.

TOWN COUNCIL.

Paying the County Assessed—Spaulding's Bay—Bonused for $5,000—Town Statements, etc., etc.

The Council held a special meeting on Monday evening, His Worship the Mayor in the chair. Present:—Councillors Cahill, Smith, McNaughton, Parker, Telford, Douglas, Tunis, Marsden and Robertson.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed.

The MAYOR explained that the reason for calling the meeting a week before the usual time was that a communication had been received from the County demanding payment of the sum due under the award for Court House improvements. The Council of the County looked for this money to pay their share of the Bobcaygeon Bridge award, and they desired immediate payment of the sum.

A communication was received from the Six Nation Indians, enclosing grant toward the Rosst Memorial Fund.

A petition from Rev. V. Clement and eleven others, asked that steps be taken to have Spaulding's Bay filled up.

A petition from John Burnham, M.P., and others, asked for improvements on the boundary line between the town and North Monaghan.

An account of $5 from Mrs. Thurston, for "washing Wm. Noble," was ordered to be paid.

An account of $15.50, from Wm. Hamilton, was referred to the Finance Committee.

Mr. Newburn was in attendance in reference to the boundary line petition, and on motion the matter was referred to the Street and Bridge Committee.

FINANCE COMMITTEE REPORT.

Mr. SMITH read the following report of the Finance Committee:—

The Finance Committee beg leave to recommend the payment of the following accounts:—Toker & Co., when certified, $127.32; J. Pappin, $1.50; Gas Company, $12.50; also payment of the sum of $2,126, with interest, being the share of the town towards the improvement upon the Court House. The Committee have invested the claim made by Mr. F. W. Hall, and find that he has paid to this corporation the sum of $24.84, partly upon property leased to the Government, and partly upon his income as inspector of Weights and Measures. This being exempt they recommend repayment of the said sum. They also recommend that the application of D. W. Dumble for remission of taxes upon property occupied as a pound be granted.

On motion of Mr. SMITH, seconded by Mr. MCNAUGHTON, the report was adopted.

Mr. ROBERTSON moved, seconded by Mr. MERSDEN.—That the Clerk be instructed to request the Commissioners of the Town Trust to make a demand upon the President and the late President and Mr. Dumble, for the $2,600 advanced to the Toronto and Ottawa railway company.—Carried.

The By-law authorizing the borrowing of money from the Bank for current expenses was introduced and passed through its different stages.

Mr. Donaldson having declined to act as arbitrator in regard to the equalization of the school rate in that part of Douro joined to the town for school purposes, Mr. Carnegie was appointed in his place.

Mr. PATERSON moved, seconded by Mr. SMITH.—That Mr. Madden be paid the sum of $20 per month on account of his street watering contract.

Mr. CAHILL moved, seconded by Mr. MCNAUGHTON.—That Messrs. Towle, Paterson, McNaughton, Smith and Deane be a Special Committee to ascertain and report upon what terms the South Reserve was granted to the Corporation.

Mr. CAHILL said that some years ago the town had represented to the Government that Spaulding Bay was a source of disease and sickness to the town, and especially the lower part of it, and they asked the Government to grant it to the town that it might be filled up and the evil removed. On these representations the Government made the grant to the town, but so far from carrying out their promise the town had never done anything towards filling up the Bay and removing the nuisance, though they had sold $25,000 worth of the property.

Mr. TOOLE thought the town was not bound to anything in the patent issued to them for the reserve.

The motion carried.

On motion of Mr. SMITH, a By-law was passed authorizing the issue of $5,000 debentures to meet a like amount of debentures maturing on the 30th July.

A conversational discussion ensued of a very edifying description, concerning nuisances in Spaulding's Bay and elsewhere, resulting in a motion passing ordering the Town Clerk and Health Inspector to have the public building at the foot of Charlotte street disposed of.

Mr. Collins was heard in explanation of the position of the North Monaghan Council and the boundary improvements, after which the Council adjourns ed.

Peterborough Abroad.—Mr. Alex. Elliott, is we see by the telegrams, registered at the Canadian Office at London. We have received papers from Rotterdam, Holland, which indicate that Mr. Elliott has commenced his continental trip.

Cows at Large.—Many are the complaints that are continually being made of the number of cows that are allowed to run at large throughout the town. When will our Town Parents become aware of this nuisance and make a move in the matter?

Returned to Town.—Mr. Geo. B. Sprouls, who has for some months past been a resident of Barrington, Ia., has returned to town, and, we understand, is about to resume the practice of his profession here. Mr. Sprouls evidently had established a favorable reputation during his absence in the neighbouring Republic, for we find the following in the Gazette of Barrington:—"Mr. George B. Sprouls, for the past six months in charge of Bryan's Photograph Gallery, left for his home in Peterborough, Canada, to-day. Mr. Sprouls deserves the title of an artist in every sense, for his fine productions are not merely maps of his subjects, but real scenes of graceful posing, and intelligent manipulation of light and shade. His health prevented him from remaining here." Mr. Sprouls is open to engagement for the photographing of views of residences, groups or animals, which line of business he has made a successful specialty, as well as of enlarging in ink or water colors. He still possesses the negatives of the views of the back lakes, and parties desiring photos from the same can procure them at a very low rate. Mr. Sprouls's studio for portraits will be ready in a few days, due notice of the opening of which will be given. He has procured the most modern appliances, and is prepared to do work superior to any ever before turned out in Peterborough at prices which will defy all competition. That well-known journal, the Burlington Hawkeye, says of Mr. Sprouls: "Mr. G. B. Sprouls, a genial knight of the camera, who for the past six months has lived, moved and had his business among us, departed last night on No. 4 for his home in Peterborough, Ontario, Canada, which he reamed with a big party to see once more. The best wishes of a large number of friends go with him."

Function Falls.

ACCIDENT.—Mr. Robert Rutherford, landlord of the McArthur House in this village, met with a serious accident in a simple manner in Lindsay on Wednesday last. Stepping from the side-walk on Kent street, with the intention of crossing the road, his right foot, from some cause, got twisted, and a small bone in the ankle joint was broken. One of the two doctors sat and bandaged the injured member, and next day Mr. Rutherford was brought home.

Chastine Cox Hanged.

NEW YORK, July 16.—At 8 a. m., Chastine Cox was taken to the gallows, accompanied by five clergymen. He walked with a firm step and composed demeanour. As the procession neared the gallows, he looked at it with a seeming coolness, then his eyes dropped, and his lips moved in prayer, as he took his station beneath the cross piece. When the cord was secured, the condemned man's face fancy was immediately with the sound of the gun, and then with a rebound fell back. Then ensued convulsions of the body and and contraction of the muscles. His pinioned hands half dropped down and worked convulsively a few times, and hung limp. A minute later, the body gave several convulsive jerks and then all was still. Cox's execution was witnessed by crowds on the neighboring roofs. His neck was dislocated. The cause of the execution was cut by Lazarus, the man of the "iron nerve, who seven years ago grasped Manhelier by the throat as he lay struggling on his pavement under the Jersey City Gallows, and drew a second noose about his neck.

On Thursday a little girl about ten years of age, daughter of Mr. Patrick Doyle, of the township of Lanark, fell from a cherry tree. She died on Friday from the effects of the fall.

The Misses Allen are shipping considerable quantities of pressed hay to Britain on some of their ships.

Letter found on a Chilliwack suicide: "In this shattered nook I lay me down to die. When a man confesses his weakness I think he ought to die. I have done so. Adieu."

The agitation for the carrying of the Scott Act in Pontine County goes on with promise.

LETTER II.

SHOAL LAKE, MAY 16th, 1880.

(Camp No. 32 from 31 Gunpit.)

I wrote to you at Portage La Prairie, so I will proceed on West. We remained at the Portage two days to arrange getting the baggage to Fort Ellice by steamer, and others of the party cast theirs by freighters to Prince Albert, as the roads were so dreadful. Our party still consisting of 13 persons, as follows: two Scotchmen, Messrs. Todd and McDougall, from Glasgow, Mr. Todd had been several years in New Zealand, so could rough it G. K. There were two from Toronto—young men going to Prince Albert and Edmonton on pleasure; three from here of Toronto—one of them, a Mr. Scott, an old settler, we dub the Engineer, as he built several railways, brewed beer, and like all others from his country, could do everything before he came to this "blessed country"; we have three from Bowmanville: R. Reid,—his uncle is a surveyor, stationed at Prince Albert; Mr. H. Porter, brother of Mr. Porter, who was in the Bank of Ontario when Mr. Pest came to Peterborough, and ourselves make up the party. There are five tents, 3 carts, 3 waggons, 9 oxen and 1 horse. So we make quite a party. Mr. Todd is a good singer, and plays the flute very well. If we could raise an Ontario camp fire at night we could spend an hour or so very pleasantly, but that is out of the question, so the order of the night is turn in blankets, and off in the morning. On leaving the Portage we kept out sascrs. axes, &c., to provide tools to make rafts, etc. We had not gone a mile before we were bogged hard and fast. Poor Willis came in for a cool, as a short time before he was giving the oxen hard whip and patting them on the head, but he lost his temper and broke his gads into fifty pieces. He keeps a supply of six on hand, three on each side of the waggon, but, all having been used up, he made a dive for the back of the waggon, and soon made small work with Marvin's axe-knives. Sunday morning, find, we proceeded west. Very hot for two days—76° to 88° in the shade. Got one bushel potatoes, $1.60; chop, $2.60 per bag; no hay to be got at any price, and we made Hammare Bridge. Next day, 3rd May, at 4.30, made Rat Creek and camped opposite Sandy Hills. Made Beaver Dam Creek at 12 o'clock for dinner, and Camp No. 4 under the Sandy Hills, one mile from McKinnan's. We were 3 hours going one and a half miles to this spot—called the Bad Woods—oxen and all tired out. Camp 5.—West side of Creek, as we wanted to get feed and water. Mr. McKinnan not being at home we had to remain until his return, when it was too late to go any further, and all we could get was a bundle of hay, 25c.; potatoes, $1 per bushel, and one hen 25c. each waggon, carts 15c., for crossing his bridge, as he keeps his gate locked; no conveyance can pass down the ravine. At this creek is the first time we had to fix our chains as breaks—got on first rate—cross steady. We had a duck stew for supper. I made it 6 ducks, 2 plover and 1 prairie chicken. I made others of the party help to pluck and clean. I took a very fine Mallard drake and skinned him perfectly, as you would for stuffing, and filled the body, etc., with prairie grass, and Marvin gave it to Porter alias Bones to pluck, and he actually went five yards or so from the tents, and plucked away, not knowing it was stuffed, and no doubt, would not have left a feather on it, but the joke was too rich and they all burst out laughing. As one of our party was over at the tavern, we took the duck, cut it up beside the creek, and after his return, as we were sitting by the tents, two ducks flew up the creek. Marvin grabbed his gun and told the other party (Sam) to go one way and he would go the other. In a few minutes Sam's gun went bang-bang. We rushed to the brow of the hill and Sam was reloading for dear life. Duck would not die worth a cent. The fellows all yelled out, "Wade in for him, Sam." So he twigged he was sold. The evening changed,—thunder roared, lightning flashed, and all was hurry and bustle to get things ready for the coming storm. Although awful lightning and thunder it was grand in the extreme. But the storm did not break on us till night, and then down came two tents, rain and hail; the wind carried two hats off but the men got them back. Take it all round there was a big time, you bet. We had to put up most of the party in our tent until morning did appear. On the 6th camp it was side of pine creek, a beautiful spot in the sandhills, the creek in a spring and magnificent water and splendid view. The trees in the valley are very green, resembling our balsams only very much greener. Up to this point not a blade of grass or any green thing to be seen; nothing but sandy burnt over, or the old yellow grass of last year—the country looking dreary and desolate. Camp 7: camped on Big or Pleasant Plain, 10 miles from Pine Creek, and 6 from the Sand Hills. Just as you leave the Sand Hills one trail goes south, running over the hills to the Assiniboine River—opposite the Souris. We met a person going to the Portage to get up provisions by first steamer for a number—some 20—who crossed the Assiniboine in March, on the ice, and took up land on the Souris. Since then we heard the boat had got to the Portage and Fort Ellice and a full load of freight. Crossed Bogey Creek on the Big Plain; bridge gone, a tough time to get over; took dinner. Passed McKenzie's farm, 40,000 acres; there were four teams and six men seeding. I counted 6 stacks of grain not thrashed, and as big as barns. Before crossing the creek we turned to the right to enquire the best crossing, from a man who was ploughing; he proved to be a ship carpenter two years from Liverpool. He had 320 acres and quite a lot ploughed last fall, and got a good crop of oats on what he was able to put in last year. When he got to his present homestead, all he had, he says, was 50 cts left. He is about 60 years old and all alone; he has a mud hut and a log shanty for his grain. We got one bag of oats $1.50, and a good bundle of hay Mats, and glad we were to get it as the oxen were getting very poor and weak. As we came up the trail below McKinnan's for 20 miles you could see dead oxen and horses, drawn in about 15 yards from the main trail, as it is against the law to leave them near the road. We only saw one dead ox two yards from the trail after coming into the North West. I met a person on the Big Plain who gave his name as Mr. Gotliff, from Cavan. Knows Tom Weir well; he says he is doing well and wished to be remembered to him. Camp 8, at the end of the Big Plains. Prairie rolling; full of swales or muskegs; thousands of muskrats and duck. Rained all night. Remained in camp Sunday, still raining. 10: camped 5 miles from Prairie City on the Little Saskatchewan; crossed the river at 4 o'clock. We were over four hours before we managed it; we had to unload and carry everything in the waggons and carts on our backs. The residents and others had taken the long timbers got out for a storehouse and put the ends on wooden horses, the feet of which was three feet long, so the tops were two inches or so above high water mark. So on this kind of a trail the thirsten of us carried all over. There was a stiff east wind, and with a load on your back you required so much nerve and balance as Blondin did, over the Niagara Falls. The approach on this path is 25 yards on the south side to reach the bridge which spans the middle or main branch at low water, and on the north side distance 150 yards from the bridge to shore through willow and other bushes, water 2½ feet high. All got over very well; boots off, some in bare feet and others keeping on their stockings. It was quite a sight for some as there were a good many who had horses who could not get them to take the water. So the night hours were many. Mr. McDougall had a part of a bag of beans on his back and a load—say 1 caddie of tobacco, on the other shoulder, when he missed step and down he went on his back. He let the beans go but made fast to the tobacco, however. The beans being fished up he tried it again, being considerably soaked and heavy. One

FOUND AND LOST.

Sir Percy Evelyn commenced with himself. Was he—had he been, during the past eighteen years, guilty of a bitter injustice towards the one woman in all the world whom he should have trusted? Had he been, indeed, his own most cruel enemy? And by what right had he separated two pure young hearts—or sought to separate them—that seemed formed the one for the other? True, the beautiful girl in whom he felt so strange an interest, yet whom he had driven from the shelter of his roof, was ignorant of her real name and birth; but had not Percy declared that he loved her for herself alone?

While absolved in this lonely reverie—for he was an altogether solitary man now—he was interrupted by the announcement that the Lady Geraldine Stuart was desirous of a few moments' conversation with him. He was, at once, all courtesy and composure.

'I expected this, Geraldine,' he said. 'I felt sure that my brother's child would not abandon me in my many sorrows.'

'The son of your elder brother has defied your wishes, Sir Percy,' she answered. 'It was he who broke of our betrothal.'

She had ridden over to Templetowers. Her purple velvet habit, fitting closely to her faultless form, lent to it a dignity and grace harmonising with the sweetness and purity of her countenance. A plain band of gold encircled her white throat, long gauntlet gloves reached half-way up her arms; and she played coquettishly with a ruby-handled riding-whip.

'May I sit down, Sir Percy?' she said, laughing.

'Forgive me, Geraldine, if I have forgotten to ask you; I was thinking how lovely you are, and what a fool my nephew is.'

Yes; the Lady Geraldine Stuart was fair to look upon. But there were dark recesses in her heart. Wounded vanity, disappointed ambition, a passionate desire to be avenged upon her faithless affianced, and still more upon the innocent Beryl, rose up, like spirits of evil in her nature, at these words of Sir Percy Evelyn.

Then and there did she form a plot which, if the Baronet had had the least inkling of it, would have caused him to turn from her for ever.

'Tell me, Sir Percy,' she said, 'what was the nature of the compact that bound me to your nephew?'

'A sacred promise; solemnly asked for, and solemnly given. Do you love him?'

'No,' she calmly answered.

'Not love him, and affianced all this time?'

'That would have mattered little,' she went on, still with perfect composure, 'if he had not insulted me. I come now to ask that the bond may be regarded as utterly and irrevocably broken.'

'You know not what you say, Geraldine,' the Baronet faltered, greatly agitated. 'By the vow of my dying brother's bed I swore, by all I held sacred, that the long-severed branches of the house of Templetowers should be reunited, and that you should be the link restoring the ancient bond.

The Lady Geraldine Stuart smiled faintly, and made answer as faintly.

'Well, Sir Percy, we can none of us foretell the future. It may, after all, be possible for me to assist you keeping your promise.'

'But listen. I have sent that young girl—no; don't curl your lip—away. She will not again come between you and Percy.'

The Lady Geraldine made no reply, but, ringing for a servant, retired to the sumptuous suite of rooms always kept in readiness for her at Templetowers.

As she ascended the staircase, Percy Evelyn crossed the great entrance-hall.

She heard his step, turned, and looked at him over the gilded balustrade.

'Poor fool!' she said, almost aloud. 'Enjoy your romance as much as you like at the gate-keeper's lodge!'

But Mr. Percy Evelyn neither saw nor heard the contemptuous and indignant girl. He had come to ask why Beryl had been thus discarded, and was prepared to dare all his uncle's displeasure—even to the loss of his inheritance—for her sake.

In the meanwhile, Beryl, the young girl who had swooned, and who had been taken into the shelter of the little Gothic lodge, had recovered, and saw the beautiful woman still bending over her with looks of tenderness and pity.

'Child,' she said, 'were you frightened by anybody?'

'I don't know,' replied Beryl, dreamily. 'Did I lose anything?—and—where am I?'

'You were clasping that to your breast,' the lady continued, pointing to the casket, which stood on a table; 'and you are in the forester's lodge of Templetowers—my home. You must stay here, child, until you are better. What is your name?'

'Beryl.'

Her companion started; then a sad smile flitted across her features.

'Once,' she said, 'I loved the name. Since that time it has been the sorrow of my life. What else are you called?'

'Rutherford.'

That, at any rate, appeared to produce no effect upon the mistress of the forester's lodge.

There was perfect silence between these two for some moments.

The thoughts of the young girl were wandering far away—to the home she scarcely remembered—to her long seclusion in the gate-keeper's cottage—to the mystery of the jewels and of the faded bridal dress—to her introduction at Templetowers—to the sudden love of Percy Evelyn, and to own her strange acceptance and still more strange repudiation by the Baronet.

'He says he will love me for ever!' (It was not of the Baronet that she was thinking now); 'but can he be sure of himself? And ought not I to send him back to his affianced bride, the Lady Geraldine? How beautiful she is!'

For there was not a jealous or ungenerous thought in the heart of this young girl, to whom life had hitherto been little more than an enigma.

While she pondered thus her new protector was also travelling away in imagination far into the past, among the deserts and the flower-gardens of memory.

Presently she put another question.

'Where do you live, Beryl?'

'At the gate-keeper's cottage.'

Her confidence had been only partly won, and she told no more than a fragment of her story.

No word did she utter concerning the kind guardian with whom her childhood had been passed; of his poverty, or the manner in which he had been taken away after death had made him the equal of poor and pauper alike; of the grave in that casket standing on the table; and, of course, not a syllable did she breathe about Percy Evelyn's confession of love.

'I must go now,' she said, in consolation. 'Can I ever tell you how grateful I am for your kindness to a stranger? I am to leave Templetowers now, never to see it again. The woman who brought me here will go with me. But you are ill,' she exclaimed, as the lady of the lodge, with a countenance of exceeding pallor, sank into the chair.

Beryl hastened to bring her some of the wine that had been poured out for herself. She suffered it to touch her lips, and then caught the young girl by the hand.

'Stay with me, child,' she cried, in a tone so piteous that Beryl looked upon her with amazement.

'I must not,' she answered. 'Dear lady, would you have me live here by stealth, like a criminal in hiding, after the Baronet has ordered me off his lands? But cannot you leave this lonely place?'

'Never!' the strange lady exclaimed, with such emphasis that Beryl was once more astonished. 'Not if I knew that men were coming here to kill me this very night!'

Beryl burst into tears and embraced the beautiful woman, as though it was she who now, in her turn, required comfort.

But she was gently put away, with the words, 'Go, then. Kiss me. Go, before my heart fails me again!'

Beryl obeyed, and was gone.

The pale and lovely lady watched her until she disappeared in a winding of the path. Then she fell on her knees, and cried aloud, 'Had I taken her by the hand, and gone to him, and said, "I will tell you now her secret my secret and the secret of him who sleeps, at Brockton Abbey——"

But the sentence was not finished.

CHAPTER VIII.

CONFESSED.

Stephen Quail stood in the doorway of the forester's cottage.

The lady rose from her kneeling attitude indignantly.

'How dare you thus intrude upon me, Stephen Quail?' she exclaimed.

'Forgive me, madam!' he answered. 'There was no time for hesitating. A young girl has been here!'

'Yes, and gone,' she replied, with a strange alteration of her tone. 'Where is it likely she would go?'

'I would have taken her to the tomb at Brockton Abbey.'

The pale and stately woman grasped the back of a chair, fell into the seat, and said, 'What is your meaning or your purpose now, Stephen Quail?'

'First, to find her; then to tell her of what she must do if ever happiness is to reign again beneath the roofs of Templetowers.'

They held, those two, a long conference. Concluding it, Stephen Quail said, 'You absolutely refuse, my lady, to go?'

'I absolutely refuse to stir one inch beyond the domain of Templetowers!'

'Then, my lady, I must go alone. No; I will ask Mr. Percy Evelyn to accompany me.'

With a low bow, he left her half marvelling what his ambiguous sentence signified, half perplexed between vague hopes and fears. In the avenue leading to the lodge he encountered Mr. Percy Evelyn, mounted, and followed by a groom. Saluting him respectfully, he said, 'Mr. Evelyn, will it be an impertinence to ask whether you are bound for London?'

'I am, Stephen. Have you anything to say?'

'Will you pardon me for saying it, sir?'

'Well, yes. Say on.'

'It is to look for Miss Beryl.'

Percy Evelyn flushed; but the tone of the man had been altogether deferential. Besides, something in his manner appeared to promise the very thing he was seeking—a clue.

'Well, what of it?' he asked.

'You will not find her there.'

'Where, then? And how do you know?'

'At Brockton Abbey, seeking for the tomb of the man she knew, during her childhood, as Richard Rutherford.'

But who was——

'The tomb itself will tell you. I am going thither, also, Mr. Evelyn.'

Just at that moment a carriage of unpretending appearance drove down the avenue towards the gate-keeper's lodge. Its panels bore no arms; its coachman and footmen wore plain mourning livery. Two women were the occupants; but they were indistinguishable beneath their heavy black veils.

A strange curiosity took possession of Percy Evelyn's mind. Who were these strangers making thus free on his uncle's estate? That they were not visitors at Templetowers he felt perfectly assured. But with a hint to Stephen Quail to keep near him, he rode on within earshot of the carriage. They all reached the gate-keeper's lodge, where Beryl had so long resided. There a singular incident occurred. The way to Brockton Abbey, which was not far distant, lay straight before them. The coachman would have driven on without turning to right or left; a touch of the check-string, however, stopped him.

'But tell my lady,' they overheard the coachman say, 'that this is the direct road to the Abbey.'

'My lady cares nothing for that! Obey your orders.'

The coach turned sharply to the left, and entered a road that led across the woodlands, but still through the Templetowers domain. After a moment's hesitation, Percy Evelyn followed, Stephen Quail riding a little in the rear.

Before long a noble picture opened before them.

The monks of old were celebrated for having chosen the most beautiful sites for their edifices, and Brockton Abbey was no exception to the rule.

A vast sweep of turf, sprinkled with aged oaks, swept down to the banks of a bright, babbling stream that danced in the glimpses of the sun. On one side the forest thickened; on another it disappeared in a landscape rich with corn-fields, and made cheerful by numerous villages and farms. In the midst rose the Abbey, ancient and stately, an ivy-clad ruin, except that the old chapel had been restored without being modernised, and maintained in a state of tolerable preservation.

The carriage drew up at a gray-stone Norman porch, and the women alighted and hurriedly entered the chapel.

Percy Evelyn and Stephen Quail who, had carefully kept out of sight, would have followed, but that they did not want to be observed by the servants in attendance with the carriage. However, the vehicle was turned slowly round, and drew up under the trees, at a little distance. They then quietly—almost stealthily—moved towards the antique edifice.

To the intense chagrin of Stephen Quail, Percy Evelyn ordered him to remain where he was.

'I must do what I have to do alone,' he said.

And, without waiting for a reply, followed the two women into the chapel. It appeared to contain no other occupants. The women threw aside their veils, and Percy recognised the lady of the forester's cottage, with her companion and servant, Martha Ellis.

Without hesitation they went towards a particular tomb. The attendant stood aside, while the lady gazed, no doubt, on the inscription, with clasped hands, pale and weeping. Then she beckoned to Martha Ellis, and placed her finger on a particular part of the tombstone.

'It must be placed there,' she said.

'Yes, my lady,' the attendant answered.

And with one more long, plaintive look, the lady let down her veil. Martha Ellis did the same, and they left the chapel together. Percy Evelyn, in that dark interior, had no difficulty in keeping out of sight. The moment they were gone, however, he was about to step forward, but drew back into the dusk again.

Some one was kneeling and sobbing by the side of the tomb—her golden hair flung from her noble young head, and brightening the black tablet. A little way off, with a distressed expression of countenance, stood Anne Clayton.

A young girl rose from her knees. Her face was convulsed with sorrow—Beryl, beautiful in grief.

'It is true—it is true,' she cried, 'and I am worse than nameless—I am an outcast in the world! Who will ever think of me—ever care for me now?'

The arms of Percy Evelyn were around her in an instant. It was a strange place for the plighting of a love-troth. Yet there and then did he, among those sculptured tombs and solemn effigies, renew his vows; declare them to be unalterable; swear by the very sanctity of the ground they stood upon that nothing should change his heart; that she was all-in-all to him; that, without her, life would have no happiness, and hope was gone.

What wonder if the desolate girl, lonely and friendless, and spurned from the doors that had once been opened to her, felt tempted to take refuge in this generous love as in a sanctuary, and to shelter herself in its warmth for ever.

But she mastered the temptation for a time did not utter a word, and, when she spoke it was but to say, 'Percy, look at that tombstone. It is my answer.'

He did look, and the tombstone was a blank.

'Then it is neither you nor me?' he said.

And she could not answer him. Her heart said 'Yes!'—her conscience said 'No!'

Still he persevered.

'My darling,' he urged, 'why throw this chance of happiness away? I do not care who you are. I know what you are—a girl whose gift of life and trust would be a blessing, a pride and glory to any man, were he poet or prince; and again I ask you to be mine!'

'Percy,' she answered, after a long silence, sobbing, though within an April smile amid her tears, 'think less of me and more of yourself!'

'Am I not thinking of myself?' he said. 'I am asking for all that the utmost selfishness could desire. Oh, Beryl! are you so hardened to all love?'

'I am not hardened, Percy,' she said. 'I fear that I am very weak!'

Then she hid her face upon his breast, and only a kiss and a whisper told the history of their future lives.

[TO BE CONCLUDED IN OUR NEXT.]

SALT.

Nothing that we eat is more valuable than salt, nor could anything except bread be more missed. Animals, in fact, will travel distances and brave great dangers to obtain it. On the coast of Sierra Leone brothers will sell their sisters, husbands their wives, and parents their children for salt. In the district of Accra, on the gold coast of Africa, a handful of salt is the most valuable thing upon earth after gold, and will purchase a slave or two. Salt with the Romans was such a luxury that to say of a man, "He favors his food with salt," is to imply that he is rich. No stronger mark of affection can be shown in Masonry than the sending of salt from the tables of the rich to their poorer friends. Spilling salt was held to be an unlucky omen by the Romans, and the superstition has descended to ourselves. Leonardo di Vinci availed himself of this tradition in his famous picture of the "Lord's Supper," to indicate Judas Iscariot by the salt-cellar knocked over accidentally by his arm. When we say of a shiftless fellow that "he does not earn his salt," we unconsciously allude to an ancient custom among the Romans. Among them a man was said to be in possession of a "salary" who had his "salarium," his allowance of salt money, or of salt, wherewith to savor the food by which he lived. Thus salary comes from salt—and in this view of the word how many there are who do not "earn their salt!"

Joy Among the Children.

CORTLAND'S SWEET CASTOR OIL, equally suitable for children and adults. Endorsed by over 600 doctors in Canada.

The difficulty of administering nauseous medicines, and the desirability of having the pleasant to the taste, induced T. Cortland to undertake researches which resulted in the discovery of a Sweet Castor Oil, perfectly palatable, of the same strength and medical qualities as the ordinary Castor Oil, and while possible safe and harmless, yet acting with more certainty, and producing neither nausea nor griping. Some children say it is honey; others call it syrup—they all say they like it. One parent says—"My children drink it like water," another—"We had to hide the bottle or they would have finished it right off;" another—"My little girl has taken it twice without any trouble, and does not know what it is, though she hates the ordinary Castor Oil, and we could never get her to take it without a fight;" yet another—"I wish you success of your Sweet Castor Oil; it is a splendid thing—sure to take the place of all the common oil."

The extraordinary demand for this improvement on a [illegible] has brought [illegible] imitations into the market, but the public can guard themselves against substitution (which is dangerous), provided they are willing to call on the manufacturers, this certainly by seeing that the genuine CORTLAND'S SWEET CASTOR OIL is on sale in wrappers and direction label.

The undersigned having purchased Messrs. T. Cortland & Co's interest in the above preparation, are now manufacturing it from the original recipe. NORTHROP & LYMAN, Toronto.

HOW LOST, HOW RESTORED!

We have recently published a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical and permanent cure (without medicine) of Nervous Debility, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediment to Marriage, etc., resulting from excesses.

Price in a sealed envelope, only 6 cts., or two postage stamps.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicines or the use of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and rapidly.

PETERBOROUGH, JULY 29, 1880.

PERNICIOUS LITERATURE.

We have had the sorry pleasure of examining a newly published work, purporting to be a biographical history of Canada. The publication is evidently the work of one of those toad-stools which infest society, and under whose noxious shade a man may flourish into prominence according to the extent to which his purse-strings are unloosened to meet the views of the compiler. We observe in the number of names made famous in this work some of gentlemen of prominence, whose public careers are worthy of record, and we see too the names of some whose highest ambition it ought to be to seek seclusion from the public gaze. Speculations of this kind, a spurious sort of advertising which appeals to the vanity of the least deserving, are in one sense harmless enough, but it is hardly fair that our libraries should show to future generations that the most inferior men were the recognised prominent men of our day. The object of such a work as this is accomplished when the enterprising publisher has secured payment from his customers for the service which he does them in biographic print. In this generation we all understand it, and have the advantage of a true estimate of the character of most of the persons made illustrious by the important historian. But it is hardly fair to the man who really do represent the intelligence, energy, enterprise and progress of the country, to allow them to be overshadowed and lost to the view of posterity by a mushroom record intended to take its place on our shelves as a "history." An honest Canadian history, such as as in press by Dr. Ryerson, is valuable both to the present and future generations of; Canadians but we decidedly object to dignifying by the name of history, a publication in which each man attains such eminence as his vanity leads him to pay for.

CATTLE vs. CEREALS.

It is related that once upon a time a journalist, who was seeking to curry favor with a bucolic audience, exclaimed that he had been born upon a farm and "brought up, so to speak, between two stalks of corn." An enthusiastic auditor ejaculated "a pumpkin, by gingo!" We don't want to elicit any such distinction as this as this, nor to assume to give advice to those engaged in the pursuit of agriculture upon matters in which their practical experience is their best guide; but we do desire to earnestly impress upon the farmers of this district the importance of a change in the policy of farming as it is conducted generally in our midst. The true economy of agriculture, in this portion of the Dominion is to give the land a rest, to relax the demands made upon its fertility by constant cropping, and to enter more into dairy and stock-farming which offer a better remuneration and which, at the same time, give the means of recuperating the exhausted strength of the soil. During the last session of the Dominion Parliament some important and useful information was laid before the Committee on Immigration and Colonization, from the report of which Committee we give, for the benefit of our readers, the following extracts :—

Mr. Lowe Secretary of the Department said: When I was in England, knowing the great importance of this question of the shipment of cattle, and it being a special subject with which the Department has to deal, I made special enquiries as to the rates of Canadian cattle in England in comparison with cattle brought from Scotland and other parts of the United Kingdom. I went to London to be present at the arrival of the trains from Scotland with animals for the London Christmas market, and I saw a very large variety. I found that the cattle of the best kind, from Scotland and from various parts of England, brought prices ranging at from £30 to £40 sterling a head. The average might probably be £35. With respect to Canadian cattle, the kind we have hitherto shipped has not been quite sufficient for the market, with the exception of those that are sent by specially large cattle feeders and breeders. These latter cattle will bring an average of over £30, but the ordinary cattle, which have been sent in large numbers from Canada, I find have not brought an average of more than £15 or £16 sterling. I saw on the arrival of the trains from Scotland, to which I have referred, a large animal somewhat shaggy in appearance and with a very large bulk and belly, which sold for £16. Our ordinary grade cattle are of that type. Beside it was a black cow from Scotland, a much smaller animal (a Polled Angus,) which sold for £35. The point therefore, to impress is this; that, if we are going into the shipping of cattle to England, the breed we ship must be, if we are to be successful, such as will bring the highest price. Now, as regards the breed of cattle, I do not wish to offer a personal opinion, but I obtained a letter from Mr. Adamson, who was one of the jurors from Scotland to the Paris Exhibition, and I think it is of a character which I should lay before the Committee—it reads thus:—

BALQUHARN, ALFORD, ABERDEEN,
20th December, 1879.

DEAR SIR,—In reply to your several enquiries about the Polled Aberdeen and Angus cattle—I am convinced that the bulls of that breed will, sooner or later, be universally recognized as the best adapted sires for crossing, especially in the countries that export live cattle for the English markets. As an instance of the improvement of a well-bred Polled bull, I state, without fear of contradiction, that the progeny of 100 heifers sired by a high-bred Polled Aberdeen bull, not one will be other than black and polled. This should be a great consideration with shippers; more can be put into a truck, or a feeding compartment, and no damage by goring.

The Polled Aberdeens are a hardy race, thriving where Shorthorns cannot live. There is an impression abroad that they are slow feeders; this is not the case, as they will grow and weigh with any Shorthorns, and carry their meat evenly and in the prime parts. As an instance, the Polled bullock which gained the cup at the Smithfield Club show this year as best Beast, and fed by Sir W. Gordon Cumming, was only two years and eight months old, and about 17 cwt., or 1,904 pounds weight; than any Shorthorn or Polled Bull from this year of the same age. At the late Paris International Exhibition I had the honor of acting as a juror, and when the £100 prize for the best breeding breed was adjudicated thirty-four jurors were on the bench. The Polled Aberdeen or Angus scored 27 points, the Shorthorns 4, and the Crosses 3. Mr. McCombine, of Tillyfour, had the honor of taking this high award with a group composed chiefly of animals under two years of age. This of itself speaks for the early maturity of the breed.

A Polled Scott, in the London market, commands one-half to one penny the pound more than a Shorthorn or Hereford; the hide is likewise worth a good deal more.

Good beef producers are generally indifferent milkers, but two of the most fashionable tribes of the Polled Angus are recognised milkers, as also good feeders."

I give that without expressing any personal opinion respecting it, but as a contribution to the discussion of the question which is of certainly the greatest importance to the country. There is one further point that I may give the Committee. When I was leaving Liverpool I ascertained from an official source that the United States' cattle received at the Port of Liverpool during 1879, were 4,683 less than the previous year, owing, of course, to the slaughter clause or to the scheduling of the United States, while imports from Canada had increased in the the enormous proportion stated in the Report of the Minister of Agriculture.

Q. Did you ascertain from English dealers whether the difference between our stock and British stock arose from the variety of stock or the difference in feed?—It is the stock. The breeds sent from here are inferior, and the cattle are not the right shape. This is proved by the fact that the average prices of cattle we have shipped have been only £15 or £16 against £30 and £40, which are the average of prices obtained for British cattle. This remark, will not, of course, apply to such cattle as Mr. Wiser sends; the average price he gets is over £30.

Q. Of the breeds sent from here, the shorthorns are preferable?—No doubt about it; the cattle require to have a square back and small bellies, as distinguished from a small back and big bellies.

Q. You are aware that the article of cheese was very low in Canada last year, but all at once it began to rise and it has continued to do so; can you tell us what it is likely to do so this season?—I cannot say as to that; that is an English economical question of supply and demand. I can state, however, that I made special enquiry as to the favor in which Canadian cheese is held in England. It is held in great favor and considered to be very good.

Q. Do you think that is the reason the price rose?—It may be; but that is a question which has not come entirely under my knowledge.

Q. Did you devote any attention to the question as to what sheep are best suited for the English market?—Not further than this; one of the delegates with whom I came in contact told me that the kind of sheep they found in Canada were not suited for the English market.

Mr. J. P. Wiser, M. P., gave the following evidence:

Q. I believe you have been engaged in the cattle trade between Canada and England?—Yes, and I believe my cattle were the first ever shipped to England from Canada.

Q. What kind of cattle suit the market of England best?—You are speaking of best cattle of course; grades and thoroughbred Durhams are the best you can take there.

Q. When you say grades I suppose you mean crossed with Durhams?—Yes; the better blood you get the better cattle you have, and the more suitable your cattle are for the English market.

Q. Would you advise farmers to raise stock of that kind?—Most decidedly.

Q. Do the present prices pay you?—For cattle we have bought and fed?

Q. Yes?—This year's prices are very good; but last year we lost about as much as we made I fancy; it was just about an even thing.

Q. Is the number of cattle fed for exportation increasing to any extent?—I do not think it is. I am inclined to think that cattle were not so good as they were ten years ago. I could then buy numbers of cattle suitable for the English market much easier than I can now; at present the supply does not do more than keep up with the demand.

Q. How do you account for the depreciation in the quality of cattle?—By the good cattle being taken out of the country too young, before they reach maturity; and by the fact that they are not raising them so fast as the demand for them requires. Killing the calves instead of raising them also decreases the supply of good cattle. Years ago, when I commenced distilling in Canada, I bought all cattle in Leeds and Grenville; to-day I cannot buy a quarter of the cattle I require in those counties; I have to go west for the remainder.

Q. What part of Canada produces the best cattle for shipment?—I buy my cattle in the county of Middlesex, in the vicinity of London, out in the direction of Sarnia, at Ailes Orsig, and all through that section of country up to Lake Huron. That is the best cattle growing country I know of in Canada.

Q. Are the cattle you get there equal to the cattle raised in Illinois?—Yes; and better.

Q. What breed of cattle do you usually select?—As high a breed as I can.

Q. Durhams?—Yes, Durham; in fact, the nearer the beast is to a thoroughbred the better I like it.

Q. Do you consider Durhams superior to other breeds?—Most decidedly.

Q. Do you know whether it is a fact that the best grades of Canadian cattle are sent to Buffalo, fed there, and then sent to England to go into competion with the cattle shipped direct from Canada?—I do not think there is very much of that done; if there is any of it done, it is on a very small scale.

Q. Does Canadian beef bring as high a price in England as English, Irish, and Scotch beef of the same quality?—Yes; it brings the same price as the British beef of the same quality. The Scotch take to market a little better class of cattle than we do; but take the Scotch cattle 5,000 miles by rail and 3,000 miles across the Atlantic and subject them to the same hardships that ours are subjected to, and, as some Scotch friends told me, ours will be far superior.

THE VALUE OF A SPARROW.—English sparrows are declared to be very useful little creatures in more ways than one. It has been discovered that they are very fond of Canada thistle seeds, and eat them with such avidity that in some places, where the sparrows are numerous, not a single seed can be found in the thistle down that is very plentiful there. The boy that could kill a sparrow after hearing that is fit for treason, larceny and arson. If these useful little birds would only proceed a little further now, and cultivate their taste for potato bugs, we would pass a by-law fixing their assessment at a very moderate sum, and charging them only half the usual pass for as long a term as the law would permit.—Cobourg World.

GEO. BROWN'S MURDERER.

HE MEETS HIS DOOM.

Scene on the Scaffold—Dying words of the Criminal.

(Correspondence of the Hamilton Times.)

TORONTO, July 23.—Every preparation was completed last night for the proper consummation of the scene enacted in the jail yard to-day. The scaffold was got into thorough working order, and every precaution taken that no hitch should occur. Late yesterday afternoon a brother of the prisoner, two sisters, and a young man arrived at the jail with passes signed by the sheriff granting them leave to have an interview with the condemned man. He, however, refused to see them, saying that he was done with the world now and did not wish his attention distracted by its concerns. Shortly after their departure he sat down and wrote a letter addressed to them, and also one to a young man residing in the city. These letters he gave to Rev. Father Egan to be delivered to the parties to whom they were addressed. The clergyman visited him at 7 o'clock last night and stayed for over two hours. The prisoner was quite calm, and apparently resigned and even cheerful. He greeted those who came into his cell in a hearty manner. After dark there were two ominous arrivals at the jail. These were the coffin and the executioner. Close on 11 o'clock the prisoner expressed a desire to do some more writing, and writing materials were given him, and he was thus occupied for sometime. At 12 o'clock he retired to rest, giving instructions that he should be awakened sharp at 5.

Bennett met his death on the scaffold with extraordinary coolness. He passed a quiet night and declined taking any refreshment this morning. He saw Rev. Fathers Egan and Sheehan at an early hour and they remained with him to the last. To the cell where Bennett was confined, Governor Green and Sheriff Jarvis came at 7.45 with the hangman. The nerve of the prisoner did not desert him. He paused for a moment in his conversation with the sheriffs, went towards the hangman and placed his arms in position for the straps. They were drawn very close, and Bennett said, 'It is not necessary to tie me so tight; you hurt me.' The hangman replied, 'It will be the better for you, my boy.' 'All right then,' remarked the doomed man, 'go on.' The strapping was then completed, and the procession was formed, headed by the clergy reciting prayers for the dead. On reaching the jail yard where there were some 75 spectators, Bennett halted for a moment at the foot of the scaffold, looked steadily at the structure and then walked upstairs with a firm step. As soon as he reached the platform he advanced to the rails in front and with a slight motion of the right hand which held the crucifix as if he would have waved it to the crowd to command attention, he said in a voice unbroken by a quiver of nervousness:

Gentlemen.—I am going to die and I am innocent of the crime—by no words that I can possibly say can I clear myself—and I cannot say any more than that I am innocent, as the act was beyond my control. The act by which Hon. George Brown met his death was done in an excited moment. I suppose he could not foresee the consequences; he thought I was going to use the revolver when I drew it from my pocket, and he grasped at it, and he caused the act which caused his death; his hand must have struck the trigger, as the shot was fired simultaneously with his catching it; I am going to meet my God now, and it would be a foolish thing for me to die with a lie on my lips; what I say here you may accept as a fact; I would not like to speak false when I am about to die; I am possessed of spirit enough to have acknowledged the crime if I did it; the blood does not tingle in my veins that would let me do such an act; I am not false at heart or a coward; it would have been a shameful thing to have done such an act, as Mr. Brown did not deserve it; he was a most popular man throughout the world and he went to his death through an oversight on my part; I went to him for a very simple reason and not to commit a crime; I could not control the event; there was liquor in me and the accident occurred, and the result was the fatal act.

Bennett then turned his back to the spectators, and motioning with his right hand, in which he still held the crucifix, remarking quite coolly: 'I am prepared to die. All I have to say now is may God have mercy on my soul.'

The rope was then adjusted and the black cap drawn down, and almost instantly the sheriff gave the signal the bolt was withdrawn, and at 7 minutes to 8 o'clock the end came. The neck was dislocated, and death was instantaneous. Heavy clouds had been gathering all morning, and just as the drop opened a deluge of rain came down which lasted some twenty minutes. The body was then lowered into the coffin and an inquest held, after which the remains were interred beside Travers and Williams in the jail yard.

The following documents were written by Bennett prior to his death and given into the custody of Governor Green, who this morning allowed your correspondent to copy them:

TORONTO JAIL, July 22nd, 1880

The hands of time are continually crumbling beneath our feet and we are drawing towards that awful moment which marks the boundary between time and eternity. In general, we know not the day nor the hour. But when by man the day, the hour and the place is set, then the mortal must seriously reflect on the past, the present and the dark mysteries that lie before him. It is appointed for man once to die and after that the judgment. I must soon present myself before the bar of the Judgment which is just, to give an account of my stewardship. Now I behold the earth, which at one time I would have been sorry to leave, now I see how false are the charms of the world, how powerful its attractions, how dreadful its allurements. How sweet its honey appears, though it has the sourness of vinegar. In the days of my childhood I was brought up in the Catholic faith, and though for years I have, to my grief, wandered like a stray sheep from the precepts, wise counsels and frequently from the sacraments of the Church, yet I wished to die in her bosom; and my greatest consolation at the last moment will be to be fortified by the sacraments which Christ has left in His Church. Too soon, alas! have my best friends, my dear parents, who would, no doubt, have brought me up in the fear and love of God and the practices of approaches to the sacraments. The result was that I soon fell an easy victim of evil associates. Among my new companions I used to regard the practice of going to confession as an intolerable slavery, but in abandoning its restraining influence I fell into a slavery of a different kind, 'the slavery of passion and sin,' and my career downward was very rapid. Now that I am on the brink of eternity, how vain, wicked, do the false maxims of bad companions appear to me. Those who boast of liberty, of free thought, and who would banish away the thought of God, of a future life and man's superiority, what do they offer instead to heal the wounded conscience or console. If I had attended my religious duties I would not be here to-day, so-called friends led me astray, but I forgive them, and would have saved me from the tyranny of passion, would have broken up the fatal connection between the habits of life to become a decent citizen. I was taught all this in my youth, but I was deaf to every voice and now experience the sad reward and obedience to a good mother and confessor. Now I am in the hands of men who are strangers to me, but I am not complaining of the bitter fate. I merited the punishment of life and may it be accepted in satisfaction for my sins. I am not afraid to die, my conscience is at peace with God, my sins are washed away in the blood of the Lamb, and I am sure that I shall be received into the mansions of the just. I am not afraid to die, though I am innocent of the crime for which I am doomed to die. I have enough besides that to atone for to the justice of God. I am resigned to my doom, and would offer now if I had, a thousand lives in atonement for my sins. I freely and from my heart and soul forgive my enemies and all who have injured me, as I hope that God in his great mercy will forgive me in my offences against Him. The sun which rises in the horizon hastens its course and pursues the night, and the night solicits the light of day; the rivers

PETERBOROUGH, JULY 29, 1880.

MUNICIPAL ECONOMY.

A movement has been placed on foot agitating in favor of a reduction of the number of Councillors to eight—two for each ward. While there are some arguments in favor of a limited number of Councillors, we believe the weight of reason is with the retaining of the present number. As the Councillors are paid nothing for their services, it is simply a question of expediency and not of pecuniary consideration. If it is intended to prevent the formation of rings, or the practice of "crookedness" which prevails in less enlightened towns than Peterborough, we would say that there is greater danger and greater temptation in a limited than in a large number of Councillors. There is more danger of and more danger in five men out of eight combining to control the public business than there would be in the same combination existing with eight Councillors out of fifteen. The larger number, too, often affords representation to minorities of ratepayers in the wards, who, if the number of Councillors were limited to two in each ward, would be shut out from having any voice in the management of civic affairs. Such would appear to be the most reasonable view of the question, but of course there can be no harm in discussing the subject, though we think it will be found that the consensus of opinion in the town will be strongly opposed to interfering with the existing arrangement.

THE LAKEFIELD FIRE.

An article appeared in the Review last week, respecting the Lakefield fire, calculated to leave a very unpleasant impression and to create an undesirable feeling between the two communities. It was erroneous in statement and does injustice to the firemen and the corporations of the two places. The simple fact of the case is, that the gentleman who telegraphed to Peterborough for the engine, in the excitement of the moment, did not inform the Reeve or Council of the fact, and it was supposed that the brigade had come up from Peterborough of their own motion. Hence, no arrangements had been made to entertain them. We have been desired on behalf of the principal residents of Lakefield to say that the council and the people of the village fully appreciate the value of the services of the Brigade, and that they fully recognize the spirit in which the Peterborough Council allowed their engine and brigade to go to their assistance. They very much regret that the impression should have been given which is suggested by the article in the Review, which is calculated to disturb the friendly feeling which should exist between the two communities.

THE VAGRANT COW.

We are glad to see that this intolerable nuisance, which has long been making the lives of many of our citizens a burden to them, is likely to be dealt with by the Council, Councillor Smith having given notice of a motion to restrain cows from running at large on the streets, during certain prohibited hours, to be fixed by the Council. Though it is desirable that cattle should not be allowed to be at large on the streets at any time, it may be found that the nuisance and danger to shade trees and gardens can be removed or modified, by allowing cows the liberty of the streets during the day time, when people would have some chance of protecting their property, in order to afford poor mens' cows a chance to get such subsistence as the wayside affords. That will be for the Council to consider; but we hope that they will not fail to take some step which will abate a nuisance and give some encouragement to those who are going to trouble and expense in improving and beautifying the streets of the town.

THE TRAMP NUISANCE.

Since the approach to the town of the Grand Junction work, that highly undesirable member of society, the Tramp, has made his appearance in large numbers, and whether importunate, impudent, whining or grovelling, he may always be relied upon to be intoxicated. The wives of our citizens are in constant dread of his appearance, and the head of the family is in a chronic state of nervous apprehension about the safety of his property. The tramp may be ragged, dirty, and hungry, but he always contrives to get whiskey, tobacco and matches, and his propensity for lodging at nights in woodsheds and stables, and indulging in the weed during the hours in which honest men are abed, is a serious disturbing element in our every-day existence. Quite a number of these dangerous representatives of the Grand Junction enterprise have already done penance before the Police Magistrate, and we trust that dignitary will hereafter give them the benefit of the heaviest penalty the law puts within his reach. A few stern lessons may have the effect of discouraging these loafers from visiting the town, and drive them to seek the milder regulations of Bobcaygeon or some other congenial clime. The police should be notified of each case where men are found begging around the streets, so that the vagrant may be brought into prompt requisition. In no case should money be given, no matter what tale of woe may be unfolded to move the compassion of the confiding listener. There is no excuse for any of them being out of work in the harvest season, and in view of the work going on on the railway. On the other side of the lines it is customary for the lady of the house to keep a base ball club behind the door, and we have heard already of several cases in which a vigorous exercise of that weapon was richly merited. The greatest danger from the tramp is at night, when the premises he occupies are never safe from fire, and it might be judicious to so divide the police duties that one of the guardians of the peace should be assigned to night duty.

BROWN MEMORIAL FUND.

At a meeting of the Brown Memorial Committee held on Tuesday evening, at which the Mayor, Rev. V. Clementi and Mr. J. R. Stratton, Secretary, were present, the list of subscriptions was closed, and the Secretary instructed to collect the amounts and forward the same to the Central Committee at Toronto. The sum subscribed is $114 50. No effort was made to collect a large amount, but rather to make it a representative tribute of respect. As will be seen by the list of subscribers appended, the contributions are from the representative men of both parties:

The Idyl Wild Regatta.

This long looked for event came off on Thursday last at Idyl Wild and was quite as successful in every respect as had been anticipated. A large numbes from Peterborough went down on the Golden-Eye, and numerous visitors attended from Hastings, Harwood, Cobourg, Toronto and Hamilton. The hotel arrangements being now in thorough working order, in charge of Mr. Gilbert, who has achieved quite an exceptional popularity as Hotel Manager, the parties partook of a good square meal, and found themselves duly fortified for the events that were to succeed. Mr. John McClelland, a veteran aquatic sportsman, acted as referee during the contests, and about 3 o'clock called the first race, the canoe race. John Howard, an Indian from Hiawatha, R. Landreville, of Keene, and R. S. Cook of Peterborough, were the only entries that came up to the scratch. A good start was effected, Cook taking the lead which he maintained till the buoy was turned, Landreville second and Poor Lo third After turning the buoy the red skin left Landerville in the third place, and pushed Cook with such success that he passed him at the third quarter and came in a winner by four or five lengths. Both parties paddled for all they were worth, and the race was a very interesting one, affording quite an excitement for the spectators who viewed the scene from the banks of the island. In the four-oared race, lapstreak boats and oarsmains, C. Shaw's crew was the only one out of three entries that showed up. They rowed over the course and claimed the medals. The great event of the day, however, was the single scull race race for the splendid trophy, the Idyl Wild Cup. Out of seven entries the following started; Æ. Jarvis, Hamilton, A. Paton, Harwood, T. Jarvis, Gore's Landing, and W. P. Shaw, Peterboro'. After a capital start Jarvis and Shaw drew ahead, and it seemed as if the race was to be between those two parties, but it was soon shown that the race was, like the handle of a teapot, all on one side, it being evident that Jarvis could win as he pleased, and he came in in sixteen minutes, as computed, with Shaw ten seconds and four lengths behind. Jarvis had a much superior boat in weight and construction, but in any event evidently could have beaten Shaw. He appears to be pretty well known as a sculler west, as Dunspaugh of Toronto, who had entered, came as far as Cobourg, but hearing that Jarvis was to compete turned tail and took his shell back home. About five o'clock the Peterborough party got aboard the Golden-Eye and took their way homewards, arriving at about nine o'clock, all having enjoyed a very pleasant and profitable day. The improvements still continue at the Island, the latest additions to the comforts and conveniences being two new bathing houses. We understand the enterprising proprietor Mr. Calcutt—the Commodore of Rice Lake—intends erecting in time for next season's trade an enlarged hotel, which will increase the success of this pleasant summer resort.

The Handford Case.

Latest Revelations—More Damaging Exposures.

A Toronto telegram says:—A lady whose name has been prominently mentioned in connection with the clerical scandal in which Mr. Handford was a principal figure, now appears anxious to expose the conduct of that gentleman so far as she is concerned. A few nights ago the female in question visited a Deacon's meeting in Bond street, church for this purpose, but Mr. Handford now having no connection with the church, the deacons did not wish to hear anything more of the matter which has caused them so much trouble. They were unable to remove the woman, and Rev. Mr. Handford was sent for. On being made acquainted with the nature of the visit he properly declined to interfere, and after a protracted stay the woman finally left of her own accord. She comes under the category of a grass widow, and from remarks dropped by her, her condition is interesting. It is supposed that jealousy of another woman, whose name has been mentioned in this particular, was the incentive to the proposed denouncement.

TORONTO, July 22.—To the general regret, it appears that the Handford scandal is about to break out afresh. The complaining deacons in this charge against Mr. Handford charge him with criminality with one Mrs. G., a grass widow, rather preposessing in appearance.

When the examination came on this lady had left the city and the investigating committee tried in vain to induce her to return and give her evidence. She however wrote them a letter. Mrs. G, recently returned to the city and finds the church doors closed against her She demands admission, and appears before the deacons and makes a clean breast of it. Her evidence goes to show that Mr. Handford indeed her to leave the city as the Investigation Committee was organized, and paid her fare to Rochester. He himself wrote the letter for her to the Committee, she copying it. She deposes that for two years she has been Handford's concubine, criminality being indulged both in the church and elsewhere; that they were once discovered, and had to pay hush money; that Handford got tired of her, and took up with Mrs. Leslie, using her in a like manner; that he supported her as long as she engaged his fancy, but that he would not contribute to her support as soon as he got another, and that he had left her with a blasted character, penniless. She denounces Handford as a heartless scoundrel, and thinks it would be an outrage for such a man to be allowed to open another church in Toronto. These developments have caused tremendous excitement.—London Free Press.

The City of the Dead.

VISIT TO THE PETERBOROUGH CEMETERY.

One of the most unmistakable evidences of the progress of refinement in any community is the expenditure of care and embellishment on the place set apart as the last resting place of those who go on before us into the mysteries that lie beyond this finite existence. Whether it be the tribute of public respect to the memory of those who lived not for themselves alone, or the cherished tenderness for the parent or child, brother or sister, removed by the inexorable master of all flesh, which may be exemplified by carefully tended graves, a cemetery which presents these marks of care and devotion to memories which only are left of the departed, is a certain indication of elevated sentiment and refinement, and is as discernible in the community as the individual. A visit to the Little Lake Cemetery at this season of the year will convince anyone conversed with the least appreciation of the beautiful in nature or in art, that the community owes a debt of gratitude to those to whose enterprise and forethought this beautiful spot was made available for cemetery purposes. At any time on a Sunday afternoon, when the weather is favorable, the road round the lake may be seen thronged with visitors on their way to and from the Cemetery, some with pious purposes, and others to enjoy the cool air, calm, and quiet, and the natural and artificial beauties of the place. A visit there on Sunday afternoon last, after an absence of several months, shows that in that time the place has undergone marked improvements, the approach has been beautified by the embellishment of the strip of ground acquired some time ago north of the street to the lake. A handsome fence runs directly west from the cemetery gate to the water's edge. The access to the bank of the lake has been sodded, a very successful "catch" being secured by Mr. Kelly, planted with shrubbery, and adorned in the centre with a bank of flowers. At the farther end the cemetery ground is reached by a terrace with two falls, and the bare look of the outbuildings at the edge of the woods are relieved by being neatly painted. As you approach the most striking object is the monument just completed in memory of the late William Lundy, by his at a cost of some $2,000, which adds greatly to the appearance of the view. It is of white Italian marble, beautifully finished, with granite pedestals. The shaft is surmounted by a sort of canopy of elegant design upheld by four pillars, the whole built on a massive scale, and presenting an elegant and imposing appearance. It is 17 feet in height 5 feet square at the base, and weighs ten tons. The late Mr. Lundy who was the father of our present Mayor, came to Peterborough in 1830 and was among the pioneers of the early settlement. Mayor Lundy's, grandfather the late James Brown who was one of the early settlers of Cavan, is also buried here. Near this lot is a very handsome marble column beneath which repose the remains of the late Sheriff Conger. The monument is surrounded by a very beautiful cedar hedge, and bears the following inscription:

In memory of W. S. Conger M. P. P. for the County of Peterborough who during his life time held the office of Sheriff, of County Warden of the County Council and Mayor of the town of Peterborough. This monument was erected by public subscription in testimony of his continued and disinterested efforts to advance the interests of the County of Peterborough.

Near by is the resting place of Mrs. Green, mother-in-law of Mrs. H. Calcutt, a nicely tended lot ornamented with flowers. The late Squire Henthorn, whose aged partner followed him to the last home not long ago, rests here, with others of the first residents of Peterborough, among them Mr. Oughtry Morrow and the late Mr. McComb, these lots being all in first-class condition and nicely looked after. Four members of the Elder family are in the family lot a little to the southward. Here is seen the monument of the Flemmings, an old family who all appear to have died out from this section. A neat hedge surrounds the lot of Mr. Geo. Hilliard, which contrasts very strongly with a neglected one in the vicinity. On the lot of the late Mr. Hall, father of Mr. George Hall, of Hall & Ostrom, was an elegant lot of flowers and hanging baskets. The lot of Mr. Joseph Walton has an elegant monument, simple in design, made from Aberdeen granite. Two suspended hearts, surrounded by floral offerings, mark the resting-place of two children of Mr. B. Shortley. A very handsome hedge surrounds the lot of Mr. Adam Dawson. A very well kept lot, with some handsome floral attractions, is that in which repose the father, mother and brother of Mr. Henry Best. There are handsome stones on the lots of the late Adam Stark, (the lot being kept in order by Mr. Kelly for the two sons who live in Chicago) on the lots of the families of Alex. Morrow and W. J. Mason, Geo. Johnston, and on the grave of the late W. Thompson.

is the inscription on a modest tombstone. Another inscription bears the following tribute to the dead:

"Erected as a tribute of respect to the memory of John Mash, surgeon, who died Feb. 13, 1878. He was constant and unremitting in all acts of benevolence and charity, at all times ready, and by his skill in his profession he rendered to the poor and needy his gratuitous services."

The lot of the Armstrong family, of Otonabee, has a fine monument surrounded by a thick hedge of low cedars. Another fine stone has this inscription:

"In memory of Robert Thompson, who died ——, aged —— years."

The gentleman for whom it is intended is yet in the land of the living. A handsome blue granite shaft occupies the family lot of Mr. James Stratton, which is beautified by flowers and hanging baskets. Mr. Samuel White's lot has a handsome monument, and is kept in very pretty condition. A simple white cross, surrounded by flower beds and adorned by an elegant weeping willow, marks the resting place of the late Captain Wallace. That of the late Wm. Hall has a fine column of grey marble. The late Captain Eubidge and George Barlee are among the numerous interments in the lot of the Clementi family. Among other monuments which strike attention are those of the late A. W. Kempt, John Matchett, Uriah Payne, W. S. Kelley, of Bridgenorth, Wm. H. Moore, Jas Armstrong, of Monaghan, and the late Judge J. B Hall. The lot of Mr. W. Galley is beautifully decorated with flowers and urns and hanging baskets. A very handsome white marble cross marks the lot of Judge Dennistoun. A handsome stone indicates the burial place of the late Wm. Hall, who has a finer monument, however, in the Protestant Poor Trust. One of the most striking ornaments of the ground is the tomb of the late Rev. Mark Burnham. The lots of Mrs. Dickson, Arch. Guedfellow, Mrs. Gilmour and S. Jamieson are noted for the care and adornament bestowed on them, as also the family burial lot of Mr. Edmund Chamberlain. That of Mr. James Best is marked by a graceful weeping ash. We note the burial places of the late Thos. M. Fairbairn, M. P. P., of the late Hon. F. Simon Brown, who once administered justice for the whole Newcastle District, and of James Linen, who will be remembered as a drill sergeant at the time of the Fenian raid. The lot of P. Connal has a fine monument and is very prettily decorated with flowers. A somewhat peculiar, but imposing arch of marble conspires the resting place of the late T. Lamsie, and near by a fluted marble column, surrounded by an iron fence, shows the marks of constant attention, in the floral attraction tastefully supplied. the lot of Mrs. John Whyte. There are many other tombs that strike the eye in granite, white and grey marble, Aberdeen granite, etc., and the effect of the various colors and forms, tastefully relieved with beautiful beds, urns, and baskets of flowers, as the various views open up through the trees and shrubbery, is beautiful in the extreme. The walks and borders are in the most perfect condition, clean and well-tended, and everywhere the skill of Mr. Kelley, and his unremitting labor are discernible. On the south side of the cemetery, a large area has this year been underbrushed, cleared up, stones and stumps removed, walks made, and a large number of very fine sites made available; the amount of work accomplished in so short a time being scarcely credible. We would suggest to those interested in some of the older monuments which have become blackened and corroded by time, that they can have them restored to their original purity by applying to Mr. Kelley. It would be an improvement to have a dozen or so of rustic seats available for the use of lady visitors—they would be both useful and appropriate. An improvement of the carpet at the ascent might be made to advantage by the removal of a couple of the trees south of the entrance way, as they impede the view of some of the finest of the monuments. We believe it is the intention to adopt some scheme for setting aside a fund for the beautifying and care of the grounds, which would not leave is so much to private effort. We would advise some of our local artists to make some stereoscopic views in the grounds and across the lake—they could not be excelled in beauty and picturesqueness. We might add that the monument of the Lundy family was erected by Mr. Chas. Watson, of Toronto, who has been so favorably in; and with Peterborough during his stay here that there is a prospect of his establishing his business here.

BOARD OF EDUCATION.

At the meeting of the Board of Education, held on Friday evening last, there were present the Chairman, Mr. Stevenson, and Messrs. McClelland, Dumble, Deane, Burnham, Cox, Wrighton, Menzies, Toole, Carlyale, Hughes, Rutherford and Best.

Mr. Dumble, from the Committee on Appointments, read and moved the adoption of the following report on

THE PRINCIPAL'S RESIGNATION.

The Committee on Appointments begs to report that after two sittings and careful deliberation over the matters referred to them, and after communicating with the Principal, they are now able to report that the Principal in view of the effort of the Board to lessen the expenditure of the school, has consented to continue in the service of the Board at the salary fixed by the Board in March last, but subject to conditions which it will be for the Board to consider, and which will more fully appear in the appended letter of the Principal.

Regarding Miss Panton's communication, the Committee report that Miss Panton was correct in assuming that the "Junior English Teacher," was meant by the "Teacher of the II Form," in the March resolution referred to in her letter.

As to Miss Becket's request, this Committee feels that it is not at liberty to deal with a matter which has been determined by the resolution of the Board. Your Committee therefore suggest that the Secretary be desired to send Miss Becket a copy of the resolution respecting claims by teachers for payment while they have been ill, as she is, no doubt, unaware that the matter has been dealt with by general resolution.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

D. W. DUMBLE, Chairman.

July 23rd, 1880.

CONDITIONAL WITHDRAWAL.

Appended to the report was the following letter from the Principal:—

To the Chairman and members of the Board of Education, Peterborough:

GENTLEMEN.—I have the honor to say that on the 21st instant, I received from the Chairman of the Committee on Appointments a copy of a resolution passed at a meeting of the Committee on the 17th instant, to the effect,—

"That inasmuch as this Committee feels that it is obligatory on the Board to lessen the expenditure in connection with the schools, this Committee cannot recommend any change in the salaries as fixed by them. The Committee hope that the Principal and teachers affected will continue in the service of the Board until circumstances will justify them in increasing the salaries."

To this communication I replied that I should be happy to comply with the resolution of the Committee if it were possible to do so, but that I could not unconditionally accept the resolution of the March meeting of the Board.

To-day I received the following copy of a resolution passed at a subsequent meeting of the Committee, held on the 19th instant:—

"The Committee regret that after communicating with Mr. Jeffers they are unable to come to any satisfactory arrangement, but they hope that Mr. Jeffers will withdraw his resignation as they have a complete confidence in his ability and will exceedingly regret to lose his valuable services."

Although I still maintain that the effect of such resolutions as that of March cannot fail to be of pernicious influence on the independence of persons, and moreover took the responsibility of resolution in question was not passed in strict legal agreement with the by-laws of your Board, inasmuch as the latter require one month's notice in order to rescind any motion affecting the finances of the Board, yet I am willing to go half-way towards meeting the members in the present crisis. The first resolutions of the Committee on Appointments backed by the urgent solicitations of a large number of citizens whom I highly respect, lead me to make the following proposition:—

I am willing to allow my resignation to rest in abeyance, and will continue to discharge the duties of Principal on condition that if the new Board in January, 1881, does not see fit to rescind the above-mentioned resolution of March last, I shall be at liberty to cease my duties in connection with your schools without giving any further notice of three months.

I have the honor to be, gentlemen,

Your most obedient servant,

July 21st 1880. J. PETER JEFFERS.

Mr. Dumble said the Committee had felt that there was no necessity they should part with Mr. Jeffers if they could retain his services. It was a simple matter of dollars and cents. In March last the Board had seen fit to reduce Mr. Jeffers, salary from $1,200 to $1,000. In doing so they had not intended any reflection upon Mr. Jeffers' efficiency; the only object was economy. The Committee desired to retain Mr. Jeffers at the reduced salary, and he had shown that he was not stubborn and was willing to meet the Board half way. While they could not recommend any withdrawal from the March resolution, they thought it desirable to retain Mr. Jeffers' services at the reduced rates for the present, until perhaps they would be better able to restore the old salary. Mr. Jeffers had peculiar ability for the management of such an institution, and he had by his conduct and his courtesy maintained harmony among the teachers, which they had never been able to have before, and had advanced the efficiency of the school. The reports of the Inspector on the Intermediate Examinations speak stronger than any words in favor of the policy by which Mr. Jeffers had built up the schools. He thought the true kind of economy would be to gradually decrease the expenses by increasing the income from Government and from fees, and considering the success attained by the schools under Mr. Jeffers' care, he did not think they would be doing right to lose his services for a paltry $100. To Mr. Jeffers it was a matter of pride and principle more than the simple matter of money. As an instance of the interest which he took in his work, he might say that Mr. Jeffers had given $100 to the pupil passing the best University Examination. He believed a majority of the public would prefer to see Mr. Jeffers retained, and for his part he would be glad in the interests of the schools to see him retained at the head of it. The Committee had made no recommendation but left the matter to be dealt with as the Board might deem proper.

On motion, Mr. James F. Dennistoun was heard before the Board and addressed them at some length. He said the action to be taken by the Board would have an important influence on the future of the schools, and as an old member of the Board, and taking a deep public interest in their success, he felt anxious that a mistake should not be committed. He pointed out the successful manner in which the existing system had been worked out to its present state of efficiency. There was a growing feeling that by reduction of the teachers salaries the taxation for school purposes might be reduced. He believed the true way was to reduce the cost of the schools, was to maintain efficient management and a good staff of teachers at sufficient salaries, by which the income from the Government would be increased. On the results of Interpedidate examinations, which depended entirely upon the teachers, the grant of the Government was based. The more efficient they made the schools the more money is got from the Government, and the less is required from the town. Then in the case of the County grant, by the efficiency of the school that grant had been augmented from $120 to $780, and it was very doubtful if they reduced the staff of teachers whether or not the grant would be reversed. If they lost this grant the amount of it would have to be made up by additional taxation. By not interfering with the existing arrangements they might secure $1,000 probably next year, which would be the better kind of economy. He believed also that the fees might be gradually raised, and entered very fully into the subject, pointing out the advantages of adopting this method in preference to reducing teachers' salaries.

Mr. Toole expressed disapproval of the action of the chairman in submitting to Mr. Jeffers the proceedings of the Committee.

Mr. Dumble said the resolutions were submitted to Mr. Jeffers so that he might have the opportunity of withdrawing his resignation. This was perfectly reasonable unless they desired to drive Mr. Jeffers out of the schools.

The report was received.

Mr. Deane said they were all interested in the schools, but he considered they should not allow the head master to remain in a position from which he could resign at any time without the usual notice. He moved that Mr. Jeffers' resignation be accepted.

Mr. Best seconded the motion.

Mr. McClelland thought Mr. Jeffers should be given a chance to withdraw his resignation unconditionally. He thought the present proposition of Mr. Jeffers an improper one, as he wanted the Board to agree to a condition he would not accept himself.

Mr. Rutherford thought it would be unwise to adopt the resolution of Mr. Deane, after Mr. Jeffers had in a manner agreed to accept the terms of the Board.

Moved by Mr. Dumble, seconded by Mr. McClelland, that this Board is pleased to learn that Mr. Jeffers is willing to withdraw his resignation, but as it would be a violation of the rule of hiring adopted and invariably followed by the Board in employing teachers to allow a teacher to leave without the required the required three months' notice, the Board will be pleased if Mr. Jeffers, before the next regular meeting, will unconditionally withdraw his resignation.

Mr. Cox expressed the wish that the Board should give Mr. Jeffers an opportunity of re-considering the matter.

After some further remarks by Messrs. Deane and Cox, Mr. Dumble's motion was declared carried, and the Board adjourned.

A Correction.

The Editor of the EXAMINER.

DEAR SIR.—In last weeks Review, the following appeared from its own Correspondent at Young's Point:—

"Ebenezer Church.—The Rev. N. Clark of Lakefield, preached in Ebenezer Church last Sabbath afternoon, after being shut out from the preaching for over twelve months, through the whim of the Rev. Mr. Rowe, who formerly preached here and at Lakefield. The church was built as a union church, but through some flaw it is claimed entirely by the Bible Christians." The foregoing from the Correspondent of the Review was not called for if it was true, but it is not the truth. The Rev. N. Clark was not shut out of Ebenezer Church, through the whim of the Rev. Mr. Rowe, or through any other person's whim, and further. The church was not built as a union church, but as a Bible Christian Church and to the Bible Christian denomination it belongs, and was so intended to be built, and hence there was no flaw.

I am yours.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE HIGH COURT.

(Brantford Courier.)

This society commenced their annual session in Clinton, Ont., on Tuesday, July 13th, and concluded their labors on Thursday 15th.

The meeting was very harmonious throughout, and a large amount of business, which will, no doubt, tend to the success of the Order, was transacted. Representatives from all sections of the Province were present, and very satisfactory reports of the steady increase of the Order and confidence of its members in its permanency and stability were made.

The following are the officers of the High Court elected for the ensuing year: Rev. Bro. G.G. McRobbie, Tilsonburg, H.C.R., re-elected; E. C. Clarke, Listowell, H.V.C.R.; Geo. Lindley, Brantford, High Secretary, re-elected; Nelson Upton, Waterford, High Treasurer, re-elected; Robt. W. Abell, Toronto, H. S. W.; Thos. Bithray, Peterborough, H. J. W.; Jos. Northwood, Chatham, H. S. B.; John Carpenter, Chatham, H. J. B.; A. M. Stanley, M. D., Watford, Chairman Medical Board; R. C. Young, M. D., Ridgetown, Member of Med. Board; P. Robb, Clinton, and J. C. Hincks, St. Thomas, auditors Geo. Sinclair, Ingersoll, H. Marshall; C. Whale, Waterford, H. Conductor.

This Order is a purely Canadian Institution and we believe is well worthy the confidence and support of all Canadians. Its principal object appears to be to provide for the liberal support of the widows and orphans of deceased members by the mutual aid plan, and by this means the Order has established the cheapest insurance of which we have heard—by the payment of the small sum of fifty cents per month by each member the sum of one thousand dollars is secured to his widow and orphans or legal heirs at his death. Three deaths have occurred in the Order since November last, and $1,000 has been paid their widows and orphans—viz., to Mrs. Donnells and children, of St. Thomas, $1,000; Mrs. Messer and children, of Bloswels, $1,000; Mrs. Bennevis and children, Listowell, $1,000. In addition its members have all the social and fraternal advantages possessed by other societies, ample provision being made for assisting members in distress and relieving their wants, during sickness From the progress made by the Order during the past year as shown by returns at the above meeting, it appears to be taking first rank among the Benevolent Societies of the country. Having examined the Act of Incorporation and By-laws of the Society, we believe it is established on a sound and permanent basis—and wish the Canadian Order of Foresters every success.

MUNRO & ALEXANDER

JUST WHAT WE THINK.

Dr. Franklin's maxim was a wise one:—"Nothing is cheap that you do not want," to which might be added:—"buy just what you want to get along with at first, as it is only by experience you can tell what will be the wants of yourself and family." If you spend all your money now, you will find you have purchased many things which are not actually needed, and have little money left to get many things which will surely be wanted. This for the heads of families to ponder on.

WE MAKE THESE REMARKS

in view of the possible BONANZAS just now offered to the public in the way of the so called Clearing Sales.

NOW IT STANDS TO REASON

—that the close observer and careful buyer will readily admit the truth of the statement—that if a stock of goods is purchased with a due perception of what the public need, and disposed of over the counter in the regular course of every day trade, there will be no necessity for Clearing Sales. This is just the position we stand in to-day.

OUR STOCK IS REDUCED,

and we are glad to be able to say so. Still, we have a nice assortment of goods to meet the present wants of customers, but nothing to carry over until next season. We knew our stock was purchased at prices that could not BE BEATEN, and therein was the key to our success, and further, our prosperity is mainly due to the popularity we have attained among people everywhere on account of the excellent character of the goods, and the VERY REASONABLE PRICES at which we have offered them. Hence we shall advertise no

The Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, JULY 29, 1880.

Pic-Nicing.—The Foresters are having their annual pic-nic at Stoney Lake to-day. Quite a large number left Lakefield for that destination.

"Taxberry."—Everyone in testimony of its super excellence is try it. Delightfully refreshing. Everybody uses "Taxberry." 29-13ins Left Town.—Mr. E. B. Mowat, of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, left town last week to take a promotion at London, Ont., in the same institution. Mr. Mowat will be missed among a large circle of friends with whom he was a great favorite.

Get Shod.—Those who desire to secure stylish, durable and substantial foot-wear can get the best and most fashionable goods at R. White's, George street, near Simcoe. Mr. is selling out as a handsome stock for what it will bring. 32-tf Creditable.—Miss Sarah Keele, of this town, took honors in French and English in the result of the recent local examinations for women at Toronto University. Miss Keele is a pupil of the Institute here, and this incident is but another evidence of the success and thoroughness of the management of that institution.

Excursion.—Tuesday was quite a day for excursions. At 7 o'clock the Golden Rye was comfortably crowded with the equestrianists of the Bible Christian Church, in charge of Rev. Mr. Roberts and Rev. Mr. Cannom, and at 9 o'clock the King-Fisher took down a large party from St. Andrew's Church Sunday School.

Won't Come to Time.—The Belleville Lacrosse Club owes the Peterborough Club a return match. The home team solicited them to make the necessary arrangements, on three different occasions, but they have not responded. It looks very much as if they were afraid to meet our boys. Perhaps the Belleville papers can enlighten us on the subject?

Midland Railway.—Traffic receipts for week ending July 21st, 1880, were:—Passengers and mails, $3,338.94; freight, $4,577.69; total for week, $8,026.23. For corresponding week in 1879,—Passengers and mails, $1,264.10; freight, $2,302.62; total for week, $3,444.11; increase, $1,468.51. Aggregate from 1st of January, 1880, $165,594.99. Increase over 1879, $46,489.32.

A Golden Opportunity should never be neglected—therefore those requiring cheap, comfortable and durable wear for their feet should not fail to examine Mr. W. J. Larmour's stock, previous to the closing of his great clearing sale of imported and ready-made work. Remember the stock is all new and this season's goods, and is being offered at prices much below the present ruling wholesale figures. 32-tf Libelling the Firemen.—In last week's issue of the Review the Lakefield correspondent of that paper accuses the Peterborough Firemen of using "very bad language" and soliciting alms from the Lakefield corporation. We have made enquiry from gentlemen in Lakefield, and find that parties who went up during the fire as spectators, did not conduct themselves with that propriety which should always characterize Peterborough away from home. So far as the firemen are concerned, however, they attended to their business, and it is not fair to throw the blame of objectionable conduct and language indulged in by a few idlers who went up for the fun of the thing.

Good News.—No more Chills and Ague in this section. Our Druggists are selling an article called "Ague Conquerer." It is about the only satisfactory preparation sold for the cure of Fever and Ague, Dumb Chills, Intermittent or Bilious Fevers. The Proprietor of the Ague Conquerer has used but little energy to make this medicine known, and yet its sale is immense in Ague Districts. It purifies the blood, Liver, and other Secretory Organs so effectualy that the Chills do not return even where persons have had them for years. Entirely vegetable preparation. Price, 50 cents and $1.00 per Bottle. Two doses will stop the chill. 33-18ins

Canada Thistles Act.—The following is the substance of the more important sections of the new Canada Thistles Act:—Every occupier of land is required to prevent, by cutting, all Canadian thistles from going to seed, and for knowingly neglecting to do so he shall be fined from $5 to $10. All highway overseers shall see that all thistles on their respective highways are properly cut; they shall notify occupiers of land of thistles growing on their premises; and if, five days after such notice, the thistles are not cut, the overseer shall enter upon the land and have them cut, and shall not be liable for any damages done to crops. Every overseer who neglects these duties shall be fined from $10 to $30.

Street and Bridge Contracts.—The following are the tenders opened by the Street and Bridge Committee on Monday evening, the contract being awarded to the lowest tenderer in each case, the next above to recieve the work in case of the refusal of the lowest to accept:—

Drain and culvert on Sherbrooke street.—J. O'Brien, $110.00; Joseph Lundy, $134.99; John Brockenridge, $136.50; John Cronin, $137.50.

Grade on London street.—Richard Sheehey, $74.75; Edward Thompson, $74.99; Thomas Cronin, $112.50; M. O'Donnell, $114.69; John Cronin, $125.00; John Brockenridge, $154.35.

Culvert on Crescent street.—Michael Bolton, $140.00; John McDonald, $162.99; John O'Brien, $175.00; Joseph Lundy, $182.99; Samuel Griffith, $185.00; John Brockenridge, $185.00; A. Williams, $200.00.

Absent Friends.—We have received a package of Paris papers from Mr. Alex. Elliott, of the firm of Rush & Elliott, who is away on his continental tour. A correspondent of the Sackville, N.B., Transcript, who was on board the steamship Anchoria at the time of the late disaster, writes to that paper:—"Mr. Alex. Elliott, of Peterborough, Ontario, deserves also much praise. With his cost off he worked like a hero, and after assisting many of the passengers into the boats, he placed himself at the oars, and made several trips between the ships, working until all the passengers and most of the stateroom baggage had been transferred. I was proud of him as a representative of Young Canada."

The Toronto & Ottawa Railway.—Mr. J. C. Bailey, Engineer of this enterprise, on Tuesday commenced an examination of the country from Peterborough to Toronto, by way of Cavanville and south of Lake Scugog. He states that when this examination has been completed and duly considered, a location survey will be at once commenced. He asserts that Mr. Gooderham intends to go on with the work, at the earliest possible moment, and that those who are skeptical on the subject will be convinced by the logic of facts at the earliest reasonable period. Evidently he has no doubt on the subject himself, and we trust his confidence is well founded.

Under the Town Clock.—Mr. Luke Fisher is about to remove the extensive grocery and flour and feed business carried on by him at present opposite the Examiner Office, to Mr. Bradburn's Town Hall building. He has leased the store next to the Arcade on the north side, and during the last two weeks workmen have been engaged under the superintendence of Mr. Lasher in fitting the place with all the conveniences for a first-class flour and feed business. This week is now completed, and Mr. Fisher intends moving in at once. In addition to the regular grocery trade and the flour and feed business, Mr. Fisher intends going into the general commission business. Being located directly upon the Market he will have the best of opportunities of purchasing at the best advantage. Parties requiring butter, eggs, hay, oats, wood and farmers' commodities generally by leaving their orders with Mr. Fisher will be assured of being supplied with the best the market affords, at the lowest prices, and will at the same time save themselves the time and trouble of waiting about the market to make purchases. This business will be a great convenience to house-keepers, and will no doubt be largely taken advantage of. Those who buy butter, eggs, &c., in the ordinary way have to take their chance about the result; those who buy through Mr. Fisher are guaranteed first-class value for their money. 31

Good Shooting.—At last the "hum" has struck Peterborough. It is the hum of that evidence of prosperity—the Tramp. Will the Review make a note of it.

Commenced.—The work of construction of he base tower has been commenced by the contractor, under the superintendence of Mr. J. E. Belcher, Town Engineer.

Early Barley.—Mr. Alex. Rosebrough, of Smith, sold 220 bushels of barley this week to Mr. Henry Calcutt, for brewing purposes. This is an unusually early sale.

Appointment.—Mr. Alex. Brown, of Emily, has been appointed Bailiff of the Fifth Division Court of this County, in the room of Thos. Giles, who resigned the position.

Answer to Correspondent.—"School-boy" is quite right in his supposition. He will find the word "cannibal" defined in the dictionary as a "human being that eats human flesh." Consequently Mr. Ryan's horse could not have been a cannibal. The word "Hippophagic" is original with the Review. It is not authorized by any other lexicographer than the one attached to the staff of that paper.

Assessment Appeals.—Judge Dennison on Tuesday decided the appeals before him from the Court of Revision. The appeal of the Mechanics' Institute was allowed, the Judge holding that the property was exempted by statute. The assessment of the Peterborough Club property was reduced to $1,800. Mr. Edmison appeared for Mr. Bradburn, whose assessment on Town Hall building was reduced $2,000.

An Equine Tragedy.—On Monday night, about 11 o'clock, a terrible commotion was heard in the stables of Mr. R. N. Reddy. The proprietor on entering the stables found that a stallion, belonging to Mr. John Ryan, had broken loose and attacked the stallion "Old Hambletonian," owned by Mr. Reddy. The latter horse being tied securely could not defend himself, and was actually eaten to death by the other. After considerable trouble Ryan's horse was driven away, and the other animal, a valuable thoroughbred, was put out of misery. His throat and chest were eaten out, and presented a shocking spectacle.

Toronto Regatta.—The Mail gives the following entries for the regatta to be held on Toronto Bay on the 6th proximo:

SENIOR FOUR-OARED SHELL.

Peterborough Rowing Club.—W. P. Shaw; bow, R. B. Rogers, 2; C. C. Rogers, 3, A. Belcher, stroke. Spare men—Messrs. E. B. Edwards, C. S. Shaw.

DOUBLE SCULL SHELLS.

Peterborough Rowing Club.—Messrs. G. C. Rogers and A. J. Belcher.

PAIRED OARED SHELLS.

Peterborough Rowing Club.—Messrs. G. C. Rogers and A. J. Belcher.

Wake up Athletes!—The Norwood Register of last week says:—"Messrs M. McKay, F. H. Brennan, and P. O'Shea, members of the Norwood High School Athletic club, challenge any three men in the County of Peterborough to engage in a friendly contest at Norwood any time during the month of August of this year. The following events to compose the match:—1, 100 yards flat race; 2, 220 yards hurdle race; 3, three-legged race, 100 yards; 4, standing high jump; 5, standing long jump; 6, standing three jumps; 7, running high jump; 8, running long jump; 9, throwing the hammer; 10, throwing cricket ball; 11, putting the stone."

Midland Regatta.—A deputation arrived in town from Midland City on Tuesday evening, consisting of Mr. McFarlane, of the Argosy, Mr. Gladstone and Mr. Keys, of the Midland R. R., to make arrangements for a grand regatta at Midland City on the 12th of August. It is proposed to offer about $800 in prizes—a $300 cup, similar to the Idyl-Wild cup, for amateur scullers; a $200 canoe cup, and money prizes for professional scullers, ranging from $300 down. Satisfactory arrangements were effected and the event will be announced in due course. It is likely the services of the Fire Brigade Band will be engaged for the occasion. Cheap excursions will be run on the Midland and other railways.

FIRE BRIGADE BAND.

It was found desirable to ensure the largest chances of success at the Band competition at Toronto next month this fall that some new instruments, superior to those in use, and giving some of the principal musicians in the band the opportunity of doing full justice to themselves and to the band, should be procured, and as the members of the band are at large expenses not only in the time which they devote to practice, but in the purchase of music, a subscription was taken up for the purchase of these instruments, to which the undermentioned were contributors. We are glad to see that the services of the band to the town, and the credit which they reflect upon the town by their deportment and achievements when abroad, are to some extent recognised. Hitherto the band has not received that encouragement from the public to which they were fairly entitled, but we are glad to see that they are beginning to be recognised as a public institution to which we owe and only expectation but substantial assistance. It might be mentioned that a number of citizens, who have contributed liberally to the band fund for other purposes, were not visited for this special object, and hence their names do not appear here:—

POLICE COURT NOTES.

—On Thursday last Wm. Fisher was committed for fourteen days in default of a fine of $8, for blasphemy on the public streets.

—Maria Foster was afflicted with a weakness of the head, which caused P. C. McGhee to think she was drunk. She was discharged with a caution.

—Sam. Blakely was brought up in a bad state of intoxication charged with breaking into Mr. Calcutt's brewery on the previous night. He was remanded till Monday.

—On Friday John Goodfitt's was sent up for ten days for being drunk on the streets.

—On Saturday, Thos. George, of Lindsay, was fined $2 for a similar offence, and went on rejoicing, to work on the Grand Junction Railway.

—Jos. Barrie, who had aggravated the offence of drunkenness by disorderly conduct, was remanded till Monday to get sobered up.

—The inevitable John Smith, for a similar offence, was similarly remanded for a similar reason.

—On Wednesday W. Brignal, who was drunk on the street, acknowledged the corn, and was discharged with a caution.

—Priscilla Pine charged Florence McAuliffe with assault. The difficulty arose concerning a common right of two families to a pump. The assault was proven and the defendant fined $5 and $2.60 costs. This elicited a counter case, in which Lewis Pine, Jos. Pine, sr., and Jos. Pine, jr., were bound over to keep the peace with McAuliffe.

A condemned negro murderer in St. Louis declared that he would surely go to eternal torment if he could not be baptized by immersion. A hogshead half-filled with water was used for the ceremony.

$20,000 of the needed $100,000 has been subscribed for the establishment of a university college for Liverpool.

THE NORTH-WEST.

DIARY OF A PETERBORO' EMIGRANT.

Graphic Description of the Trip.

An Unvarnished Picture of the Journey, and what Lies at the End of it.

LETTER II.

Shell River, May 31st, 1880.

My last letter to you was from Shoal Lake, in which I gave you particulars of our route up to the valley of the Saskatchewan; I now proceed west from Prairie City. The trail winds up the valley for a mile west, and then up the steep hills some 100 feet or more. On reaching the plain above our trouble commenced—swails and muskegs. Camp the 16th, 7 miles from Prairie City. On the 17th, made 22 miles from Shoal Lake, and in front of our tent to the west in one mile of water on the trail to go through in the morning; on our right, some five miles away, is a house and a few poplar trees, and on the left open prairie as far as you can see, and burnt either last fall or this spring, making the country look very desolate at this point. Winged a wild goose, but failed to get it. We doubled camp three times to-day; water up to our hips; heard day for 10 miles. Roasted five ducks to-night, and on the 11th, 10 ducks; 12th, 8 ducks; the 14th took dinner half mile west of the crossing leading to the Scurie River. Stuck one and a half hours—unloaded and dug the waggons out. Whenever you come on the trail covered white as if it had a load of lime on it, look out! Double at once! This is from the saline or salt marshes. Camped to-night on the edge of Salt Lake, 10 miles from Shoal Lake. It is a beautiful lake, say a mile long, and covered with ducks and a few geese. The banks slope on the south and bluff on the west and east; the bottom sandy; water very clear. Marvin and three others went in to bathe. Very warm—any amount of musquitoes, black flies, bull dogs, etc. Met the through mail to-day, which makes the trip every three weeks. It was driven by a half-breed on back-board, two horses, and another half-breed leading two other horses. In their train was 7 dogs following. On they dashed through swails and muskegs—passed us like a shot. No muskegs or swails stop them. We unfortunates stuck 5 times—had to get six oxen to pull us through, and unload besides. The worst muskegs yet, although we are told they are worse three miles west of Shoal Lake. Arrived at Shoal Lake at 6.30 p. m. on the 18th, where we had to cross south and through snow banks and mud for 120 yards, and then through water which came into the waggon box 3 inches; current swift; put on four oxen; the bottom is good—sand and gravel; distance, say 160 yard; water higher this year than it has been for several years—some say 3ft. Then we had to go round south; then north, through swales and muskegs half a mile, to get a dry spot to camp, which we did. The Mounted Police were on hand to search us for contraband goods—whiskey, Godfrey's Cordial, &c. We camped for the night 200 yards from the Police Station, which is on a bluff on the edge of Shoal Lake. No wood to be got. The police had burnt most of their fences last winter. It was a bleak spot we camped in. No better to be got for miles on the west side of the lake, and water, water for miles, although a rolling prairie. No ducks to be seen on the lake—only one loon, and an Indian in an old punt. The lake is anything but beautiful. On the west side going to Bird Tail Creek, the whole length is marsh and muskegs. 17th—Prospecting for land. None to be got with wood. Water sections very plentiful. 18th—Camped 10 miles on trail to Bird Tail. One of the yoke gave out completely. Could not get him to camp for that night—dried out—turned—no grass—no feed to be got. 19th—Raised hard. Plucked 10 ducks and 1 prairie hen; baked bread, and pushed work. 20th—Camped on prairie. Plenty of ducks and muskegs. 21st—Camped 4 miles from Bird Tail, to please Mr. Todd, who met a friend of his from Scotland; a squatter on a beautiful farm, good house, etc. He took up his land last year—I should say dropped on it, as there is no land in the market as yet, so far north, the townships not being laid out in sections, but the squatters do their own surveying, as you can find the posts every 15 miles, so they can find out if they are on a Hudson Bay or odd No., ist, school, &c. Mr. Todd's friend brought to camp one peil of potatoes to eat. He had cut out all the eyes to plant, as he says he had a good crop last season in the same way, and cannot spare any more than one eye to put in. Those he brought to us looked queer—eyes gouged out. 22nd—Rained all day. Remained in camp—others took a walk to Bird Tail to report on the crossing. 23rd—Hard frost last night. Camped at Bird Tail Crossing to be ready in the morning to build raft. The valley is called Chamberline Crossing, and is very pretty—far before the crossing as the Little Saskatchawa, formerly called Tanner's, now called Prairie City. Odanah, Minedosa, or Land Shark Valley. The Bird Tail is not very wide, but deep and rapid. We had to draw timber for 5 miles (there and back), as it took nearly all day to complete it. Swam the oxen over. Marvin, Willis and Leonard went over in a skin boat, about the shape of a washtub. It would make you laugh to see Marvin trying it by himself round and round he went. He was glad to get ashore. The boat belonged to some Indians who came over the night previous. Got over the ground at 4 p.m. and camped two miles on the trail. A storm was about crossing. Walter Stewart came down the slope, and right glad he was to overtake us, saying he had been trying to do so for three days. He was on his way to Shell River—had been gone for three weeks up to Riding Mountains, after a pony and cart, and on foot (trip up and down), nearly 90 miles. He had also in charge a yoke of oxen,—left by Major Boulton at Shoal Lake—oats, etc. We were glad to lift him over. Next morning, 25th, we were surprised by Mr. Ted Brown riding to our camp just as we were about to start. He had passed the night about a quarter of a mile west of us. He was on his way to Shoal Lake for mail matter for Major Boulton, and to hunt up any trace of Walter Stewart, but as W. S. had turned up and I had the last mail bag for the Major, he turned his course back again for Shell River country—so we were fortunate in having two guides to put us through the muskegs. 26th—Camped on wet prairie; could not go any further; the Major's oxen, which we had used to-day, gave out. The others camped under a bluff a quarter of a mile further on, but we could not budge. Got the waggon out next morning with four oxen. 27th—Camped by the side of a beautiful lake, covered with ducks. The spot was so enticing we could not resist the temptation, although the Major's camp was only three miles away. Mr. Brown went on with the mail, and Walter Stewart remained with us. The poor fellow was completely done for, he had no blankets or change of clothes to put him through a three week's trip. Got two ducks' and a three week's trip. Got two ducks' nests at this lake—11 and 7 eggs—Teal and Spoon Bill. The ducks got up within two feet of the waggon wheel. Eggs are good, you bet! Used two in the coffee this morning. Shell River by trail is 35 miles from Bird Tail, although most of it is rolling prairie for 20 miles, with high edges, yet it is mostly swales and lakes—plenty of ducks but no muskrats. Below Bird Tail to Pine Creek you might kill 200 each day easy—Marvin says 1,000. I never saw anything like it. Skin is good fun. Some ice on most of the ponds. We had to give up shooting—too cold, and water deep. If we had a good dog—but, no matter, we could not use them. Arrived at Major Boulton's Camp Friday, at 3 p. m. The Major was very glad to see us. He has squatted on the north side of a small creek—refer to the map in the office—situated 24 miles south of Shell River. You will see this creek shows a bend; he is north of the bend; the land is good. He has 5 acres ploughed, etc., for potatoes, oats, wheat, and is now getting out logs for a stable; next he will build a house, and is to go to Winnipeg in Sept. for Mrs. B. and family. His party consists of W. Stewart, Ted Brown, Mr. Leonard and Mr. Gardiner, making 5. They have taken up about 5 miles of unsurveyed land. The land to Shell River and the Assiniboine, 6 miles, is all marsh and swails; to the east is heavy timber, but the land to the timber belt is swails, lakes, and scrub brush. Marvin and Mr. Todd have gone for miles to hunt up suitable land. This morning, 31st, they started with an ox cart, tent and provisions, to be gone two days. I had their breakfast ready at four a. m. If they got land to suit they will require to run a line to find on what lot they are. There is a township line near here and one 12 miles south-east; the land is splendid rolling prairie, but so wet you can't go fifty yards dry shod; hardly find dry camping ground on the tops of the hills. The poplar trees are small but the view from some hills south of this is beautiful; you can see for 20 miles. You cannot get to the timber belt until fall, or at least until the swails dry up. Mr. Boulton has applied to the Government for timber limits which runs 2½ miles from here to Duck Mountains; then he is to build a grist mill and a town, which is to be called Swan Colony. I understand from him he had written to the Princess Louise for her consent; no doubt she will considerably budge for mail will bring the news. "How we oggles swim." Well, we go no further west, and expect to be obliged to take it south some 10 miles; however, on the return of the party I can continue my letter.

On my way up, some 5 miles from here, I passed a beautiful spot, a small lake with a ridge which slopes to the water, and a good belt of poplar which runs from east to west and the lake on the south. If it is not on a Hudson Bay lot I claim. I will try and John it for squatter's rights, Sunday.—It moved hard all the morning and hail storm in the evening, followed by frost which made ice on the pails; look think. To-day, 31st, it is hail, rain and then sunshine, then a regulation sweep here, with very high winds; the most changeful climate I ever saw. Up here the prairie, where it has been burned, is very good for the cattle, grass splendid, standing 7 ins; raspberries and strawberries in blossom; the frost does not appear to do any damage to trees or fruit. The ottawa he called a "trout lone land," as you can hardly get any thing for the noise from bittern, water rails, bald coots, swin, ducks, frogs etc., and at half past two this morning the birds of all kinds in full song. Notwithstanding I have to put on an overcoat and mitts; it is a queer country! You may ask me how I like it; Ontario yet, for me! In all my travels over plains and prairie I have never seen any place to compare with Idyl Wild or Rice Lake for beauty; Willis has just come in camp with 3 traps, a duck's nest, 10 eggs, and an old muskrat; no is always on the rampage over the prairie. I am very anxious to put in the current slips I brought from Ontario, as they are sprouting. When we take up land Marvin and McDougall have to go to Fort Ellice, 40 miles, for the lumber and provision; one trail, by Bird Tail, makes it 60 miles, but we think the Indian trail, 40 miles, can be found; I will send this letter by him. If you can write to me direct to Fort Ellice, let Jones we came down here. 2nd—6 miles from Major Boulton's and pitched tent; we will take up land here; is rained all day and we are very wet. Marvin, McDougall, and Mr. Leonard are packing up to go to Fort Ellice, so I finish in a hurry.

TOWN COUNCIL.

The Council met on Monday evening, there being present His Worship Mayor Lundy, and Councillors Cahill, Taylor, Smith, McNaughton, Durnford, Douglas, Toole, Messrs Denne and Robertson.

The minutes of the last meeting read and confirmed.

In answer to Mr. Denne the Health Inspector reported the nuisance at the foot of Charlotte street abated.

A communication from Mr. John Laidgate was received asking the Council to pay him one half of the cost of the footbridge over the Dickson dam, built for public convenience.

After some discussion a motion by Mr. Robertson to refer the matter to Committee of the whole Council was withdrawn, and the subject held over till next meeting.

Accounts from the Times printing company for $18.94 for advertising, and $10 for printing were received, and on motion referred to the Finance Committee with power to pay when certified to.

The Mayor drew attention to the fact that the construction of the new hose tower would render the look-up uninhabitable, to the detriment of the Grand Junction employees.

Mr. Smith said that by building the tower on the east side of the lot instead of the west side no interference would be made with the ventilation.

Mr. Denne asked what had been done in the matter of the Toronto & Ottawa R. R., and the $2,000 owing to the town.

The Mayor said a demand had been made on the Town Trust, but no answer had been received.

Mr. Denne asked if the late Treasurer had handed over the books in his possession.

The Mayor said he had.

Mr. Denne asked if Mr. Edwards had returned to the town the $500 shown to be due with interest.

The Mayor said Mr. Edwards had given a check for the sum appearing to be due, but not for any interest.

The Mayor asked instructions regarding two paupers being boarded at the rate of $7.00 per week. The lady who was boarding them refused to keep them at the same rate, as they were helpless, one of them being completely bedridden.

The Council left the matter in the hands of the Mayor.

Mr. Smith gave notice that he would at the next meeting of the Council move, seconded by Mr. Denne, the first reading of a by-law to regulate the running at large of cows in the public streets during certain prohibited hours.

The Clerk required instructions from the Council respecting certain unclosed accounts appearing on the ledger, one against Mr. T. Fitzgerald for purchase of old iron, another being $58 entered against the Police Magistrate for use of the Court Room in county cases.

Mr. McNaughton moved that the street Inspector furnish the Council with a statement of all the moneys expended on streets up to the 1st July, the amount expended in each ward and streets for which the money was spent. He thought the ratepayers entitled to the information.

Mr. Cahill thought it would be impossible to gain the information without great inconvenience and labor, workmen in the same day were employed on different streets.

Mr. Robertson thought the information should be furnished as it was stated that the lowest tenderers did not always receive the contracts.

Mr. Cahill read the resolution adopted by the street and bridge committee to the effect that the contract in all cases should be awarded to the lowest tenderer.

The motion was lost.

Mr. Toole drew attention to an injustice done to Mr. John Delaney who has been made to pay $8.75 to the Public Schools, he being a supporter of the Separate Schools. He moved, seconded by Mr. Menzies, that whereas the assessors for 1879 made an error in the assessment of John Delaney's property by which the Separate School Board was deprived of $8.75, be it therefore resolved that the Treasurer be instructed to issue a cheque in favor of the Separate School board for that amount ($8.75), being the amount Mr. Delaney paid wrongfully.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. McNaughton, seconded by Mr. Robertson,—That the Treasurer be ordered to give the amount of expenditure and the names of the parties that received money for each contract, and the amount of each received from the first of June until the first of August, and report monthly in future.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Robertson, seconded by Mr. Denne,—That Mr. F. Mason be refunded the amount of taxes overpaid according to the audit of Messrs. Macdonald and Macdougall.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Toole, seconded by Mr. Douglas,—That the Street Inspector be directed to expend a sum not exceeding five dollars in opening up the water table on the west side of Park street to carry the water north from John Lynch's store, and it be referred to the Street and Bridge Committee with power to act.—Carried.

In answer to Mr. Denne the Clerk said the amount expended on Streets and Bridges to date was $2,600.

Moved by Mr. Menzies, seconded by Mr. Toole,—That the expenditure for streets and bridges for the town by the Street and Bridge Inspector be limited to four thousand dollars, and when the sum is found by the Clerk to have been expended that the Street Inspector be notified to stop work for the season, and that the corporate seal be attached to this resolution.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Menzies, seconded by M. Toole, that the Clerk be instructed to take action to close all accounts on the old ledger not already settled.—Carried.

The Mayor explained in regard to Mr. Fitzgerald's account that there was an offset for repairs to the engine.

Mr. Smith thought the resolution of last year was never intended to apply to the Police Magistrate. It was not to be expected that the Magistrate who had to hold his court every morning should be made to pay a dollar, if the sitting of the court should be prolonged five or ten minutes in a county case.

Mr. Toole did not see why the town should furnish a room for county cases for nothing.

Mr. Robertson asked who would have to pay the amount demanded.

Mr. Smith said the Magistrate would have to pay it out of his own pocket.

Mr. Cahill thought they ought not in fairness to collect the amount, but would favor a motion that the Magistrate be notified that in future he pay a dollar for use of the room in each county case.

The motion carried.

Moved by Mr. Denne, seconded by Mr. Robertson, that the Clerk be requested to report to the Council how long the amount owing to the town since the first of January as per audit of the late Treasurer's books, and with interest and report at the next meeting.—Lost.

Mr. Robertson gave notice that at the next meeting of the Council

For the EXAMINER.

Rejoice, my dear brethren, with hearts full of love,
Adoring our Maker who reigneth above.
He pardon and cheer be our constant employ,
He heads us with gifts that we hereby enjoy.
We're socially met here, our minds to improve,
What's good to adopt, and what's bad to remove.
In mutual instruction we'll firmly combine,
You'll speak of your knowledge, and I'll tell of mine.
Our text-book's the Bible, to show us the way
The path we should walk in and go not astray.
To gain the great prize is our heartfelt desire
To this high attainment our fond hopes aspire.
We've read the world as of life is a dream,
Our joys have been many and griefs not a few
Through life's many labyrinths our paths daily bend,
Redeeming the time before reaching the end.
Directing our youths what to take for their guide,
"Keep straight on the highway, all by-paths avoid.
Believe in the Scriptures, keep pure their doctrine,
To practice the precepts we learn'd from our sires.
Compar'd of five sects as you plainly do see
In pure Christian doctrine we firmly agree.
Arrived at our goal we will joyfully say
Our hearts glow'd with love as we walked on our way.

CHAPTER IX.

HOME, AND HAPPY.

On the next day the secluded inhabitant of the forester's cottage stood in the doorway of the gamekeeper's lodge at Templetowers. The amazement of Anne Clayton when the visitor raised her veil was indescribable. Her first moment was one of repulsion.

'You here, Lady Evelyn?' she exclaimed. 'What would the Baronet say if he heard that you had set foot within these gates?'

'I tell you, Anne Clayton, as I have told others, was the answer, 'that never since my marriage day have I been beyond my husband's estate. You forget that I am still your mistress. Anne Clayton, the law he not separated Sir Percy Evelyn from his wife.'

'Forgive me, my lady!' said the gatekeeper. 'I hope to Heaven it is true! But why have you come?'

'To claim my child.'

'I dare not betray my trust,' the woman replied.

'This is not betraying your trust,' interposed Beryl, coming forward, taking the lady by the hand, drawing her into the house, and throwing her arms around her neck. 'And I am indeed your daughter?'

'And your father is the proud, unhappy man who has dwelt yonder these eighteen years,' said Lady Evelyn, pointing to the Castle, 'the victim of a miserable error, which destroyed one life, blighted two others; and, but for a merciful discovery, would have condemned you, my darling, to an existence of degradation and penury. But all that is over now. Come, my pet lamb, lost and found, with me to Templetowers.'

'But I was sent away?'

'You are Percy's betrothed.'

'Did he tell you?' Beryl whispered.

'No; but I saw you both in the chapel, and knew what had brought you there.'

'Not Percy, dearest mamma—not Percy. It was to see the tomb of him whom I had so long thought of as my father. The marble slab was a blank, and even now I know nothing.'

Nor was the young girl, there and then, told anything. Through the reddening alleys, rich with the gilding of autumn, they passed, the one calm and stately, the other wondering, to the great entrance of Templetowers, Anne Clayton accompanying them.

'Where is my husband?'

'Sir Percy is in the library, my lady,' answered one of the oldest retainers of the house.

'Then announce Lady Evelyn and Miss Evelyn.'

In another minute the estranged husband and wife again beheld each other. She preserved her composure, though certainly with an effort. He, on the contrary, had to grasp the back of a chair, as he gazed in astonishment at the woman, still noble and lovely, whom he had put away that long time ago. She did not speak.

'Beryl!' he said.

'Sir Percy!' replied the young girl, in a diffident tone, and trembling with agitation.

'No! you,' he went on, turning to the other. 'Yes, Beryl, why have you come? And who is this girl?'

'Your child and mine, Percy,' was the reply. 'Ah! bitterly as you wronged me, you yet more bitterly wronged yourself, my husband. And I have come now, not to vindicate myself, but to prevent wrong being done to her!'

'What wrong?' he asked, still stern, though not indeed implacable.

'In believing the falsehoods of a traitor; in thinking I was false to you, because that towards a man I acted mercifully.'

'Who was he, then? Your brother?'

'Not my brother—yours!'

'Then who was the traitor?'

'Your father! I saw, and watched, and saved your elder brother, who should, by right, have stood in your place. But he had no title of birth; he knew that to declare himself would be to shame your mother. It was her sin and your father's that he expiated in poverty and obscurity all the remaining days of his life. He was his father's natural, though not legal, heir. But he sinned, bitterly sinned, and hid his disgrace in a garret. That child—that Beryl——'

'Do not call her Beryl,' her husband interrupted; 'there can be, for me, no Beryl living except you!'

'That child—that Beryl,' she persisted, he stole away—or, rather, Stephen Quail stole her for him—in a wicked passion of vengeance, until a moment came when, as he lay dying, he repented, and strove to atone to her, through me, for many years of misery and wrong.'

'My wife!'

'My husband!'

Husband and wife, in that instant, were reconciled—after that long, that bitter, inexplicable separation.

Yet the last doubt of a loving jealousy still lingered in his mind.

He said, 'But what was his crime? And why were you so interested in him?'

'Because he bore your name, Percy; because that name was ever dearer to me than my love. Because, sooner than have once that name brought to disgrace, I would have renounced all hope of happiness, and lived out my life alone!'

'For whose sake?'

'For yours, Percy!'

'Once more, what had he done?'

'Once more, I, your Beryl, refuse to answer, except that he had sought, by a foul stratagem, to win me from you, and so disgrace me in your eyes that I could never look in your face again. It was a deep and a life-long agony to him, Percy, let that be a bygone. Better, far better, that we should forget the sins of the dead, and remember the hopes of the living—of our child, and of him who loves her.'

'Beryl!'

'Yes, my Beryl—and yours!'

'And this mystery is never to be explained?'

'It has been explained,' she answered; and just then the proud and beautiful Geraldine Stuart burst in upon them with an impetuous protest.

'Sir Percy!'

'Geraldine!'

'Who is this person?' was the question put by the enraged young lady.

'I have the honor of introducing you to my wife,' replied the Baronet, quelling a little, however, as he, for the first time, understood her meaning. 'The Lady Percy Evelyn.'

The Lady Geraldine Stuart bent low, turned her haughty head, and answered, 'I hope I have not misunderstood you, Sir, Percy. I am engaged to your groom. Eo is a better gentleman than yourself.'

With which last fling, she swept away, and the hope of ever being mistress of Templetowers faded out of her mind like a dream.

There was danger of an outburst now; but, as the sun through clouds, as the star of the morning, so hope after fear, as gladness after grief, came in the young Beryl, bounding with joy, and exclaiming, 'It is all over now, papa, mamma!' and was embraced by both.

'That tombstone!' she cried. 'There was no name, nor any date, outside of it; but the old grave-digger lifted it off, because I bribed him; and, oh, papa, dearest, and, mamma, dearer still, all shadows have passed away, and you are always to be mine, and I am always to be yours.'

'Always, darling,' they together replied.

'Not always,' interrupted a manly voice, as the speaker folded the young girl in his arms. 'I, too, am to have a share in this treasure.'

'But do you know, Percy,' exclaimed the Baronet, 'what this means?'

'It means that I love her,' replied Percy.

'It means also that, under the inexorable conditions of my father's will, she is penniless, and that I cannot even grant her a settlement. She is my child, and yet I am unable to bestow upon her the value of a solitary acre of land.'

'Have I not told you,' answered Percy Evelon, 'that I love Beryl, and love her for herself alone?'

'Yet there is still a mystery,' she urged.

'Not a shadow of it. All is lost in the mystery of perfect love,' he said.

And the violets and primroses of perfect mutual faith sprang upon the spring-time pathway of their future lives.

THE END.

Rulings of the P. O. Department.

An arrangement has been perfected by which letters without postage will be forwarded—to the dead letter office.

A pair of onions will go for two cents.

Parties are compelled to lick their own postage stamps and envelopes; the postmaster cannot be compelled to do this.

Nitro-glycerine and dynamite must be forwarded at risk of sender. If they should blow up in the postmaster's hands he cannot be held responsible.

When letters are received bearing no direction, the parties for whom they are intended will please signify the fact to the postmaster, that he may at once forward.

Ducks cannot be sent through the mails, when alive. Their quacking would disturb the slumbers of the clerks on the postal cars. This rule, however, does not apply to a 'duck' of a bonnet.

When watches are sent through the mails, if the senders will put a notice on the outside the postmasters will wind up and keep in running order.

Poems on Spring and Beautiful Snow are rigidly excluded from the mails. This will be joyful news to the editors of this land.

Old maids, feather beds, and inflated balloons are unmailable.

John Smith gets his mail at 674,279 post offices, hence a letter directed to John Smith, United States, will reach him.

When candy is sent through the mails it is earnestly requested that both ends of the package be left open.

When you enclose a money order in a letter always write full and explicit directions in the same letter, so that any person getting the letter can draw the money.

Alligators over ten feet in length are not allowed to be transmitted by mail.

Young ladies who desire to send their Saratoga trunks by mail to watering places during the coming season should notify the Postmaster-General at once. They must not be over seven feet long by thirteen feet high.

The placing of stamps upside down on letters is prohibited. Several postmasters have recently been seriously injured while trying to stand on their heads to cancel stamps placed in this manner.

Alnwick News.

(From our own Correspondent.)

A grand pic-nic under the auspices of the U. T. Association, of Fenella, was held at Cameron's Point, east of Idyl-Wild, on 1st July, at which handsome prizes were awarded for different games and amusements.

The young Indian, Black, who was tried for perjury at the Fall Assizes, Cobourg, and who has since served a term of five months in gaol, has been employed most of the summer in White's Mill, Alnwick. The whereabouts of his dear is not known to many around home.

A pretty little black dog was found on Friday, 16th inst., about mid-way between Harwood and Idyl-Wild, perched on the end of a log, for safety from the roaring waves. It appeared to the finder, who landed it safely on the south shore, to be an unfortunate victim of shipwreck.

Fishing is better this season in the river than in the lake.

A good deal has been said during the season about the crops, and, now, since we have handled part of them, and can tell pretty nearly what they will be, we find that none of the favorable reports have been any exaggeration. The most of the barley, though of excellent quality, will be a little colored.

R. V. PIERCE, M.D.:

I had a serious disease of the lungs, and was for a time confined to my bed and under the care of a physician. His prescriptions did not help me. I grew worse, coughing very severely. I commenced taking your Medical Discovery, which helped me greatly. I have taken several bottles, and am restored to good health.

Martinico.

The tobacco of Martinico was once the favorite with the smoking world, and when old Father Hennipen descended the Mississippi about 1680 the Indians were much surprised to see a European with such an excellent sample of their native plant. But the smokers of the "Myrtle Navy" would give but a poor account of the once celebrated Martinico. Their favorite brand is as much superior to it as it was to the raw and uncured leaf which the Indians of that day smoked.

The Canada Thistle.

The Colborne Express has the following, which is so pertinent and suggestive that we have no hesitation in adopting it:—"An overseer of highways near St. Mary's was brought before a magistrate a few days ago, charged with neglecting to have the thistles cut that grew in the fields beside the roads in his beat. He pled ignorance of the law, and said that he had received no instructions from the Council on the subject. On this account, and because the man had apparently tried to do his duty to the best of his knowledge, the magistrate let him off with as light a penalty as the law would permit, which was a fine of $10, and $3.60 cost. This case ought to prove a warning to all overseers all over the country. In this village and vicinity the Canada thistle thrives and luxuriates and spreads itself as though it were the most honorable and useful plant in existence, instead of the tabooed outlaw and thief of the soil that it is. The new law makes the pathmaster responsible for this, and places heavy penalties upon him for neglecting to have the pest exterminated. The road overseer in this vicinity cannot, like the St. Mary's man, plead ignorance, for they have been repeatedly informed of their duty through the press, and therefore when their turn comes to answer a similar charge, as it is liable to at any moment, they cannot expect to get off quite as easily as he did."

News of the Week.

There is much fever and ague about Fenelon Falls this summer.

A woollen factory bonus for $65,000 was carried in Exeter on Friday last by 127 majority.

The St. Lawrence ship channel is to be improved so as to admit vessels drawing twenty-five feet.

Mr. Ryan, who has resigned his seat for Marquette, is to receive the post-office inspectorship of Manitoba and the North west.

An old man named Edward Black was fatally burned at his residence in London township on Tuesday evening. He lived but two hours.

The latest on dit in Montreal, is that Sir Hugh Allan is at the head of the company for taking over the Pacific Railway, and that he is about to visit British Columbia for the purpose of inspecting that part of the country.

L'Evenement tells a story of a wedding in St. Roch's having been postponed by the action of the bridegroom, who, not appearing anxious to enter the married state after all the preparations had been made, abstracted and hid away the wedding dress.

The Rev. R. W. Dale preached at Birmingham a very fine sermon on the Bradlaugh question, which has been so long before the House of Commons, maintaining that the oath is valueless as a test either of religion or morality, and that those who prize faith in God most should be most anxious to break down this wholly unreal barrier between speculative and practical atheism. He praised Mr. Bright's "prophetic" denunciation of the higher classes, as not caring for that religion to the dogmas of which the working classes had ceased to attach much value. All that Mr. Dale said of the Pharisaism to which this controversary has given birth in Parliament—the public affectation or self-delusion of horror at Atheism on the part of men who have never shown in any real sense a belief in God at all—was both powerful and timely.

The total number of emigrant settlers entered at Port Huron, for the year ending June 30th, 1880, was 95,375. Of these, 79,000 were from the Canadian provinces, being nearly 40,000 more than the gross total of entries of all nationalities at the same port for the year 1877-8, and about 37,000 more than the gross total for 1878-9—the last year of the Mackenzie Administration.

Not the slightest Affinity

exists between the numberless cough mixtures with which the market is flooded and that successful preparation—Northrop and Lyman's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda. It stands alone, distinct, is like itself and nothing else. It embodies the best results of advanced pharmaceutical science. It accomplishes positive decisive results, effectually relieving coughs (when the lungs are not tubercles or hopelessly affected), colds, laryngitis, and diseases of a scrofulous origin. While it does not cure consumption, it is the most reliable means of defence against the dreaded scourge. The invigorating properties of the hypophosphites reimburse the system debilitated by the constant tear and wear of a cough, while the paroxysms rapidly diminish in violence, in consequence of the soothing, emollient action of the cod liver oil on the inflamed lung membrane. The phosphorus, lime and soda, in combination with it, are all natural components in the construction of the bodily edifice, which, in a state of decay, lacks a sufficiency of the elements. These the hypophosphites supply, increasing the nutritive properties of the blood, and building up and rehabilitating the tottering human structure with a degree of promptitude as astonishing as it is gratifying to the invalid. A perceptible gain in flesh as well as in strength is one of the consequences of using this standard preparation, which both time and experience have demonstrated to be fully worthy of the confidence reposed in it. Prepared by NORTHROP & LYMAN, Toronto, and sold by all druggists.

PETITT'S EYE-SALVE.

An Infallible Remedy for all Diseases of the Eye (acute or chronic), Granulation of the Lids, Ulceration of the Lachrymal Glands, Film, and Weakness of the Vision from any cause.

The American Eye-Salve is presented to the public with the assurance of its efficiency as a curative of most diseases of the eye, acute or chronic inflamation, whether induced by scrofulous origin or otherwise, weakness or defect of vision, diminished tone of the optic nerve, or a diseased state of the tissues constituting that organ. Also, for all persons whose vocation requires an incessant action of the eyes, the salve will act as a charm in restoring a uniform healthy action, where weakness, pain, and misery may have been long threatened with a fatal termination. It is the most simple, safe and effectual remedy ever discovered. The materials of which it is made are pure, perfect, and costly, compounded with elaborate care and exactness, safe in its application, being used externally, and, of course, avoiding the pain and danger which necessarily attends the introduction of caustic minerals and eye-washes. Ringworm and old Chronic Sores, of scrofulous origin, or resulting from whatever cause, yield to the American Eye-Salve. IT IS USED SUCCESSFULLY FOR PILES. Its soothing effect is immediate, and a permanent cure requires but a few applications. The proprietors of "Dr. J. Petitt's American Eye-Salve" while making new and improved machinery for making a more perfect box for the Eye-Salve, have changed the Trade Mark on the cover so as to correspond with the Cut on the Wrapper, Circulars, advertisements, &c. We call attention to this, as it might otherwise be regarded as counterfeiting.

Joy Among the Children.

COPLAND'S SWEET CASTOR OIL, equally suitable for children and adults. Endorsed by over 600 doctors in Canada.

The difficulty of administering nauseous medicines, and the desirability of having the pleasant to the taste, induced T. Copland to undertake researches which resulted in the discovery of a Sweet Castor Oil, perfectly palatable, of the same strength and medical qualities as the ordinary Castor Oil, and while equally safe and harmless, yet acting with more certainty, and producing neither nausea nor griping. Some children say it is honey; others call it syrup—they all say they like it. One parent says—"My children drink it like water," another—"We had to hide the bottle or they would have drained it right off;" another—"My little girl had taken it twice without any trouble, and does not know what it is, though she hates the ordinary Castor Oil, and we could never get her to take it without a fight;" yet another—"I wish you success of your Sweet Castor Oil; it is a splendid thing—sure to take the place of all the common oil."

The extraordinary demand for this improvement on a staple household medicine has brought fraudulent imitations into the market, but the public can guard themselves against substitutes (which unprincipled parties are attempting to sell on the reputation of this article) by seeing that the name, COPLAND'S SWEET CASTOR OIL, is on both the wrapper and direction label.

The undersigned having purchased Messrs. T. Copland & Co's interest in the above preparation, we now manufacturing it from the original recipe. NORTHROP & LYMAN, Toronto.

HOW LOST, HOW RESTORED!

We have recently published a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical and permanent cure (without medicine) of Nervous Debility, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediment to Marriage, etc., resulting from excesses.

Price in a sealed envelope, only 6 cts., or two postage stamps.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicines or the use of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

PETERBOROUGH, AUGUST 5, 1880.

THE TARIFF AND THE REVENUE.

When the framers of the National Policy Tariff brought in that precious scheme of taxation, they were warned by the late Minister of Finance that there was a point to which the tariff might be carried which would insure the maximum of revenue, and that to go beyond that point would impose needless burdens upon the people, and while crippling trade would destroy the sources of income and decrease the revenue. We have now had the experience which enables us to judge fairly between the correctness of Mr. Cartright's financial economy, and that which been put just in force by Mr. Tilley. For the year just ended the revenue estimated by Mr. Tilley from his National Policy Tariff was $24,450,000. From the figures just published of the revenue to June 30th, 1880, we find the actual revenue under the 35 per cent tariff was $22,494,000, or $1,956,000 below the estimate of that heaven-born financier. This is for the first full year of that tariff. By referring to the Public Accounts for 1877-78, the last full year of the 17½ per cent tariff, we find that the revenue for that year was $23,375,011.88. Here we find Mr. Cartwright's predictions fulfilled in the most striking manner, and the correctness of the policy pursued by the late government demonstrated in a manner that does not admit of a doubt. Although the duties, i.e. the burden of taxation imposed on the consumers of the country, have been on the average more than doubled, the only effect upon the public revenue has been a paltry increase of $118,988.12. A more crushing rebuke to those fiscal quacks who were accustomed to sneer at Mr. Cartwright's financial abilities could not be conceived than is furnished in these eloquent and incontrovertible figures, and we commend them to the mental digestion of our friends of the Review. They show that under the late government there was given the greatest freedom of trade and the lightest possible taxation of the people, with the largest return of revenue to meet the requirements of the country. Under the new high-pressure tariff, trade and industry have been shackled and oppressed, an intolerable burden of taxation imposed upon the consumers of the country, with no appreciable increase of the public revenue. Mr. Cartwright need require no more emphatic vindication, nor any greater satisfaction upon his loud-mouthed detractors. The "whirligig of time brings in its revenges," and we hope Sir Samuel and his adjutators may enjoy this proof of his incapacity and the utter failure of the P. P. as a revenue producer.

DEPOPULATION OF THE COUNTRY.

The natural consequence of high rates of living, excessive taxation, and crippled industries, which have been the outcome of the Taxation Tariff, erstwhile known as the "National Policy," is a rapid increase of the emigration of our citizens to the other side of the line. From the time of Mr. Mackenzie's acceptance of office up to 1877-78, there was a steady annual reduction in the number of Canadians who left Canada through the port of Port Huron to settle in the United States, until in that year the emigration was reduced to 18,305. During the reign of Sir John and the N. P. this emigration has again steadily increased in volume, till in the year ending June 30 last, it comprised a population gained from us through this one port alone by the United States, of 75,545. These figures have been officially procured by the Sarnia Observer from the Collector of Customs at Port Huron, and are reliable. A better idea, however, of the extent to which the N. P. is expatriating our people, is given in the figures for the month of June 1880 just issued by the Chief of the Bureau of Statistics at Washington, which applying the total immigration to the United States as follows:

Ireland	14,199
England	12,540
CANADA	10,305
Scotland	7,473
Sweden	7,429
Norway	4,268
Austria	3,455
Scotland	3,138
China	1,788
Denmark	1,624
Italy	982
Russia	911
Germany	845
Switzerland	696
France	499
Poland	373
Holland	310
Wales	102
Belgium	97
Cuba	89
Spain	15

These figures show that Canada now stands third in importance as a recruiting ground for the United States among all other nations, and that at this rate the exodus in the next twelve months will decrease our population by 150,000 souls. Such are among the evidences of the practical working of the N. P., which was, we were promised, to keep "Canada for the Canadians," and to restore prosperity to the country; and in the face of these figures, which represent facts which cannot fail to be known to the Ministry, and especially to the Minister of Agriculture and Immigration, the public funds are being profusely expended to encourage pauper immigration from the mother-land. Would it not be better for the Government to turn their attention to some policy which, by reducing the price of living in Canada, and by removing the tremendous pinch upon our industries by a tariff hostile to the true interests of trade and commerce, and putting free the necessaries of life, would induce the population we have, than to pursue their present policy of endeavouring to replace those who were driven out of the country by an inferior class brought on here at the public expense!

HIS NOBLE EFFORTS.

The Port Perry Observer has the following:—"So far from being blamed Mr. "Gibbs ought to be applauded for his "noble efforts to preserve the purity of "elections. If the element of sympathy "is to enter into the contest, Mr. Gibbs "is the only party deserving sympathy "for his manly and straightforward con"duct throughout and especially for his "bringing to light the corrupt practices "employed by Mr. Wheeler." Mr. Gibb's "manly and straightforward conduct," is something that, probably, no other individual in North Ontario will be able to recognise, except the venerable proprietor of the Observer. The Messrs. Gibbs have long been known and recognised as two of the most unscrupulous corruptionists in the Dominion. Does not the Observer know that Mr. Gibbs' corruption was fairly acknowledged by himself when Mr. Wheeler's seat was attacked? "How?" our contemporary will enquire. By the fact that, although he knew that through the evidence of his tool, Hurd, a man whose character has been sufficiently commented upon by the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, he might be able to unseat Mr. Wheeler, Mr. Gibbs did not dare to claim the seat for himself. So far as Mr. Wheeler is concerned there was not a tittle of evidence in all the enquiries that were made, to throw a shadow upon the perfect honesty and purity of the election as conducted by him, and he was fully exonerated by the highest judicial tribunal in the land. He is, in fact, a victim of his own integrity, for if he had answered to the demand for $1,000 made by Hurd, and become particeps criminis in a corrupt bargain, his seat might never have been questioned. He refused to make a corrupt bargain, and hence Mr. Hurd found a more congenial friend in Mr. Gibbs, whose "noble efforts" in the cause of purity of elections have been of a nature to recommend themselves to such men as Hurd. However, it is not a question of sympathy with which the electors of North Ontario have to deal. It is the question of the merits of the National Policy—whether the merchants in the villages have found that prosperity which Mr. Gibbs had promised to them in 1878; whether property has increased in value; whether farmers have had more for their products as they were guaranteed; and whether there has been an increase or a decrease in the cost of everything the farmers have to consume. These questions they are in a position to decide by the logic of facts in the light of experience, and Mr. Gibbs' organ will not divert their attention from these material considerations, by any pitiful whine for sympathy, on the ground of "his noble efforts."

Wesleyan Female College.

In answer to a letter addressed to the Principal of the Wesleyan Female College, at Hamilton Ont., concerning the facilities afforded for the education of young ladies, the Principal, Rev. A. Burns, D. D., L.L.D., writes as follows. Anyone desiring further information may see a copy of the annual catalogue giving the curriculum, names of graduates, students, etc., by calling at this office:

The College is in splendid working order,—the people here say "better than at any former period of its history." Our building contains about 150 rooms, and such rooms as no other college in the country can duplicate. We have rooms for one, two, or for four pupils; we don't allow more than four in any room however large. One of the teachers from Whitby visited us last week, and told us that if they had such rooms in Whitby they would put six pupils in them. We have perfect arrangements for hot and cold water on each flat, and hot and cold baths are accessible at all hours; better arrangements are not found in first-class hotels. Our parlors are the admiration of all visitors, the first in the city, the best I ever saw in a college. Our dining hall is far in advance of any in the city, far larger and more beautiful than that of the "Royal Hotel." No pupil has to carry as much as a pitcher of water up a stair in the building—water on every flat. The rooms for pupils are such as the finest hotels furnish their guests, only that our ceilings are higher than hotel ceilings, except the very best. The rooms are all furnished throughout so that the pupil has not to bring so much as a towel. No two pupils wash in the same basin. In a word, the pupils find the rooms just as would find a room in a hotel, all ready for use. We have a most complete laundry, and everything about it is in perfect order; clothes taken from the rooms and brought back by the head laundress. Our large halls are kept cosy and comfortable all the year around. No pupil will feel cold in any part of the building in winter as we have most complete arrangements for heating. Our Institution is perfect, everybody says so, and, after living in the building now for two years, I believe it. Our pupils file out for walking every good day, and on wet or unpleasant days we have calisthenics, or they go to our drill shed where a squad might drill very easily; our arrangements in this look striking. As to our work. I lecture three hours daily myself. I take the classes in Logic, Mental and Moral Science, Evidences of Christianity, High English Literature, Political History, &c. Prof. W. P. Wight, M. A., B. D., has charge of the Natural Sciences and Latin. He is a teacher of very extensive experience and thorough scholarship. Prof. Martin has charge of the Art Department; he is an enthusiast in his work, and has rare ability as an artist and a teacher, he is working wonders in that department. Prof. Ambrose has charge of the Music Department. He is well known by his numerous compositions of sweet classic taste; he is a most successful teacher. In addition to the above four we have ladies of experience and scholarship for the other departments. French and German are taught by native teachers; English is not allowed in the advanced classes of either of these languages. All our lady teachers are either graduates or have certificates. We employ no cheap or inferior teachers. You will notice that we don't encourage teachers in other institutions. We have all we need in ourselves, without announcing that some gentleman of other institutions will lecture for us. Our teachers are all here with us. Nearly every Ladies' College in the country has some of our graduates in its faculty. The "Ottawa Ladies College," (Presbyterian) has; so has the "Ontario Ladies' College" at Whitby; so has the "Bloomfield Ladies' College," "Brookhead College," at Cobourg had them until it closed, and they are in the United States in the same way. We are the only College in the Dominion, we think, clear of debt, and we are using our liberty to develop the strength and resources of the institution. The satisfaction of the Ch'ch can only be learned from any members of the Methodist Conference or any prominent reliable gentleman in Hamilton. We would refer to the President or ex-President of the London Conference—to Dr. Nelles of Cobourg, Dr. Dewart, Toronto, the President of the Toronto Conference. For accomodation we would refer to any of the graduates of the last two years, since I took charge of the College. Board is not boarding house fare at all—we furnish excellent board, and never expect to have to apologise for it. $3.50 covers board, light, heating, washing and everything but tuition—see calendar. Although the College has a Methodist name, it is unsectarian, but Christian. The President of our Board is a Presbyterian; the faculty represent several denominations. On Sabbath mornings one division of our pupils goes to the Methodist Church, another goes to the Presbyterian, and another goes to the Church of England—each in charge of a teacher. Better arrangements could not be desired, so that we never have any dissatisfaction on such matters.

Hints to Dairymen.

From the Intelligencer.

As the hot weather is now upon us, and the trying time for cheese making at hand, a few suggestions to the patrons of cheese factories may not be altogether out of place. Although we are aware that most dairymen know how to take care of their milk, yet we have learned in that most thorough of all schools, experience, that they are sometimes thoughtless, and often, we fear, negligent and careless in this regard. The milk is sent to the factory as if it were a foregone conclusion that the manufacturer can make good cheese, no matter what the character of the material furnished may be. There is a growing tendency to force unfit milk upon the factory men, and to subsequently blame him if his cheese does not sell for the highest figures. It is just as difficult for a cheese maker to make prime cheese out of bad milk, as it is for the baker to make good bread out of musty flour.

Of all articles of human food, milk is the most susceptible to obnoxious odors and a diseased atmosphere. One pailful left in a dirty stable while another is being filled, will contaminate an entire canfull: nor will the odor thus acquired cease to expend until it has permeated every portion of milk in the vat in which it is made up.

Stagnant water is another fruitful source of vexation to the factorymen. Cows should never be allowed to drink other than pure water. Farmers may enhance the value of their cheese by being careful in this particular, as it will cause floating curds.

Improper driving of cows before milking is another particular in which patrons are often culpable negligent, and for which they many times pay dearly, as floating curds are often produced in this way. This is a great source of annoyance to the factorymen, as the milk when taken in may appear to be all right and will show no sign of being bad until it has reached a certain remote stage in the process of manufacture.

Floating curds are also produced by allowing cows to feed near those places where the unburied carcasses of animals have been left to decay. They are also produced by milking in old wooden pails, and an improper washing of milk cans; allowing the can to stand part of the day in the hot sun and drying the milk on the can, which cannot be removed either through rubbing, and never properly cleansed.

These causes of BAD MILK CAN and should be avoided. Let the stables be kept as clean as possible if milking is done in them; and if you have no living water for your cows, water them at your wells, and in hot weather on no condition drive them faster than a walk. If there is carrion in your pasture, or in any place where your cow will inhale the obnoxious odor, bury the same, and there will be great rejoicing among the factorymen.

Every dairyman should cool and air his milk before sending it to the factory; the warm morning's milk should never be mixed with the night's until it is partially cooled, as it will sour the whole canfull.

Let each patron form himself into a committee of one and see that he at least sends nothing but good pure milk.

The strict justice of the question would require the manufacturer to refuse absolutely everything but first-class milk. This has been done in many factories and the cheese are all first-class and is half made before the making is begun.

We entreat the patrons of cheese factories to give this subject constant heed. All we ask of them is that they keep pace with us in the struggle for perfection in this very important branch of industry.

The best argument and the one that will catch the heart of every patron of cheese factories in favor of what we urge is that profit keeps pace with care.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

A BAD SELL.—A party from Port Hope who have been up Stony Lake camping out for the past week or two have been the victims of a good, or rather bad, sell at the hands of a friend in Port Hope. It seems that they gave an order to a certain merchant on Walton St. for what groceries, provisions &c. they might require while away. The order was filled and nicely packed in convenient boxes to handle, and as extra sized box was, they were informed filled with refreshments in case of cold, wet, or sickness and was a present from the aforesaid merchant. Many were the thanks and blessings lavished on the kindness and forethought of their friend while on the train and boat. They arrived at their destination in a heavy thunder storm wet through, and concluded it was just the time to test the contents of the box which had been so carefully looked after during the trip. An axe was brought into requisition and the lid pried off revealing a stick of *cord*wood, some onion tops, a pair of old boots and a broken jar, the Dr. looked and, the banker swore, the miller swore louder, and the rest kept them company, Though wet without they never felt dryer inside and the tents were put up, with blessings on their friend of a different nature from those they had been singing on leaving Port Hope.

SEVENTY CENTS ON THE DOLLAR.—The men lately employed in the steam saw mill were somewhat astonished upon going to the office on Monday morning to be paid off, to be told that they were only to receive 70 cents on the dollar and if they did not chose to accept they could look for it. Of course there was a row, some accepted finding they could do nothing, and concluding "a half loaf was better than no bread", others were willing to take the 70 cents on part pay and give a receipt for so much, but could not get it, unless a receipt in full was given. The men feel pretty sore over it, and no wonder, but it is only on a par with the way things have been managed from beginning to end.

THE aroma of the tobacco leaf is so completely conserved in the manufacture of "Myrtle Navy," that age has no effect in diminishing it; even after the plug has been kept for years it gives out its full flavor under the combustion in the pipe, as blessed in none by its age and affording the most exquisite smoke which tobacco can be made to give. Age too improves the flavor of the plug and gives to the tobacco when cut, that almost grassy appearance in which all connoisseurs delight.

TERRIBLE DISASTER AT CANDAHAR.

A British Force Annihilated.

Success by the Afghans under Ayoob Khan.

LONDON, July 23.—In the House of Common to-day the Marquis of Hartington, Secretary of India, announced the receipt of a telegram from Bombay, which reports a terrible disaster in the annihilation of General Burrows' brigade at Candahar. The telegram, which is from the Governor of Bombay, says Major-General Primrose telegraphs to day from Candahar as follows: "Gen. Burrows forces are annihilated; we are going into the citadel." The Marquis of Hartington added: "General Phayre has been instructed to collect what forces he can and march to Candahar. I have telegraphed to Simla to send another brigade if necessary."

LONDON, July 29.—An official despatch states that General Burrows, several officers and men, and four guns were saved. Reinforcements have been ordered out. The losses are unknown.

It is reported the Government have definitely decided to send out reinforcements to India. The Viceroy has been advised by telegraph to that effect. The authorities at the Horse Guards, the Admiralty, Treasury and India Office, were in constant consultation late last night, arranging details in

PETERBOROUGH, AUGUST 5, 1880.

THE JUNKETING MINISTERS.

Hon. Hector Louis Langevin, l'honnete & Rt2,080, has been taking a junketing trip round the country, visiting Penetanguishene, Chatham, Toronto, and other places. At each of these places so visited Hon. Hector Louis was wined and dined and duly "received" by a shoal of hungry office seekers and party hangers-on, and at each he expressed his approval of the good things set before him, and his gratification at the "marks of progress and prosperity he had everywhere met with," as exemplified in the aforesaid solid and liquid hospitality. Poor Mr. Langevin appears to be in a sad plight. He is undoubtedly the ablest, as he is the most unscrupulous, of the French-Canadian Conservatives, yet he has to be set aside to play the second fiddle, as Grip happily cartoons the situation, to the Duve of St. Lin, he of the umbrosal curls, Hon Mr. Chapleau. Although he has assumed to divide the honors and responsibilities of leadership with Sir John, the latter waives him a back seat and places in his stead a comparatively unfledged youth. Sir John, Sir Samuel, and Sir Charles decide to take a holiday visit to London, to help Sir Alexander have a good time at the public expense, and he, the leader of the French-Canadian Conservatives, at least until he is formally deposed, is not even invited to be one of the party. Although the bait [illegible] to be a [illegible] he is not even to be allowed the honor of kissing the Queen's hand, but must fain be content with the empty "C. B.," like Wm. Macdougall, or any other common member of the party. But Mr. Langevin will not be entirely bereft of honor and renown. While the Cabinet oats are away the rats have a chance to play, and so we see our Minister of Public Works "inspecting the public works of Ontario," through the cheerful medium of the ruby winecup and under the stimulating influence of the ever reserrying banquet. He is evidently bound to have satisfaction for the slights put upon him, and after all it does not matter much to the taxpayers of the country, for they have to pay for all this eating, drinking, and making merry, whether it be done in London, Liverpool or Penetanguishene.

NORTH SIMCOE.

There seems to be little doubt that the government are taking careful means to prepare the way for Mr. Dalton McCarthy's re-election in North Simcoe. That that gentleman is designed for the portfolio of Justice is a reasonable certainty, and from the extraordinary means taken during the past year to secure a favorable footing for him in the county he represents, it is clear that the delay in bringing him forward is almost solely, if not wholly, due to the fact that Mr. McCarthy has strong doubts of his own ability to carry the riding in which in 1878, with the N. P. cross to aid him, he barely succeeded in getting a majority. Indeed it was at one time decided to open East Toronto for Mr. McCarthy, but the capriciousness of temper exhibited by that constituency, and a certain restiveness displayed by the Conservative element, made the would-be minister beat a prudent and hasty retreat, and as a consequence, though the constituency has been of necessity laid open, people who are clamoring for a fight are crying for the wrtit in vain. North Simcoe being decided on as the battle-ground of Mr. McCarthy's ambition, careful measures have been taken to strengthen the party in the riding. The state of Sir John's health during the past year has called him frequently to Barrie, the Tory stronghold, and the residence of Mr. McCarthy, where, no doubt, those "magnetic qualities" have been brought to bear with full force. Then it was found necessary that Barrie should be established as post office headquarters for the Northern District, and the officials were accordingly removed thither from the city of Toronto, and the hair of "new and commodious" buildings for Government purposes held out. The harbors of Collingwood and Penetanguishene also received assiduous attention at the hands of the Ministry, and only the other day the steak Manitoba Langevin was at the ancient French settlement, coddling his "fellow-countrymen," and struck with admiration of their splendid harbour and the future that lies before them. Mr. Langevin had no time to devote to the vastly superior harbour of Midland City, probably because it offers unequalled facilities for trade and commerce without the necessity for any expenditure of public money. Or was it because, in the last election, in that place Mr. McCarthy polled a minority of over a hundred votes? Clearly it is the intention of the Ministers to place their attentions "where they will do the most good;" and we can only hope they will not delay giving the farmers of North Simcoe the opportunity of expressing at the polls their opinion and experience of the grand N. P., when, we venture to say, all the extra votes Mr. McCarthy can wheedle out of the towns and villages, will be made short work of by a good wholesome agricultural vote in favor of the true principles of political economy abandoned in 1878.

THE ENTHUSIASM IN ENGLAND.

According to the Mail's cable report, much has been the enthusiasm elicited by Sir John Macdonald's appearance in England, that he has "decided to remain two or three weeks longer." Sir John has a powerful weakness for good cheer, and chimes to greatest advantage "'mong the walnuts and the wine," and it is little wonder that his convivial spirits rose with the hospitable provocation afforded by his British friends, and that his gorge rises at the thought of a return to the dull drudgery of official duty and dry routine. "Two or three weeks" is but a short time to add to a pleasant holiday, and he can afford to keep his friends in Canada waiting for an additional month, for the good news which he is to bring them concerning the Pacific Railway and other equally trifling matters. Or is it that there is some weightier reason for his delay than the "enthusiasm" which he finds it so hard to tear himself away from? Has he found the British capitalist of a harder substance than that from which he toiled forth merrily to mould to his will? Has his heart misgiven him, that the Canadian people will not submit to a bargain which will turn over the fertile lands of the North-West to a gigantic monopoly, leaving them to struggle under the obligation of building for the convenience of these monopolists, the most difficult, most expensive, and least remunerative portions of the railway? It may be so, or it may be that his mission has utterly failed, and that he has not been able at all to rid himself of the burden of the Pacific Railway which he so recklessly assumed, on any terms which he dare to propound to a Canadian Parliament. Had there been good news to develop the three knights-errant would, most likely, have hastened to promulgate it; and if it is not favorable to them politically, we can easily understand that they are in no hurry to return disappointed.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

"Canada for the Canadians" was the Tory cry in 1878, yet Sir John Macdonald and Mr. Langevin fill vacancies by importing strangers, while Sir Charles Tupper goes to the States for his draughtsmen. Taken altogether, the Canadian article has a poor time of it.

Those who know Mr. Pope, Minister of Agriculture, will smile as they read Mr. Holyoake's description of an interview with him

> Afterwards I had the pleasure of dining with the Minister of Agriculture, the Hon. John Henry Pope. Both himself and my friend, Mr. Charlton, who was also present, were charmed with the Cobden-like vigor of the statements which characterized Mr. Pope. He explained the Canadian theory of prevention as dispensation-ally as Cobden would that of free trade.

The State of the Crops.

MONTREAL, July 31.—The Grand Trunk crop reports from one hundred and forty-nine places along the line show fall wheat to have been partly winter-killed in sections between here and Port Hope; from Toronto toSarnia it promises to yield from 25 to 40 bushels per acre. Spring wheat in places is badly rusted, and like[illegible] to be a [illegible] Oats are generally look well and give promise of a large yield. Barley and oats are progressing very satisfactorily and full average crops are expected. Hay in a few places is light, but as a rule will be considerably above an average. Clover seed is partly winter-killed. The flax crop is excellent. Fruit promises a fair crop, especially apples. Hops are also looking well both in the Townships and Ontario.

Imported Civil Service Clerks.

Ottawa Free Press.

The other day it was an Englishman who was appointed by our "Canada for the Canadians" Government to a permanent situation in the Department of the Interior; now it is a Yankee from the State of Maine who has been imported to perform the work of mechanical draughtsman in the Department of Railways. Canadian draughtsmen are plentiful, but no Canadian need apply for work at Ottawa these times. Mr Langevin has also shown his love for his fellow countrymen by importing a gentleman from Cookayne to fill the position of Private Secretary. But these are only so many additional evidences of the fact that Canada is ruled by a Government of false pretences. Of late the Mail has taken strong grounds against Mr. Crooks for bringing out an Englishman to fill the classical chair at Toronto University; we would like to hear what it has to say concerning these appointments.

Premier Gladstone Ill.

LONDON, Aug. 3.—Gladstone passed a fair night. There is no increase in the local malady with which he is afflicted, nor in the fever. LATER.—At noon today the condition of Gladstone was unchanged. In consequence of the premie's illness, the Lord Mayor's dinner to the Ministers on Saturday, will be abandoned The Pall Mall Gazette says it is understood that Gladstone's doctors this morning were somewhat disappointed at the condition of their patient. They had hoped for a marked diminution of the temperature of his body, but they have become content that it is no higher than on Monday. This morning Gladstone was able to dictate a letter to the Foreign Secretary. Doubtless the Cabinet will shortly meet to decide upon the arrangement for the prosecution of the public business during the absence of the Premier.

The Standard says the apprehension that Mr. Gladstone is in a precarious state, does not correctly give his situation. He is in a serious condition, and his case is of such an irregular kind that it necessitates the greatest caution.

This morning's bulletin of Mr. Gladstone's condition states that his symptoms are rather more favourable. The slight fever reported last night continues, but no immediate danger is apprehended from it. The Premier was in a physical condition that rendered him peculiarly liable to disease. His recent overwork and care concerning public affairs, and anxiety regarding Afghanistan have told severely. Sir Wm. Jenner, Dr. Andrew Clark and other eminent physicians held a consultation over Mr. Gladstone's case this afternoon and a bulletin stating that they agreed in considering his symptoms favourable. Yet it is not regarded as probable that he will be able to attend to State affairs for some days, if not weeks, to come.

Reports seem to Halifax of a very serious case at Arisaville, a few miles out of town. A white green widow with a two-year-old child has been living there for some time as mistress of a colored shoemaker, by whom she has had a child. After the birth of the latter, her paramour married a white woman, and taking unlawfully to her white half-sister and threatening to murder her if the mother did not get her out of the way. A day or two ago he attempted to put his threats into execution and stabbed the little girl three times in the head with a shoemaker's awl, but did not succeed in killing her, and the case aged to escape.

THE AFGHAN DISASTER.

Latest Particulars of the Rout.

Relief for the Beleaguered Garrison.

LONDON, July 31.—The latest news from Afghanistan is that General Phayre is advancing towards Chaman. He fears he may have to fight for the possession of the Khojak Pass. Two-thirds of Peiwar's force were destroyed. According to some accounts the slaughter was even greater.

Ayoob Khan is said to have Russian military advisers. Reinforcements leave England next week, and meanwhile all the available forces in India are being pushed rapidly towards Candahar.

LONDON, Aug. 1.—The Viceroy of India telegraphs that Ayoob Khan did not follow up the British retreat. General Burrows' force arrived at Candahar. When the messenger left Ayoob Khan was encamped where the action was fought. This seems to confirm the news that Ayoob Khan had suffered heavily.

QUETTAH, July 31.—Native servants do not describe General Burrows' defeat as crushing. They state that the British cavalry and artillery were lured by the enemy's cavalry feigning retreat into an ambuscade, where Ayoob Khan's army attacked them, inflicting severe loss. Burrow's whole force then retreated. These particulars require confirmation.

BOMBAY, July 31.—Now that the first shock of the Candahar disaster is over the situation looks much more favorable. It is now admitted that the garrison at Candahar ought to be able to hold its own with ease. A private letter from Candahar, dated 18th July, describes the effect of the news of Ayoob Khan's advanced across Helmund as already very considerable. Merchants and well-to-do people were burying their property and preparing to leave the city. The battle between Gen. Burrows' force and the Afghans is said to have been well contested. The British cavalry and artillery were badly cut up at the commencement of the fight but the infantry inflicted such heavy loss on Ayoob Khan that he has not ventured to advance upon Candahar.

LONDON, Aug. 2.—A Calcutta correspondent says:—Everything seems to point to General Burrows having been out-generalled, and the battle of Pushkin Nakhud will probably be hereafter cited as one more instance of a story as old as British history itself, of a gallant army being ruined by the infatuation and incompetence of its leader, and the treachery of its allies, as there can be little doubt that Wali's cavalry went over to the enemy.

It is believed that Sir Garnet Wolseley will sail for England on Friday with a special commission for settling the affairs of the Afghan war. His appointment is now looked upon as evidence of that intention of the Government to abandon the country, as it is known that he combines to a singular degree the faculties of aggression and retention. It is rumoured he will succeed Sir Fred'k Haines as commander-in-chief in India.

The Times Calcutta correspondent telegraphs as follows:—"It was well known that by the time General Burrows' force reached Gerishk, on the Helmund river, he would be joined before it left Candahar, by the whole of the contingent under the Wali, Shere Ali, were thoroughly untrustworthy, having been corrupted by regiments which had been stationed for ten years at Cabul, and it is strange that, this fact being known, so weak a brigade was allowed to proceed seventy miles from its support against 8,000 men with thirty-six guns. The general impression here is that General Sir Frederick Haines, commander-in-chief of the military forces in India, is greatly to blame for the imprudence. The mutineers were supposed to have dispersed, but it is much more probable they joined Ayoob Khan. The only things that seem to be wanted are a head to direct at Simla, and leaders to execute in Southern Afghanistan. I believe I am not overstating the case in saying that General Haines long ago forfeited the confidence of the army. Generals Primrose and Phayre are comparatively untried men, and Generals Stewart and Roberts could hardly be spared from the north. All men's eyes in India are turned to General Sir Garnet Wolesly, and were the Government to announce its intention of sending him out immediately the news would be hailed with delight by [illegible] country to the other."

LONDON, Aug. 2.

In the House of lords to-day Earl Kimberly announced that Sir Bartley Frere had been recalled from the governorship of the Cape of Good Hope. He said there had never existed between the Government and Sir Bartle the harmony which was essential for public interests.

The London correspondent of the Edinburgh Scotsman has been informed that an Irish member intends to move a resolution in the House of Commons at the earliest opportunity declaring that the direct and indirect share of the peerage in legislation is far in excess of its legitimate interest in the government of the Empire, and that the time will come when to redress this preponderance the sons, brothers and heirs presumptive of members of the House of Lords will be declared incapable of sitting in the House of Commons.

A berlin despatch says the failure of the Coburg Conference has produced serious dissppointment in Berlin. One main object of the conference was to devise means for relieving the central Government of the necessity of soliciting funds yearly in the shape of parliamentary contributions from State Legislatures, by substituting an Imperial tax, leviable with the consent of the Imperial Parliament only.

A committee, including some of the leading members of the Roman aristocracy, has been formed to promote the holding of an international exhibition at Rome in 1885. The advocates of the scheme have received encouraging letters from the Duke d'Aosta, ex-King of Spain. Mr. Gladstone and M. Gambetta.

LONDON, Aug. 3.—The Times has the following from Candahar

> "On the morning of July 27, General Burrows engaged Ayoob Khan's force of 12,000 men and twenty guns, fifty miles beyond Candahar. After four hours' severe fighting General Burrows was repulsed and forced to retreat to Candahar. The British loss was 30 officers, 400 Europeans, and 900 natives killed and missing, most of the losses occurring in the retreat. Three horse artillery guns were abandoned. Preparations are being made for a siege in Candahar."

The Times says the foregoing news was brought in by native messengers from Candahar to, and telegraphed from Killa-Abdulla, a post forty-four miles on the Candahar side of Quetah. The Times adds "We may assume that the messengers left Candahar on Saturday. We now learn for the first time that General Burrows was the assailant. As the Afghans do not take prisoners we fear all the massier may be reckoned as killed. The upshot of the story is that of 2,400 men not more than half—some of whom are wounded—followed General Burrows into Candahar."

Baroness Burdett Coutts' Marriage.

The World this evening says:—A marriage has been arranged between the Baroness Coutts and Mr. Ashmead Bartlett, who was noted as her secretary and almoner for some time past. The formal statement to the same effect which was contradicted, was made by the interested bridegroom. The private secretary, a member of Mr. Ellis Ashmead-Bartlett, member of Parliament. By becoming Mr. Burdett Coutts' wife the Baroness will lose a very large portion of her income, to the extent, it is said, of over £100,000 yearly. This is in accordance with the will of Harriet Mellon, Duchess of St. Albans, who bequeathed her vast property to Miss Angela, now Baroness Burdett Coutts, providing that if she married an alien or unrecognized subject her income from the bank and other properties shall cease. Mr. Bartlett is an American who was naturalized a short time ago in order that he might contest elections against the Conservative candidates from the best districts of the Dominion and from the highest quarters failed to have any effect, and that the marriage will shortly take place. Mr. Bartlett is aged sixty-six while Mr. Bartlett has not yet completed his twenty-ninth year.

The Compensation Bill.

Reckoned Practically Defeated in the House of Lords.

LONDON, Aug. 5.—In the debate in the House of Lords last night on the Compensation for Disturbance in Ireland Bill Earl Derby, who acts with the Liberals in Parliament, said if the only alternative was to pass the Bill in its present shape or reject it, he would vote for its rejection but as it might be amended in Committee he would vote for its second reading.

Lord Cairns, in a studiously calm speech this evening, picked the principle of the Compensation Bill to pieces, saying that while it was intended to benefit the tenant it would leave him in a worse position than before.

Lord Selborne, Lord High Chancellor, in a long speech vigorously supported the Bill.

The Duke of Somerset and the Earl of Zetland opposed it.

Viscount Monck supported it.

Viscount Cranbrook opposed it.

The Duke of Argyle also supported the Bill.

Earl Granville said he did not deny that if the Bill was rejected the Government would be confronted with great responsibility as to what course to adopt, but that fact cannot relieve the House of very grave responsibility.

When the vote was reached the Bill was rejected by 282 to 51.

Lord Beaconsfield, in opposing the Bill, made a violent attack on the Radicals. Among the Liberals who voted against the Government were Viscount Sherbrooke, (Mr. Robert Lowe), Lord Strathedan, the Earl of Camperdown and 60 or 70 others. The minority were exclusively Liberals.

In the House of Lords yesterday, Earl Granville, Foreign Secretary, in moving the second reading of the Compensation bill, said the bill had arisen from the exceptional circumstances existing in Ireland during the last few years.

The Excursion Season.

Instructions by Which we may Keep from Drowning.

The human body weighs a pound in the water, and a single chair will carry two grown persons. That is, it would keep the head above water, which is all that is necessary when it is a question of life and death. One finger placed upon a stool or chair, or a small box, or a piece of board, will easily keep the head above water, while the two feet and the other hand may be used as paddles to propel towards the shore. It is not at all necessary to know how to swim to be able to keep from drowning in this way. We have seen a small boy, who could not swim a stroke, propel himself back and forth across a deep, wide pond by means of a board that would not sustain five pounds weight. Children and all others should have practice in the sustaining power of water. In nine cases out of ten the knowledge that what will sustain a pound weight is all that is necessary to keep one's head above water will serve better in emergencies than the greatest expertness as a swimmer. A person unfamiliar with the buoyant power of water will naturally try to climb on top of the floating object on which he tries to save himself. If it is large enough that is all right. But it is generally not large enough, and half of the struggling group is often drowned in the desperate scramble of a life-and-death struggle to climb on top of a piece of wreck or other floating object not large enough to keep them all entirely above water. This often happens when pleasure boats capsize. All immediately want to get out of the water on top of the overturned or half-filled boat, and all are drowned except those whom the wrecked craft will wholly bear up. If they would simply trust the water to sustain ninety-nine hundredths of the weight of their bodies, and the disabled boat the other hundredth, they might all be saved under most circumstances. An overturned or water-filled wooden boat will sustain more people in this way than it will carry. It would keep the heads above water of as many people as could get their hands on the gunwale. These are simple facts, easily learned, and may some day save your life.

Irish Famines.

"As there were horses before Agamemnon, so," says the London Examiner, "there were Irish famines before 1846-47. There was a serious failure of the potato crop, beginning in 1741, the Middlesex Mercury of Friday evening, August 6th, 1742, says:—'For the more effectual securing the payment of rents and preventing frauds by tenants.' In 1822 the provinces of Munster and Connaught were subjected to very severe scarcity. The potatoes rotted in a sudden and unaccountable manner in the pits, and widespread suffering followed. A single committee, with the Archbishop of Canterbury at its head, raised over £20,000, and while Parliament voted large sums for public works of various kinds. Again in 1831 the potato crop failed in Galway, and again the English people and Parliament came to the relief of the distressed population with alacrity. In 1839 and 1843 similar failures were met by similar remedies, and then came the real crisis of 1846-47. The blight which had appeared for the first time in America in 1844 reached Ireland in the autumn of 1845. Writing in August, 1845, Father Mathew says:—'I passed from Cork to Dublin, and saw a second plant bloomed in all the luxuriance of an abundant harvest. Returning on the 3rd instant, I beheld with sorrow one wide waste of putrifying vegetation.' The Government met at once took energetic action. The Corn and Navigation laws were suspended, and £100,000 worth of Indian corn brought from the United States. By the middle of August, 1846, £738,372 had been expended in relieving the famine, one half in loans, the other as grants, while the Volunteer Relief Committee raised £86,006. Breadwinners representing a population of 3,000,000 were daily employed on public work. Organized armies, amounting altogether to some hundreds of thousands, says Sir Charles, at the close of this famine had been rationed before, but neither ancient nor modern history can furnish a parallel to the fact that upward of three millions of persons were fed every day in the neighbourhood of their own homes by administrative arrangements emanating from and controlled by one central office. And the expense was moderate compared with the magnitude of the object. The amount at which it was originally estimated by the Commissioners was £3,000,000; the sum for which Parliament was asked to provide was £2,200,000, and the sum actually expended was £1,567,315, of which £149,631 was paid to the commissariat for meal supplied to the relief committees for the Government stores." The calamity of 1846-47 was thus organized as national, and it was met by a great national effort, by which the landlords were perhaps the greatest beneficiaries. The calamity of 1880 is local and partial, and the Government proposed to tide it over by a local and partial suspension of rent."

PETERBOROUGH, AUGUST 5, 1880.

Removed.—The Dickson mill has resumed cutting, with an increased capacity and a superior stock of logs.

Shingle houses.—Ontarios, Union and Fairdale Factories have sold their make of shingles from June 15 to July 15, to McMillan Bros. for 9 cents per lb. for all shingles guaranteed of No. 1 quality.

Annual Drill.—The 57th Batt. (Peterborough Rangers) are to be called out this year for annual drill on the 7th September, under command of Lt.-Col. J. E. Rogers. The camp will be in the old spot, a few miles down the river.

Canada Thistles.—If persons who complain of the neighbors allowing their ground to be overrun with Canada thistles will lodge their complaints with the Police they will see that the obnoxious weeds are cut down.

Gun Stock.—Those who desire to secure stylish, durable and substantial foot-wear can get the best and most fashionable goods at S. White's, George street, near Simcoe. Mr. is selling out a handsome stock for what it will bring. 32-tf

A Golden Opportunity should never be neglected—therefore those requiring cheap, comfortable and durable wear for their feet should not fail to examine Mr. W. J. Lermont's stock, previous to the closing of his great clearing sale of imported and ready-made work. Remember the stock is all new and this season's goods, and is being offered at prices much below the present ruling wholesale figures. 32-tf

Hurry.—Mr. John B. Fowler, of the township of Smith, on Saturday cut thirty-five acres of spring wheat. He informs us that it is a splendid crop, and that it will take an excellent judge to distinguish the grain from fall wheat He sowed nearly all the land with salt early in the spring and thus accounts for the fine samples. In some portions where the salt was not sown there is a great difference, particularly in the straw. He says his root crops are all something extra, and give promise of an extraordinary yield.—Review.

Rough on a "Cotem."—Mr. F. T. Grafis, once of the Lakefield News, has commenced the publication of a Conservative paper at Fort William, and all the publishers to whom he has sent a copy give him the usual friendly notice, except one, the Lindsay Warder, which says: "If this man Grafis's subscribers turn out to be as unwilling to pay for the Herald as he (Grafis) was to hand over the $12.25 he received, and which belonged to the editor of the Warder, we fear he has a hard row to hoe. We wish him no—, well, what he deserves, a good beating."

Good News.—No more Chills and Ague in this section. Our Druggists are selling an article called "AGUE CONQUEROR." It is about the only satisfactory preparation sold for the cure of Fever and Ague, Dumb Chills, Intermittent or Bilious Fevers. The Proprietor of the AGUE CONQUEROR has used but little money to make the medicine known, and yet its sale is immense in Ague Districts. It purifies the blood, Liver, and other Secretory Organs so effectually that the Chills do not return even where persons have had them for years. Entirely vegetable preparation. Price, 50 cents and $1.00 per Bottle. Two doses will stop the chill. 32-18ins

Literary Curiosity.—We have been requested to bring the following paragraph under the attention of Prof. Marting, with the hope that it will be found worthy of a place among those grammatical conundrums by which the minds of the students at Intermediate Examination's are wont to be distracted

"Workmen are to-day engaged in letting down into the hollow below, the old Bible Christian Church, just in the rear of the present edifice. The ground on which it stands is being removed, and the church being about half undermined, it was thought better to let it down than to let it fall of its own accord."

The Foresters' Pic-Nic.—One of the most enjoyable summer holidays of the season was furnished last Thursday by the Stoney Lake pic-nic of the Peterborough and Lakefield lodges of Foresters, and their friends. The Peterborough detachment left town, numbering between one and two hundred, by special train, arriving at Lakefield before nine o'clock. A large addition to the ranks was made at Lakefield and all embarked on board the steamer Oneida, by which they were conveyed to Burleigh Falls. A pleasant pic-nic time was spent at the Falls. On board the boat, both up to Burleigh and on the return, the dancing capers was well patronized, and the "light fantastic" was duly indulged to the excellent music of Prof. Martin's Quadrille Band. A special train on the Midland conveyed the Peterborough Foresters home, by 11 o'clock, from a most pleasant reunion.

Improving on the Dictionary.—With the assistance of "the best scholars in town," he of the local columns of the Review is making and havoc with the English language. Having established himself that all the lexicographers are wrong in assuming that a compound word is being with anthropomorphic propensities he gravely assures a confiding "readers" that, "The word Hippopotapi occurs in every good dictionary, and we took the liberty of making "an adjective of it, in which we are borne out by the best scholars in town, some of whom know at least half as much as the "editor emeritus." We would like to know who the scholars are who endorse the use of such an adjective as Hippopotapic. "Every good dictionary," will furnish the proper adjective Hippopotapean, without the necessity of adding such an extraordinary terminal as the Review sage resorts to.

"A little learning is a dangerous thing;
Drink deep, or taste not the Pierian spring."

Cricket Match.—The Cobourg Juniors played a cricket match on Thursday evening at the Cricket Ground, Ashburnham, with an eleven of the Peterborough Boys, the latter scoring victory in the first innings by 70 to 33. The following was the score, the game being decided to one innings:

SERIOUS ACCIDENTS.

It is an old saying that "it never rains but it pours," and that would seem to be the case with mill accidents in the past week. Last Wednesday afternoon an employee at Irwin & Boyd's Nassau Mill, while engaged at a lath saw, had the misfortune to put his hand down on the saw. The result was that Dr. Kincaid had to amputate three fingers, while the wrist was so lacerated below the thumb that it will be a triumph of skill if that member be ever again replaced in the sphere of usefulness. The employees of the mill deserve the greatest credit for the generous spirit which found practical expression in a subscription of upwards of $30 to defray the expenses of the injured youth, during the period of his incapacity.

On Friday a serious and serious accident occurred in the Dickson mill. John Cahran, a young man working in the shingle mill on the Dickson estate, was caught by the pants on a horizontal saw, the cleaning of which would have been followed by death in two or three minutes. Dr. Kincaid and Dr. Burritt, jr., dressed the wound and are endeavoring to save the limb, as amputation, if resorted to, could only be performed on the hip joint, and would most probably prove fatal.

Mr. McKee, of the firm of Gemmell & McKee, met with a somewhat serious accident last week by getting his hand caught in the carder. The flesh was torn off one side of his hand and wrist in a frightful manner, and the injuries inflicted were not only serious but severely painful.

T. Beatty, the veteran Veterinary Surgeon, while treating a vicious horse in his yard on Aylmer street on Saturday evening, met with a very serious accident. The horse, backing up jammed the calf of his leg in such a way that Dr. King had to put in over thirty stitches to repair the injury. For a man of Mr. Beatty's age such an injury is serious indeed.

In and Out of the Police Court.

On Saturday John McNally, one of the Grand Junction Brigade, got comfortably drunk in some of the licensed houses and took possession of Mr. Geo. Allan's Temperance Hotel, on Hunter street, where he settled down for a good square encore. On being requested to move on he became abusive, and was only removed with the assistance of P. C. McGhee. He was subsequently arrested on Murray street, where he had gone to bed on the sidewalk. On Monday he was fined $8.00 or 21 days in gaol.

On Monday James Farley appeared to answer the charge of assaulting Ellen Higgins, but the complainant not appearing the case was dismissed.

The case against William and John Dawson, for selling liquor on the circus grounds, was again enlarged, none of the parties appearing.

On Sunday morning at an early hour gangs of rowdies on Simcoe and Charlotte streets made night hideous with a most disgraceful uproar. Will the Council see to it that the division of Police duty is made so that peaceable townspeople may not be disturbed in their slumbers by this midnight revelry? It is always at night that these disturbances take place, and just at the time police protection is needed, it is never forthcoming.

A row took place on Sunday night in the West at is of the town—no police.

Two men named Meharry and Cushing got into "a bit av a discushin" on Water street, at an early hour on Saturday evening.—

They fit and fit and scorged and bit
And wallered in the mud.
Until the ground for miles around
Was covered with their blood.

so to speak. A mob of admiring spectators appeared to enjoy the brutal sport, and the combatants were only separated by the active interference of Mr. D. Hopkins, Sr. As usual, the police authorities were enjoying their dolce far niente.

Joseph Barry, a Grand Junction immigrant, received a bad injury a few days ago from the kick of a horse which he was attending in Heffernan's blacksmith shop. Failing into the hands of the Police, he was sent to Castle McWilliams to allow his wounds to heal.

Yesterday morning W. H. Mabary, concerned in the Water street row above mentioned, was fined $8 and $2.10 costs.

D. Cushing, the party of the second part on the occasion, was fined $5 and $2.10 costs.

John Woods, keeper of a house of ill-repute Englishtown, was fined $5 and $4.10 costs for assaulting his wife, and in default was sent up for thirty days.

We are glad to see that the Police Magistrate has given warning to the Grand Junction Brigade that in future he will deal with every case of drunkenness or vagrancy brought before him with a view of striking terror to the evil doer. Prompt and severe punishment is the only means of bringing the Tramp to a sense of the situation, and affording peace and security to the community.

REV. MR. STOBO.

The Collingwood Messenger gives the following account of a tea-meeting held in the Baptist church of that town last week, to give members of his own congregation and other friends an opportunity of saying farewell to the Rev. E. J. Stobo, on the eve of his departure to Peterborough :—

"The ladies of the church had provided an excellent "tea," to which ample justice was done by the large number present. Rev. Mr. Ryerse was then voted to the chair, after which addresses were delivered by Rev. Mr. Rodgers, of the Presbyterian church, and Rev. Mr. Starr, of the Methodist church, each expressing their high appreciation of Rev. Mr. Stobo as an able and zealous Christian minister, and their deep regret at his contemplated departure from Collingwood. Mr. Herrick next read an address from the Teni Auticosan Club, acknowledging Mr. Stobo's invaluable services in the cause of temperance, and Mr. E. Thompson followed with a few kindly words, expressing his sorrow at Mr. Stobo's departure. Mayor Hodgson expressed the deep feelings of esteem entertained for Mr. Stobo by the St. Andrews' congregation, after which Mr. W. H. Taylor, on behalf of the church, in feeling terms alluded to the faithful manner with which Rev. Mr. Stobo discharged his Christian duties since his arrival in Collingwood, and to the cheering success which attended his zealous labors in the service of God. The Chairman, Rev. Mr. Ewing, in an exceedingly able and well-timed address, alluded to Rev. Mr. Stobo's personal labors as a Christian minister and the zeal with which he discharged his duties. He expressed a deep feeling of sorrow at Mr. Stobo's departure, and alluded to the great loss his absence would prove to his church and also to the town at large. Rev. Mr. Stobo's reply was very impressive, and as he spoke in feeling terms of his severance as pastor from the Collingwood Baptist church, the emotion of many in the audience found vent in tears. Before sitting down Mr. Stobo gave the church some excellent advice, and concluded by expressing his deep obligations to the members of his church and the people of Collingwood for their kindness to himself and family. The meeting then came to a close."

The Collingwood Messenger says:

"It is not quite two years since Mr. Stobo came to Collingwood, but during that time his many noble qualities of heart and mind endeared him to the members of the church and congregation over which he presided and to all who knew him. Mr. Stobo is a able and zealous Christian minister, and as a citizen he was ever foremost in every good work. His ministry here was eminently successful, and his departure is deeply regretted by the church of which he was a faithful pastor. A large number of friends went to the depot on Thursday morning to bid Mr. and Mrs. Stobo farewell and a hearty God-speed in their new home with them."

A Good Example.—The Village Council of Ashburnham have this year effected a reduction in the rate, of one mill in the dollar. This shows what may be done by a Council working in harmony and with an honest endeavor to further the interests of their constituents. We commend the example to our Town Fathers.

The Camera.—Mr. Esterbrook who has succeeded to the business lately carried on by E. Thompson & Son, brought with him a most favorable reputation as an artist, and is already giving practical proof that it is not undeserved. From a visit to his studio, and an examination of some of the work executed by him since his arrival here we can safely affirm that he advertised guarantee to do all kinds of work in the photographic line equal to the best city style, in not a mere boast, but is fully carried out in his everyday business. Mr. Esterbrook has established a special line of business which must commend itself to the public, both on account of its novelty, reasonableness of the rate charged, and excellence of the portraits—that of finishing photos of cabinet size in oil. We have had the opportunity of examining some portraits so finished, since Mr. Esterbrook's arrival here, and they certainly are gems of art. The coloring is done in exquisite taste, and the effect is really superb. We would strongly advise anyone intending to have cabinet portraits to call at Mr. Esterbrook's establishment and inspect some specimens of his work. He can need no higher commendation than they afford. 32-1 in.

A Church Question.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER.

DEAR SIR.—The last week's issue of your paper contained a communication from some one who signs himself "One who Knows," purporting to give a correction by simply denying the statements of the Correspondent of the Review at Young's Point, anent the affairs of Ebenezer Church.

It pains me to enter upon, and open up, an old controversy which has so long been buried among the things of the past, for among the members of that particular communion I recognize many of my warmest friends, who would never compromise their character by giving their assent to the criticism of "One who Knows." Even though they should, and thereby feel hurt at my correcting the corrector, truth to me is more precious than friendship. I disclaim any sympathy with, nay, I felt it a most unfortunate thing that the correspondent of the Review at this late day should touch and thus revive the smouldering embers.

But he has touched it, and Phœnix-like it has sprung into being, and as myname figures conspicuously in each communication, I feel it a duty to tell "One who Knows," that it would have been more in harmony with the facts had he affixed (if his very significant name, the no less significant particle not. Then it would read "One who Knows not." This certainly would be more euphonious to the ears of the many excellent people at the Point.

I am afraid, Mr. Editor, you have done the gentleman the grave injustice by omitting this word. It is small, yet expressive, and usually changes the meaning of sentences.

It is the only apology I can offer for any man, in the face of the many recent utterances, indulging in so many and so glaring inconsistences.

Had he waited until better informed, I am satisfied he would have allowed the statements of the Review to pass unnoticed ; at least he would not have given so emphatic a denial.

He must know it is not trespassing an intelligent public fairly, at whose bar he submits his case, by saying, in school-boy style, "I deny it," "I know better." Does he think an honest verdict can be arrived at or rest upon the ipse dixit of any man?

I would invite the gentleman to state all he knows, and let the public decide whether the requisite particle should or should not be appended to his name ; and whether he or the correspondent of the Review is on the side of truth.

"No, sir," she replied, "pa is not in at present. Did you wish to see him personally?" "Yes," was the brief response, feeling that she was yielding, "on very particular personal business," and he turned proudly to go away. "I beg your pardon," she called after him as he strode the lower step, "but who shall I say called?" He never smiled again. This was too cruel.

GRANDPA'S BARN.

(Mary D. Brine in Harper's Young People.)

Oh, a jolly old place is grandpa's barn,
Where the doors stand open throughout the day,
And the coming doves fly in and out,
And the air is sweet with the freshest hay.

Where the grain leg over the slippery floor,
And the hens are busily looking around,
And the sunbeams flicker, now here, now there,
And the breeze blows through with a merry sound.

The swallows twitter and chirp all day,
With fluttering wings in the old brown eaves,
And the robins sing in the trees, which lean
To brush the roof with their rustling leaves.

O, for the glad vacation time,
When Grandpa's barn will echo the shout
Of merry children, who romp and play
In the new-born freedom of "school let out!"

Such scaring of doves from their cosy nests,
Such hunting for eggs in the lofts so high,
Till the frightened hens with a cackle shrill,
From their hidden treasures are fain to fly.

Oh, the dear old barn, so cool, so wide!
Its doors will open again ere long
To the summer sunshine, the new-mown hay,
And the merry rise of vacation song.

For grandpa's barn is the jolliest place
For frolic and fun on a summer's day:
And s'en old Time, as years slip by,
In memory never steals away.

PETERBOROUGH, AUGUST 5, 1880.

THE NORTH-WEST.

DIARY OF A PETERBORO' EMIGRANT.

Settled at Shell River.

What the Country is like—Taking Squatter's chances.

LETTER IV.

SHELL RIVER, June 27th, 1880.

We have taken up our locations for the present, not knowing if on the correct Nos. or not. Mr. Todd, Marvin and two others have been running lines for one month, and on the last surveys from south post up six miles to our post six miles down from Major Boulton's, they could not agree—making the line now 700 yards from our first survey, taking off the meridian and allowance for roads. I had picked on a beautiful spot the day after Marvin went to Fort Ellice, and Willie and I moved on at once, ploughed up a strip 90 yards long, removed the sod, dug up, planted the trees, currants, etc., put in all our vegetable seeds except tomatoes, cabbage and tobacco, and all were up before Marvin's return. The beans, peas, corn, etc., look splendid, and as it was fenced by Willie the cattle can't get into it, and, if not too late, we may have enough to do this winter. Then we ploughed up half an acre or so and I planted the potatoes and turnips. They also look well. This patch is not fenced. We also put in three bushels of oats and one bushel of spring wheat—all the seed that could be got at the Fort. We got no help from Marvin. As this Mr. Todd is the Lindsay Russell of the party, and Marvin his first assistant; they of course made my lot No. 24 Hudson Bay. I knew Todd and McDougall, two partners from Scotland, wanted to get it, but I am bound to hang on to it. I could have sold my squatter's claim or possession to a Mr Field, formerly in the Hudson Bay service. He says it is the prettiest place he has seen in the North-West. The last survey takes all the wood off Todd & McDougall's lot, and placed part of 22 on mine. My lot runs east and west. On the south-east side is a lake, about a mile in circumference, covered with ducks. The wood runs on my lot on the north-west side to the water's edge, and on the east and north end is a gradual slope of 200 yards, on the top of which you can see beautiful rolling prairie and lakes for a distance of ten miles. The land is black loam, and around the lake is fringed with round stones, fit to build any cellar. The bottom is sandy. It is situated in the middle of the county, west range north of the 6th Base Line, Sec. 28. Major Boulton is West Range or township north of us, six miles. If you refer to your L. Russell map you can place us in a moment. We are in the upper or north-west county south of the Shell. Marvin and Albert's lot is No 4 (640 acres), township north of us. We are all on the Fort Ellice and Pelly Trail, which runs through a lovely country for 30 miles to us. Marvin says the Trail is splendid. By leaving Fort Ellice in the morning you will strike our tent that evening. The trail is across part of my lot and passes the west end of the lake within a few yards of it. This country is by far the best we have seen in search in the North-West from Manitoba to this point. There is a heavy belt of timber (large) north-east of us about 4 miles, which reaches the Riding and Duck Mountains. This is the place for Tom Weir. Splendid land, wood, water; millions of duck, prairie chickens, plover, pigeons, &c. If he ever intends to come up to the North-West now is the time. The land is not laid out nor in the market, but now is the time squat. It will, I am thinking, all be taken before long. The Major was the first to cross the Bird Tail River, for settlement, and we second; but now there are 46 new ones come in. There is land south of Bird Tail farmed for two years and yet in market for selling. If you ever intend to come here to see the country I would advise you to come now, and bring Tom Weir with you. You can reach our tent in 11 days from Peterborough—say by train 3½ days to Winnipeg, and six days from there to Fort Ellice, or by boat and train from Collingwood to Winnipeg four days, passage through $18; from Winnipeg to Fort Ellice, 6 days, $17. You find yourself. You can get horses, buckboards, carts, etc., at the Fort, and reach us that day—35 miles by trail—in 7 hours. You would see all the river and have a beautiful trip, and if you take any load we are here to protect it and prevent squatters going on it. Mrs. C. is still in Winnipeg, but we have written her to come to Fort Ellice. The water may go down. The last trip up, on Thursday, the boat had $4,000 worth of freight and passage—so Major Boulton informed us as he passed our tent on his way home yesterday. If you can't get away just now you will miss the trip up the river as the drive would be very tedious. By boat is the best way to come. Now as to steamboating there is a splendid chance from Fort Ellice to Fort Pelly; the Hudson Bay agent says they could keep a small boat running with their goods alone—and if the railway crosses the Assiniboine at the Shell the railroad plant will go up by boat. None of the Rituse line can go up. There are two parties surveying 8 miles north of us; one laying out township north from Major Boulton's and then cross the Shell towards Fort Pelly; the other is railroad. They want to get a route north of Major Boulton's, the river crossing a small creek near the mouth of the Shell River, you will see it on your map, but not traced correct as the Shell runs east towards the Riding Mountains. Marvin's lot is about 6 miles north from the river; you will notice a strip on the map which ends west of the county, my three miles north of the river. This strip is gravel and stone, not wood; Judging from the strip my lot would be 9 miles or more. The two surveying parties passed close to our tents. Do you know, when we may expect a party to lay out or subdivide the counties north and west of Bird Tail Creek? Can't Dick Rogers get it? At the rate it is now filing, it will be all taken up before any surveyors, for motion purposes, come in. We found this the case from Shoal Lake to Bird Tail, as they are all squatters, the land being surveyed only in part, but not out in the market for settlement. If J R Rogers should come this way tell him to bring up his dog, and I will train him and take care of him, and I should advise him to come up at once if he has any idea of taking up land. Four miles from me is Mr. Desmark, of Campbellford who took up his claim—that is, he put a mower and reaper on a section, and then started east of us to the timber belt to prospect; that is the way they do here. His family, cattle, etc., are at Fort Ellice, and I am writing this to mail by him. Now try and come up at once, you won't lose much time and you may make a good thing by taking up land. Tell Tom Weir to be sure and come, if he wants to see a splendid country and land. He can get shooting until he is sick. The weather is bright but not too warm. Clear nights but cold. About 8 the black flies disappear, but it is a hard time we have with them; otherwise the country and climate are beautiful—as fine as you can wish for. Tell R. Craig, that Mr. L——, who is to be married to Miss M—— S——, is going down to Peterboro in August, and wants to get a man to work on his farm. He will give him $30 per month and board by the year, and give the oxen to him to help to plough any land he may take up.

E. CALCUTT.

EXCHANGING DUSTERS.

Experience of a Humorist and a Clergyman.

I hurriedly called for my linen duster (ever since my uncle in California left me $300, OO I always wear a linen duster when I travel; I feel as though I could afford it, and society rather demands it of me), and climbed into the train and waited for it to start. By and by I reached into the capacious pockets of that duster and in an idle vagary drew forth a Police Gazette, radiant with the usual astonishing display of all kinds of stocking-ings in all manner of attitudes save proper ones, with female figures attached to them.

Now I never buy and I never read that journal, and I was amazed to find it in my pocket. I went down again and brought up a couple of beer tickets. Then I raked again and found a piece of billiard chalk, several grains of coffee and a piece of lemon peel. It occured to me that my ordinarily well behaved and exemplary duster had evidently been out with the boys last night instead of reposing in the quiet of the coat room. Curious to know how far this iniquity went, I reached into another pocket and found a corkscrew, three dice, revealing in the luxurious affluence of three aces apiece, and a poker deck containing four kings of spades.

I was ashamed of that duster. Not only had it been out with the boys but it had fallen among thieves, and was itself the meanest thief of the lot, and unworthy to be called one of the boys. I was almost afraid to examine the last pocket, but I finally sent down the grapple and up it came with a whiskey flask, very empty but very odorous.

I began to wish the train would start so that I might watch my opportunity and throw that duster, with all its manifold iniquities on its wicked head, into the river. I stealthily felt under the bottle and found a pair of brass knucks. That settled it; my duster was irrevocably bad. I would wear it as far as the first river of the first tunnel, and I would never wear it farther. Would the train ever start.

Just then a gentle hand touched my shoulder. I started guiltily and looked up to see a policeman. If I had been arrested on any charge, theft, burglary, murder, sheep-stealing, treason, anything, I should have given right in and gone along. I hadn't enough confidence in myself to deny anything. But when I looked up I saw a kind, tender face, and I heard the pleasant voice of a Methodist clergyman.

'I beg your pardon,' he said, 'but I fear you and I have exchanged dusters. I only noticed the change this moment, when I found some letters and lecture tickets bearing your name in the pockets. The mistake was my own, I have no doubt. I am so very careless and our dusters are so nearly alike.'

I was so shocked that I didn't know what to say nor where to look, but I had just enough sense left to say, yes, that it was my duster that he held in his hands, that I couldn't find my own in the court room and took the only one that was left. And then I gave the good, innocent man the villainous old sin-dyed Philistine that had been corrupting my morals all morning.

And then, to sit there and never look around but just listen to that man's acclamations of amazement and horror. First he found the the billiard chalk. He didn't know what that was, so he only said, 'H'm!' When he found the coffee grains—but he didn't exactly understand them, and he just said, 'Ha!'

Then he fished out the corkscrew and he seemed to comprehend that in a general way, for he said "What?" in a staccato that elicited an encore from the entire audience. The poor man's "merciful heavens!" that greeted the appearance of the whiskey flask was drowned in a perfect torrent of applause and wild cries of "Go on, go on," and "More." And then when he pulled out the Police Gazette and the brass knuckles, he fell back into his seat with an audible cry of horror, and the whole car full of people just rose to their feet and yelled and howled, and trampled on their bats, and wanted to get out and tear the bottom out of the car and throw it into the Chesango river to express their feelings.

I never saw so great enthusiasm over such a little thing. And the fainting clergyman came to me, holding the disreputable, character-destroying old gallows bird of a duster in his trembling hands.

'Sir,' he said, with patient rebuke and pitiful appeal mingling in his tremulous utterance, "Sir——"

But I steeled my heart against him, because I was as innocent as himself, and it was the pulpit and the rostrum for it.

"Go away," I said "don't bring it around here! don't you point that thing at me! 'Tain't mine! you claimed it yourself! Don't dare to charge me with it! Threw it under the car! Burn it up! I won't have it! Don't you dare——"

But the clergyman held it out towards me and raised his right hand appealingly to heaven. Just before the tableau began to tell with the jury, however, the porter came panting down to the train. He had an innocent looking duster in his hands, with a package of Sunday School papers bulging out one pocket and a Moody hymn book flattening the other.

"Gent'men," he said "de barkeeper sent he down and he pays as how somebody has don' run away wid his duster, and he wants it sent back or he make it pow'ful lively for de man what took it of he have to come after it himself."

That settled it. The clergyman took his own ulster and gave up the robe of unrighteousness to the ambassador. The man on the wood box made a generally consolatory remark about the false and fatal strength of circumstantial evidence. The band played "Sweet, come back to the farm," and the train pulled out.—Hamboys.

Burdock Blood Bitters cures scrofula, erysipelas, salt rheum, piles, and all humors of the blood. Cures dyspepsia, liver complaint, biliousness, constipation, dropsy, kidney complaints, headache, nervousness, female weakness, and general debility. 33-52ns.

KEEP ON THE FARM.

In these dull times, when scores of young men are out of employment, and others are coming in from other places seeking for so called "genteel" situations, it is well to give wide publicity to such facts as are set forth in the following extract from the New York Journal of Commerce:—"One of the great problems of our day, too little discussed by those who have the ear of the public through the press or at the forum, is to furnish the young men of this generation with remunerative employment. The professions are all over-crowded. The shopkeepers are by far too numerous. Agencies of all kinds are so multiplied that the occupants tread on each other's toes, and are a bore and nuisance to the general public. Clerks out of employment and willing to serve for a pittance are to be reckoned by their tens of thousands. Bookkeepers with hungry eyes are reading the advertisement lists in the vain hope of an opening for their applications. Collectors, messengers, doorkeepers, watchmen conductors, and a great variety of others, already expert, seeking employment in kindred callings, are anxiously waiting for someone to employ them. Every possible form of service that can be reckoned in the list of genteel occupations is eagerly sought after by the multitudes who have no other provision for their daily needs. The men who have been trying to live by their wits must go to work at the beach or in the field; of these the soil offers the most accessible, and at first the most remunerative employment. The mass of the unemployed must seek sustenance from the bosom of mother earth. Land is cheap, and there is a wide area that awaites the tiller. The back may ache, and the skin blister in the sun, but the bread can be made without fear of failure, if the labourer will be faithful to his calling. It needs less wisdom and forethought than patient industry, and the man with a common mind may eat his harvest in peace.

The most pleasant, rapid, reliable and effectual remedy yet discovered for diarrhœa, dysentery, cholera morbus, choiera infantum, and all summer complaints, is Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. It is unsurpassed as a reliable specific in the above disease, is well known as a great remedial agent, and is more highly valued the longer it is known. Travellers and tourists should carry a supply in their haversack. For sale by all Dealers in Medicines. 32-52ns

SUDDEN DEATH.—Mrs. Chas. Hamilton, a widow living with her son and two daughters on King street, was found dead in her bed Saturday morning. She had been troubled with heart disease for some time, but on the day before her death appeared in good health, and retired in the evening apparently as well as ever. Her sudden death was a great shock to her family, who have the sympathy of the community in their bereavement.—Herald.

JERSEY BUTTER.—Jersey Butter is all the fashion, and it has become so, mainly because the makers have kept up a uniform color through thd year, using artificial color when necessary. Dairyman who wish to be in the fashion must use the Perfected Butter Color made by Wells, Richardson & Co., Burlington, Vt. Hon. E. D. Mason, Pres. Vt., Dairy Assoc. says: "It gives the brightest and most perfect color to butter of any substance I have ever used. I know it to be, as you say, as harmless as salt, and it adds several cents per pound to the value of butter." 29 4-ins

By the timely use of the Extract of Wild Strawberry, you may avert all disagreeable summer complaints, diarrhœa, dysentery, cholera morbus, etc. Nothing is so pleasant in its cure, so rapid, reliable and effectual as Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. And the value of this medicine as an antidote in sour stomach, colic, cramps, seasickness, vomiting, and other irritations of the stomach and bowels is incalculable. It is safe and sure, and should be carried in the haversack of every traveller and tourist. 22 2

Joy Among the Children.

COPLAND'S SWEET CASTOR OIL, equally suitable for children and adults. Endorsed by over 600 doctors in Canada.

The difficulty of administering nauseous medicines, and the desirability of having the pleasant to the taste, induced T. Copland to undertake researches which resulted in the discovery of a Sweet Castor Oil, perfectly tasteless, of the same strength and medical qualities as the ordinary Castor Oil, and while equally safe and harmless, yet acting with more certainty, and producing neither nausea nor griping. Some children say it is honey; others call it syrup—they all say they like it. One parent says—"My children drink it like water;" another—"We had to hide the bottle or they would have finished it right off;" another—"My little girl has taken it twice without any trouble, and does not know what it is, though she hates the ordinary Castor Oil, and we could never get her to take it without a fight;" yet another—"I wish you success of your Sweet Castor Oil; it is a splendid thing—sure to take the place of all the common oil."

The extraordinary demand for this improvement on a staple household medicine has brought fraudulent imitations into the market, but the public can guard themselves against substitutes (which unprincipled parties are attempting to sell on the reputation of this article) by seeing that the name, COPLAND'S SWEET CASTOR OIL, is on both the wrapper and direction label.

The undersigned having purchased Messrs. T. Copland & Co's interest in the above preparation, are now manufacturing it from the original recipe. NORTHROP & LYMAN, TORONTO.

The Most Valuable Gifts—Restoration of the Health.

During the past ten years the Great Shoshonees Remedy has faithfully redeemed every promise and guarantee made to the public. Alarming and apparently hopeless cases of Lung diseases, Dyspepsia, Liver Complaints, Afflictions of the Kidney and Chronic Complaints of every description, including Scrofula and Skin Diseases of life-long duration, have been permanently removed and eradicated. Those who volunteered their testimony to the efficacy of the Remedy are not bogus people in unheard-of localities in foreign countries, but respectable citizens of this country, easy of access and open to question, upon whose verbal recommendations we are willing to rest the reputation of the Great Shoshonees Remedy. If you are afflicted, do not delay until medicine may be powerless to aid you. No injurious effects can possibly follow the use of these Indian Remedies, as they contain no minerals, by which the life of the invalid is so often sealed under the form of some temporary sedative or stimulant. These Indian Remedies are widely known and still possess the public confidence, after the lapse of sufficient time to test their efficacy.

The Shoshonees Vegetable Sugar Coated Pills have won for themselves the most favorable reputation of any pill before the public. Their efficacy has been fully proved as a remedy for billiousness, Sick Headache and inactivities of the stomach. Price of the Remedy in pint bottles, $1; Pills, 25 cents a box. Sold by all medicine dealers.

We have recently published a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical and permanent cure (without medicine) of Nervous Debility, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediment to Marriage, etc., resulting from excesses.

☞ Price in a sealed envelope, only 6 cts., or two postage stamps.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicine or the use of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

PETERBOROUGH, AUGUST 12, 1880.

THEY DID NOT SUCCEED.

The statement comes from the Old Country that the visiting ministers who went forth to secure the money with which to build the cheapest portion of the Pacific Railway have signally failed in their undertaking, and that the British capitalist has been found of sufficient stamina to resist even the "magnetic" Sir John. This result is not one which will greatly distress the people of Canada. Since the country has been pledged by Sir John to the immediate construction of the Pacific end of the railway, and the money has been appropriated from the earnings of the older sections of Canada to build that portion of the railway, it would be a very foolish thing indeed to throw over to a company a monopoly of the arable lands of the North-West Territories. This is precisely what Sir John went to England to do, and it is more by good luck than by good management that the country escaped the benefit of his intentions. What recourse the Government will have recourse to, now that the mission has failed, is difficult to divine, but we should not be at all surprised to find the "N. C." set up in place of the "N. P." as the rallying cry for the next general elections.

THE WRITS AT LAST.

After many days of waiting the writs have at last been issued for the two open constituencies in this Province, and for that of Selkirk, in Manitoba. In Toronto West and in North Ontario the nomination of candidates will take place on the 21st instant, the polling the week following. It is gratifying to find that the Government have at last screwed up their courage to the sticking point, and have determined to allow the electors the opportunity of pronouncing upon public affairs. The constituencies opened in the Province are fairly representative ones: One is in the centre of a manufacturing district—the metropolitan city of the province, and the other is an agricultural constituency, in which there is a large stake and a sufficient amount of intelligence and education to make the result one of interest. If after the experience we have had of the working of the National Policy, of its utter failure to in any way promote the prosperity of the country, and if its impotence so far as the price of grain is concerned, the farmers of such a county as North Ontario deliberately by their votes sanction the continuance of such a fraud, then we must needs despair of the future of our country. But we feel satisfied that all these considerations will be duly taken into account by the electors of that constituency, and that the ballot-boxes when opened will show a very different result from that to which the N. P. supporters are looking forward. In East Toronto, we do not look forward so sanguinely to a favorable result. The influences that may be brought to bear on a constituency are all in the hands of the friends of the retiring member, Mr. Robinson, and if a Liberal be elected the result may be looked upon as a miracle, and will only afford the stronger evidence of the unpopularity of the National Policy, and the sense of injury which the people who suffer by it entertain.

A "MOST SLASHING DEFENCE."

The Mail of Friday had the following special despatch from Liverpool:

Sir John Macdonald to-day received an important deputation on the subject of the Canadian tariff from the Manchester Chamber of Commerce, representing the whole of the Lancashire industries. Sir John in replying to the gentlemen said the tariff had been adjusted on the principle to encourage English imports by placing heavier duties on American goods, but that Englishmen were prejudiced, and ignored Canada's peculiar situation as regards the United States. American rings and corners had completely crushed all attempts to introduce manufacturing into Canada, and would have continued to do so unless Canada, by her new tariff had endeavored to prevent it. The new tariff had already forced the Americans to clamour for a reciprocal treaty, which previously had been contemptuously refused. If England must have privileges she must give something in return. With countervailing duties in English markets, Canada could always afford to make 10 per cent difference between English and other foreign goods. In conclusion, Sir John said he did not think there was any immediate chance for a reduction of the tariff, but we would willingly receive any suggestion and remedy any proved injustice. Sir John incidentally promised to equalize postal rates from England and the United States to Canada on sample parcels. Sir John Macdonald's speech is considered to be a most slashing defence of the protective policy.

It is a good thing to know from the mouth of Sir John A. Macdonald, that "Englishmen are prejudiced," and it is a piece of news to those who are familiar with the National Policy Tariff, that the said tariff discriminates in favor of British goods, as against American goods, in view of the fact that the duties charged on both classes of goods are precisely the same, and that the advantage of freight to the market for consumption is decidedly in favor of the American. It is news, too, to hear that the Americans are "clamoring" for a new reciprocal treaty. When Sir John stated that—and it is well known that he says a good deal more than his prayers—he said what he could not but but have known to be a deliberate falsehood. A few years ago there was a prospect of a renewal of reciprocal trade relations with the United States, but that prospect was broken off, mainly through the instrumentality of Sir John and his agents, who would not admit that any benefit could be conferred upon the people of this country through the agency of Hon. Geo. Brown, who was conducting the negotiations at Washington. The talk of "forcing" the Americans into a new reciprocity treaty is the wildest moonshine, for it was that very attempt to "force" them which has postponed the possibility of such a treaty for another decade. Canada, says Sir John, "could always afford to make 10 per cent. difference between English and other foreign goods." Of course Sir John is not aware that by treaty regulations between British and the United States, Canada has nothing to say about the matter. We expect discriminate in favor of the mother-land to the extent of ten per cent, nor even of one per cent, for it is expressly agreed between the Kingdom of Great Britain and the Republic of the United States, with regard to Canada, that the United States shall be treated as the "most favored of nations," and any duty affecting the manufacturers of that country must of necessity similarly and to the same extent affect the manufacturers of Great Britain. Sir John's "slashing defence" of the National Policy, is but a second edition of the foolish threat which he hold out to the United States, that at the head of four millions of people, he would force forty millions to his will, and means, if it mean anything, that he has had bad success with his Pacific Railway scheme, and cannot refrain from a public exhibition of his temper thereanent. For the credit of the country the sooner he is recalled the better.

Great Distress

is often suddenly experienced from an attack of cramp in the stomach, colic or other painful affections for the relief of which nothing is superior to Dr. Pierce's Compound Extract of Smart-Weed, or Water-Pepper, compounded for the best French brandy, Jamaica ginger, smartweed, or water pepper, and anodyne gums. For diarrhœa, dysentery, bloody flux, cholera-morbus, its warming, soothing astringent and heating properties render it a perfect specific, unequalled as an anodyne and stimulating embrocation or liniment. Should be kept in every family. Sold by druggists at fifty cents.

HIGH FLAVORED BUTTER.—Buyers pay the highest price for gilt-edged butter, but want every tub to be as even, bright, color. They recommend their patrons to use only Wells, Richardson & Co's Purified Butter Color, as it is the most reliable known, and will give a perfect color. It received the only award in the International Dairy Fair at the Crystal Palace, Toronto, 1879. Sold by druggists and storekeepers. 32-1y.

An Unanticipated Fortune.

Estates, whose values are estimated by millions, seeking heirs and finding them, are so seldom heard of now-a-days that the account of one, of which a Philadelphia boy was recently advised he had fallen heir to, is calculated to awaken a refreshing interest in the possibilities of life. The testator, Alfred B. Carlin, a bachelor, reported to be worth not less than $4,000,000, was known up to the time of his death as the king of stock-breeders in Australia, and lived in a way becoming his great wealth on a vast estate near Wagga-Wagga in that country. His name will be remembered by those who were interested in the famous Tichborne trial, held in London six years ago, as the most conspicuous witness for the claimant to the Tichborne estates—appearing as the man who first employed Arthur Orton as a herder on his alleged arrival in Australia, and whose testimony as to the personal appearance of Orton when he first saw him corresponded with Lady Tichborne's description of her son and heir as she knew him when he left home. According to Dr. Kenealey, Orton's Counsel, over $100,000 was contributed by Mr. Carlin to aid the claimant to establish his heirship.

Nothing was known of Alfred Carlin's antecedents among the few with whom he associated, but he was generally supposed to be without relations. Shortly after his death, however, a will was produced by his attorneys, Browne & Silsby, in Wagga-Wagga, directing the sale of his property and payment of the proceeds to the heir whom he named.

Efforts were at once made by the attorneys to place themselves in communication that Mr. Carlin's heir, and the result, after considerable trouble and delay, was that early last January a letter was received by William J. Carlin, at No. 2,031 Mount Vernon street, from Tabor, Wales & Peery, solicitors, No. 41 Strand, London, setting forth the demise of his uncle and requesting him to prove his identity and thus his claim to the inheritance. After recovering his astonishment Mr. Carlin, who had never heard of this uncle took the letter to his mother. At first she was inclined to treat the matter as a hoax, but, afterwards a recalling references to a brother which her husband once made during his lifetime, she advised the son to answer the letter. The result has been a continued correspondence and the probable settlement of the porperty upon the heir within two months.

It appears that the deceased left his home in England when he was about twenty years of age, and was supposed to have gone to China as a merchantman, shipping as a common sailor. Nothing was heard of him afterwards and he was given up as dead. About fifteen years ago a letter was received from the father of the boy who now comes into possession of his estate, and of whose existance he was then advised. That was the last heard from him until the recent advices of his death.

William J. Carlin, who may now be said to be one of the wealthiest young men in America, is about twenty one years of age, unassuming in his ways and of boyish appearance. The mother and son live in an elegant little house at the above address and are said to be in very easy circumstances.—Philadelphia Press.

What a Montreal Husband Discovered.

A few days ago a young French Canadian gentleman, well known and highly esteemed as a man of honour, a resident of St. Hubert street, Montreal, had occasion to go into the country for a time on a pleasure excursion, leaving his wife and children at home. He returned hastily the same evening, and upon trying the door found it locked. He noticed at the same time a light in his bed-room. No one coming to admit him, it flashed upon him that burglars might be in the house, and he burst in the door and rushed into his room. He could see no one, but the light was turned on, and the bed had been recently vacated. He tried one door after another, and then came to the wardrobe. Pulling open the door, he discovered, to his utter bewilderment, a man and a woman in a semi-nude state. The woman was his wife; the man a doctor well know in French Canadian circles. But a still greater horror awaited him, for on dragging the man into the light he discovered he was his wife's uncle. The wife screamed and the doctor implored mercy. The enraged husband seized a rifle and demanded which of them he should kill first, as both should die. They fell upon their knees and implored mercy for their conduct; the woman adding that if only for their children's sake, her husband should not place his own freedom in peril. This appeal stayed the hand of the husband, and bundling the pair into the street as they stood he locked the door and informed the nearest police that there were to be found at a certain street in a gateway a man and woman who wanted some clothes to cover their nakedness.

A correspondence of the Ottawa Free Press, writing from Montreal to that journal says:—

"I caught a rumour here from what seems to be a well-posted party that the Goodernams are slowly but surely playing into the hands of the Grand Trunk Railway, and that shortly this monster will be able to boast of having devoured the St. Lawrence and Ottawa, the Coteau Landing, and was to have been the Toronto and Ottawa Railway charters. In that case Heaven help Ottawa!"

PETERBOROUGH, AUGUST 12, 1880.

SIR JOHN AT HOME AND ABROAD.

The Premier of Canada seems to enjoy the rare faculty of a dual existence, not of matter, but of mind. Previous to his departure on his "mission" to England with his two boon companions, Mr. Pope and Sir Charles, he unbosomed himself at a pic-nic held at Bath in the following language:

"He was as certain as he was standing on a platform that the railway would not in the end cost Canada a farthing. He was also certain that the 220,000,000 acres of land known to be fit for settlement would not only be sufficient to build the road and pay the costs already incurred by the Dominion, but to return a handsome revenue to the country. The people of Canada, therefore, need not be afraid that their property would be taxed or their burdens increased. When he told his hearers that at this moment there were a number of capitalists offering to build the road, desirous of taking it off the hands of the Government, and also of making their own fortunes by running it and by the settlement of the land which had been set apart to pay for its construction, they would quite understand how false and absurd were the charges made against the Government, that the building of the line was overburdening the people. He would say this, and the Minister of Finance, who was on the platform, could corroborate his statement if necessary, that there were capitalists at this moment who, knowing that there was a certain fortune to be made out of the construction of the railway, were asking that the work should be handed over to them."

All this was, of course, most reassuring to those who had not yet learned the value of Sir John's word, and the only wonder was why the Premier should be so anxious to hand over to foreign capitalists an enterprise which would "not cost the country a farthing," and out of which there was "a certain fortune to be made." It was not unnatural to suppose, if Sir John really intended or meant what he said, that this most profitable enterprise ought to remain in the hands of the government of the country, so that the people might get the benefit of the "fortune" as some slight recompense for the vast amounts which have been taken out of their pockets by the N. P. and the C. P. R. Sir John, however, proceeded to England to meet the eager and anxious capitalists, and it would appear has occupied himself for over a month in keeping out of their way, probably for the purpose of whetting their appetite for the aforesaid fortune. We have heard of him at innumerable "banquets," expatiating upon the resources of the Dominion, and the power of the Canadian Militia as an ally of the British forces in time of need, and betimes lecturing the political parties of England upon the folly of persisting in the "superstition" of free trade, after he had set them the example of the N.P. But we have not heard, nor has any one heard, of any negotiations with the capitalists—who were, he said, on the 29th of June last, "offering to build the road, desirous of taking it off the hands of the government," —looking to the accomplishment of the object which took him and his two colleagues away from their official duties at Ottawa to the detriment of the public service, and at serious cost to the public purse. The failure of those mysterious capitalists to make their appearance, or Sir John's successful persistency in eluding them, or inability to find them, in the course of a six months sojourn in England, naturally led the public to suspect that Sir John, at Bath, was simply giving what is called "taffy" to the confiding electors of that place, and was drawing on his imagination for his facts. Now we have a new explanation of the delay, offered by Hon. Mr. Pope's $14,000 organ at Ottawa, which is, as we all know, ground by the scrupulous gentleman who manipulated the printing scandal. The Citizen says:

"We are in a position to say, as intimated above, that capitalists have not yet enjoyed the opportunity of either accepting or rejecting the Government's schemes; that are they have, a conference is to be held with leading members of the Imperial Government—postponed in consequence of the English Premier's dangerous illness—and that, added to this, certain leading continental capitalists who form important elements in the syndicate, only yesterday arrived in London!"

Even this explanation, on the face of it, indicates that Sir John at Bath was making statements for which he had no warranty, or that if he even spoke a portion of the truth, the capitalists who, he said, "at that moment" (June 29th) were eager to build the road, have so cooled in their anxiety as to have kept three Canadian Ministers, to say nothing of the Resident Ambassador, dangling about banqueting halls, and other places of amusement, waiting their convenience. The suggestion that before dealing with this alleged syndicate, the Canadian Ministers must have a conference with the leading Ministers including Mr. Gladstone, is simply absurd. They had their answer months ago, from Mr. Forster, when he told them that if Canada wanted aid to build the Pacific Railway, they must abolish the hostile tariff against British manufactures. The fact is, failure on the part of the month's mission has led to its prolongation, because Sir John does not care to return unsuccessful if he can help it, though such must be the ultimate result.

It is understood that the Railway Commission has merely received instructions to make certain inquiries in regard to the road, but not to touch on the matters and methods of contracts. The work of the Commission will not be of much value but of considerable expense. This is precisely what we intimated when the Commission was organized. It will give certain impecunious supporters of the Government a chance to turn an honest penny at the public expense, but they will not by any manner of means be allowed to stir the stinking pool of Tupperism in the letting of contracts.

PROTECTION vs. FREE TRADE.

In a recent address at Liverpool to representatives of British commerce, Sir John Macdonald was most pronounced—in fact, as must have been regarded by them, offensively so—in asserting that he could not hold out any hope of a repeal of the Protection policy, and sneeringly alluded to the principles of free trade—which are maintained by both political parties in England and which rescued the English people from poverty and ruin to make her commercial mistress of the world—as a "superstition" of which they would see the error when they came to know as much as he did. By his policy of protection he has cut off the British manufacturers from our markets, at the same time debarring the consumers of Canada from purchasing in the cheapest markets, and by increased cost of every article entering into consumption reduced the value of the purchasing power of every bushel of grain raised by the farmer, and every dollar earned by the laboring man and mechanic. Suppose the British Government were to act in like hostile manner towards Canada as our Government have towards Britain, and adopt the vaunted theory of "protection" for the British agriculturist? Suppose a duty were to be placed on grain, on cattle, on dairy products, and on lumber, at the British ports of entry! Such a course would inflict a blow upon the progress and upon every interest of the country, from which we could not recover for a quarter of a century—it would destroy our commerce and cripple our great staple industries. Yet Britain, if its government were to adopt the same selfish policy which Sir John boasts in the faces of its people he is determined to pursue towards them, would only be serving us with our own measure. We could not possibly have the right to complain, in the face of our own anti British tariff. It will be well for Canada if British manufacturers do not resort to agitation for such retaliatory measures to bring the Canadian Government to their senses—but better still if our people themselves take the remedy into their own hands and compel the restoration of the freest possible commercial intercourse between Canada and the mother-land.

THE DOMINION CABINET.

The following was the whereabouts of the various members of the Dominion Cabinet last week:

IN ENGLAND.

Sir Alexander Galt, nominal Resident Ambassador.

Sir John A. Macdonald, Minister of the Interior, lecturing the Cobden Club on the fallacy of Free Trade, and helping Sir Alexander to earn his $15,000 a year.

Sir Charles Tupper, Minister of Railways and Canals, waiting for capitalists to turn up, to build the Pacific Railway.

Hon. J. H. Pope, Minister of Agriculture, helping Sir Charles, and giving the Hon. James Russel Lowell new wrinkles in the art of draw poker.

AT THE POST OF DUTY.

Hon. Mr. Baby, Minister of Inland Revenue, and acting Minister of Justice.

Hon. Mr. Bowell, Minister of Customs, and acting Minister of State, Agriculture, and Marine and Fisheries.

"GONE EAST."

Hon. James Macdonald, Minister of Justice.

Hon. Mr. Aikens Secretary of State.

Sir Alexander Campbell, Minister of Militia.

Hon. J. C. Pope, Minister of Marine and Fisheries.

Hon. S. L. Tilley, Minister of Finance.

"GONE WEST."

Hon. John O'Connor, Postmaster-General, inspecting vacancies on the Bench in Manitoba.

Hon. H. L. Langevin, Minister of Public Works, inspecting dinner tables in Ontario.

It strikes us that if His Excellency the Governor General required an emergent meeting of the Privy Council, he would find it rather difficult to procure a quorum. If the public business can be carried on at this rate of attendance on the part of gentlemen who are getting $7,000 a year for attending to it—why not dispense with the Ministry altogether, and leave the work in the hands of the Deputies?

THE BURNED CAR WORKS.

The destruction of the Car Works at Port Hope, has suggested a hope to many of our citizens that they may be rebuilt at Peterborough. Without doubt the employment of a large number of mechanics here would be of direct benefit to the town, and we believe Peterborough would be found the most advantageous location for such an enterprise, as it would be the most convenient distributing point for the Grand Junction, Midland, Whitby, Port Perry and Lindsay, and Victoria Railways, and for the Toronto and Ottawa if it should ever be built. We do not suppose, considering the extent to which the stockholders of the Midland are taxing their energies and resources to perfect their carrying and forwarding facilities, that the company would build the works at present, though they might find it the best policy in the end; but we believe that with the patronage of the roads we have mentioned, and with the prospect in view of the enormous rolling stock required for the Canada Pacific Railway, for which existing factories are inadequate to the supply, it would be a good field for investment of capital in a way that would be remunerative to the investor, and beneficial to the community. We would suggest that Mr. Robert Nicholls, or some other public-spirited capitalist, should take the matter up and give it their favorable consideration.

THE Telegram says:—In one of his English speeches Sir John Macdonald has been telling his hearers that Canada has a militia force of forty thousand men, and that every man in Canada is a soldier from 18 to 45. It is not difficult to conceive of Sir John making a statement of that kind in a dark room, where he could lay his finger along the side of his nose; but at a public dinner the case is different. The militia force of Canada may be forty thousand on paper; we believe it is represented as being so; but military men will tell you that the number of men who are really available is less than half that number. As to the statement that every man in Canada is a soldier from 18 to 45 years of age, that is the veriest fudge, and nobody knows it better than Sir John. Every man in the country between the age of 18 and 45 may be liable to do duty in the event of war: but to say that every man between those ages is a soldier is as far afield of the fact as to say that every man is competent to take charge of the Channel fleet or perform the operation for the stone.

THE Belleville Intelligencer officially denies that Hon. Mr. Bowell has or ever had any intention of accepting the Toronto Collectorship.

SIGNS OF IMPROVED TIMES.

We are glad to observe that there is at last a decided appearance of a prospective improvement in "times." The season has so far advanced that we may now count upon an abundant crop in this section as a certainty. Although the farmers suffered considerably by the rains of their fall wheat, the crop of this season, taken all round, will be found a satisfactory reward of the year's labor. As the result we can look forward to improved trade in town during the fall and winter—a result which our merchants, who have been for some time doing business on the Dr. Tanner principle, will contemplate with relief. Indeed some slight improvement is already perceptible, and we trust it will go on increasing and expanding. We suppose an improved condition of trade this fall will be attributed by N. P. fanatics to that political fetish; but the farmers will understand that according as Providence blesses their labors with success, the times are better or worse for them. A good crop brings them plenty of money and no thanks to the N. P.; when a bad crop entails a consequent scarcity the N. P. is never mentioned. Merchants, too, know that when the farmers have plentiful crops and plenty of money business flourishes; when the case is otherwise, it languishes. All the N. P. has to do with the question is this: Every dollar the farmer spends, only brings him in 85 cents of value in purchasing what he requires—the N. P. demands the other 35 cents. If we had no N. P. a dollar would buy a dollar's worth of goods.

Newspapers and Magazines.

A short time ago we had to congratulate the Toronto Globe upon a vast stride of improvement effected by the use of a perfecting press, change in form, enlargement in size, and other marks of progress and prosperity. Now the Mail has followed suit and makes its appearance as an eight page journal slightly larger than the Globe, but printed with larger type, which is preferred by some as more readily legible. The Mail presents an attractive appearance, and is a credit to the city of Toronto, and the Province. It has vastly improved in every respect under its new management, and especially in the tone of its editorial columns, which have lost much of that virulence and unscrupulousness which formerly gave it an unenviable prominence. Mr. Bunting is to be congratulated upon his success as a publisher, since he assumed upon the managerial responsibility of the Mail.

The Evening Telegram of Toronto is now printed on a Scott Perfecting Press, capable of turning out 30,000 copies an hour, and presents a very much improved appearance. The success of the Telegram since its first issue is unparalleled in Canadian journalism, and the enterprising proprietor, Mr. J. Ross Robertson, is determined to keep the paper fully up to the mark of popular appreciation. It is a favorite exchange in most newspaper offices, its different departments being always fresh, terse, and newsy, giving the greatest amount and variety of information in the smallest compass. Its editorials are crisp and readable, and hit as often on one side as the other, offering a favorite field for quotation, for each side of politics in turn.

Rose-Belford's Canadian Monthly for this month is one of the best that has ever reached us. It is brim full of selections which will be full of interest to every Canadian. It contains:—Britain's future corn supply; The Battle of Lundy's Lane; In the Himalayas; Method in reading: Canada and her Indian tribes; The Toronto Girl's Coterie; The Rector's Flirtation; A Tragedy of errors; The Education of the Blind; The History of Confederation; several Poems; Round the Table; Book Reviews; Literary Notes; Bric-a-brac.

The New Major-General—The Militia System.

The new military chief of the Canadian Militia force, Major-General LUARD, has arrived at Ottawa. No doubt this new incumbent of a somewhat important Canadian office is a gallant and capable officer and an excellent gentlemen, and whilst the position which he comes here to fill is continued, it may perhaps be as well that he should fill it as that any one else should, if not a great deal better. But we have had for some four or five years a Major-General at the head of our Militia, and where has the advantage shown itself? Formerly our chief military functionary was an Adjutant-General who was in every case recognized as a very harmless and not a very significant personage. The change by which this country was honored with a Major-General involved a few relative and contemporary changes, affecting chiefly the working of official routine. The country knew or could discover no difference for the better if not for the worse. The Major-Generalship costs no doubt a little more money; how much we are unable at the moment to say, but a good deal more without question than any consequent advantages are worth. There has been a sort of nominal change without even a nominal gain. What we have said in substance oftentimes may as well be repeated here. Our whole militia system is a delusion. It is expensive without being even ornamental, to say nothing of usefulness. Reformers have advanced platforms and planks of platforms; but the militia system enjoys perfect immunity from disturbance. Yet the money annually spent in its fruitless maintenance goes without protest, without an attempt to save it although in times such as these it is an amount well worth the saving. — Cornwall Freeholder.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

BOTH PARTIES are somewhat slow in fixing on a candidate in the coming contest in Toronto West. Mayor Beatty will, in all likelihood, be the Tory nominee, and Ald. Ryan is favored by many leading Reformers. He would, undoubtedly, be a strong candidate. Mr. Bethune, whose name is also mentioned, is an abler but less popular man.

WOULD some of those Jingo journals who are so anxious to make the Canadian Militia an "arm of the British Service," and who are encouraging the idea of a little standing army in Canada, explain what appreciable benefit the country has received for the nine million dollars spent for militia purposes in the past nine years?

AFGHANISTAN.

Progress of General Roberts' Forces.

LONDON, Aug. 11.—A despatch from Bombay says that news has been received from Chaman Choki of as late date as Monday. This disposes of the rumors of the disaster received from that quarter. On Tuesday all communication by post or telegraph with General Roberts ceases, although a letter may be sent occasionally. General Roberts has but five days' provisions, which he will use only in emergency to eke out supplies obtainable in the country.

A despatch from Candahar, dated August 6th, says that defensive works have been completed. There are provisions in store for thirty-five days. General Burrows' loss does not exceed 1,000, including 400 Europeans and 21 officers. Wali Shere Ali is in the city with his relatives. Ayoob Khan's force is very large but undisciplined.

QUETTAH, Aug. 10.—A letter from Candahar of the 5th says a camel driver who has come in as a deserter from Ayoob Khan's army, states that the Heratee and Cabulese troops fought over the spoils after the battle at Kushki-Nakood, and Ayoob Khan was wounded in trying to separate them.

The Forty Days' Fast.

Dr. Tanner Successfully Completes his Task.

MEDICAL OPINION OF THE EXPLOIT—VALUELESS LUNACY.

NEW YORK, August 7.—The Herald Bureau, London, August 6.—Dr. Tanner's fast continues to be a subject of considerable interest in the newspapers, in medical and scientific circles, and of course among the great multitude who are always on the lookout for something to talk about. With a view of ascertaining the feeling among the doctors the Herald correspondent has succeeded in obtaining interviews with several gentlemen who are justly eminent in the profession. Dr. Dewes Landes Brunton, the editor of the Practitioner, said: If the data are not certain the experiment is of very little scientific value. We have had many cases purporting to be cases of fasting, but which in the end were found to be impostitions. The scientific value is lessened by the uncertainty of the conditions. It has been found before now that people can live a very long time without food. If Dr. Tanner had succeeded under proper conditions the experiment would have been of interest, though it would have added nothing to what was known before. It would only substantiate what was previously known, namely, that persons may live over forty days with nothing but water. There are several instances of this on record. I do not know, however, that there are any in which we find a man doing without food, and at the same time doing considerable work, as Dr. Tanner appears to have been doing. But as I said before the scientific value is much lessened by the uncertainty of the data. If these may be relied on the experiment is only of interest as showing not that man may go without food for a certain time, but also that he may work in that state by using the store of nutriment in the body. He is living on his reserve stock of vitality just as the camel will go without food many days, but the hump disappears. When the camel is in good condition the hump is full and fleshy; after starving it becomes thin and flaccid. The experiment is of interest, as in the same connection the long walks of Weston, and the long swim of Webb were of interest. No one would have believed these feats could have been done until they had been performed, and it is a just question whether it does not point to the kind of physique of the future. As the struggle for existence among men becomes harder, the successful man will be the man who can do the most work on the least food, will be the cheapest machine. There are great variations in the amount of work which different makes of steam engines will do on the same amount of fuel. It is the perfection of the organization to convert what it gets into work, mental or physical. There are some who turn out little work and consume a great deal of nourishment. It raises the question whether such changes are not going on in our organization as will better adapt them to the work of life than was formerly the case. The Chinaman is hated in America because for a given quantity of food he will turn out a great deal of work, so that he is able to live on wages whereon an Irishman would starve, and that is what makes the Chinaman such a dangerous rival. By and by when the struggle for existence is as keen all the world over as it is in the most crowded populations probably the cheapest machine will be the one which can do the greatest amount of work on the least food all the day.

LONDON, August 7.—Leading physicians express the opinion that Dr. Tanner's forty days' fast is a worthless experiment.

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—Dr. Tanner completed his task at twelve o'clock to-day. His condition was favorable. A large table of water-melon, fruit, bread, &c., was spread in the hall. As soon as the time was up the crowd cheered Tanner enthusiastically. One thousand persons were in the hall and an immense crowd on the ridewalk. He at once drank a glass of milk and called for a watermelon of which he ate heartily. When remonstrated with he asked to be let alone. At 12.15 he left the hall with Dr. Gunn, who took him to his own residence, where he will undergo careful treatment. Tanner's weight at the end of the fast was 131½ lbs., a loss of 36 lbs.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—It is said now that Dr. Tanner's wonderful digestive powers are as remarkable as his ability to fast. He has an enormous appetite, and has been gaining flesh within the past 24 hours at the rate of half a pound an hour. At 2 p. m. yesterday the doctor ate half a dozen oysters, and drank eight ounces of milk and an ounce of his favourite wine. He then slept for an hour, and drank another ounce of wine. At four he drank eight ounces of milk, and at five ate very heartily of a quarter of a pound of steak with bread, and drank eight ounces of milk. At 5 30 he again drank eight ounces of milk, and at eight the same quantity. At 8 25 he drank three ounces of wine, and at nine eight ounces of milk with four crackers.

After two hours sleep last night the doctor awoke a few minutes before midnight, when his face and hands were bathed with ammonia, after which he drank two ounces of wine and ate a cracker. He then slept till four o'clock this morning, when he drank eight ounces of milk. Three hours later he arose and ate a quarter of a pound of steak and a dish of potatoes stewed in milk. After reading the morning papers and his correspondence, which comprised between 60 and 70 letters, he complained of being hungry, and ate half a pound of beefsteak and nine ounces of stewed potatoes, and drank six ounces of milk. This was at 10.30. He was then weighed and raised the beam at 126 lbs., a gain of 14½ lbs. since Saturday. Twenty minutes later he drank more milk and received callers. At one p. m. he was entertaining his visitors. Dr. Tuttle examined a specimen of his blood thirty hours after the fast had closed and found it still in an impoverished condition. There was a superabundance of leucocytes, or white corpuscles, which usually indicate the condition of a patient in the last stages of a wasting disease. A later examination developed a slight improvement and a third examination will be made this afternoon. Much to the surprise of his physicians Dr. Tanner's stomach assimilates readily all he eats and drinks.

At two o'clock Tanner ate about three pounds of watermelon and then took a short ride. He went to the photographer's and had his picture taken. While out of doors he ate half a dozen peaches and several bananas. On returning he drank a glass of water, the first he has taken since breaking his fast. At 5 p. m. he felt hungry and ate a dozen large raw oysters and a lot of crackers, and drank some Bass' ale, and about an hour after he had a supper of beefsteak, &c. He continued to eat and drink and talk until after 10 p. m., when he went to bed.

DISTRICT NEWS.

Cobourg.

Personal.—The Sentinel-Star says:—We had a call on Tuesday afternoon from Major R. Z. Rogers, who has returned from the North-West, where he has established the nucleus of a town which in all probability will yet become an important place. The Major who looks hale and hearty, speaks in glowing terms of the country, and reports it as filling up with a first-class population. He returns again in about six weeks to remain until the end of the year.

Preston Falls.

AMPUTATED BY INCHES.—The Gazette says that for several weeks past Mr. Isaac Walker, of Vermilam, has been afflicted with a felon on the forefinger of the right hand, and it gradually assumed such alarming characteristics, that Dr. Bryce, of this village, decided that the finger would have to be amputated, and on Monday last week he and Dr. Herriman, of Lindsay, performed the operation. But, the finger having been removed, they found that the marrow in the bone was so much affected that they concluded it imperatively necessary to take off the second finger and a portion of the palm of the hand with it, which was done, and still diseased marrow appeared. Then the whole hand was removed; next, the arm above the elbow; and finally, a fifth amputation was performed. The patient, who is 64 years old is doing as well as can be expected.

Fire at Port Hope.

DESTRUCTION OF THE CAR WORKS.

The Port Hope Times gives the following account of the destruction of the car-works by fire on Sunday morning:—

About 1 20 o'clock an alarm was rang from the bell on Walton street, and early as was the hour, the whole of the shopping town was speedily aroused and the most part hurrying off to the scene of destruction. The sky was through all its expanse lurid with flames, even before the alarm bell had ceased to ring. The fire started, undoubtedly in Quay's warehouse, (better known as the old Drill Shed), opposite the car-works, which has of late been used for the storage of hay. The alarm which was given by Mr. Ellis, night watchman, on the first suspicion of anything being wrong, so soon brought out the hose company in full strength, but by the time they were able to reach the scene of action and commence operations, a crowd had gathered such as seldom collects in a town of the size of Port Hope. The fire started as was been stated, in the warehouse lately occupied by Mr. Quay, but within a few minutes the sparks had blown to the other side of the street, igniting a corner of the factory. Had there been a high wind, or had the water supply, as on a recent occasion, been small, the stock of destruction would have been even more speedy than it was. There was from the start no possibility of saving Quay's premises, and the whole exertions of the bridge were consequently directed to the extinction of the flames in the factory. Two reels had been brought up on the sounding of the alarm, but it was found necessary to send down for several more lengths which volunteers brought up by hand. It was judged needful, on account of the danger threatening the Terrace, to detach the hose from the Ontario street hydrant and connect it with the one near Chalk's shop. Had this course not been taken, it is more than likely that this fine row of residences would have been wiped out. The town is greatly indebted to the Hose Company, and also to the Chemical Company No. 1, the latter of whose undoubtedly saved Kingdon's blacksmith shop and Maitland's wagon shop. The large brick foundry, brick office, frame stable, two storehouses, were not insured, and are standing and uninjured. The parts burnt down are the frame machine shop and car building shops, including the machinery, which was insured in the Queen's for $6,000 and the Royal Canadian for $3,500. The whole property, including a quantity of material, timber, lumber, iron safe, scales, etc., was purchased at auction by Mr. John Helm for $7,800. The buildings and machinery cost about $30,000. The property as it now stands is considered to be fully worth the money paid by Mr. Helm.

CUT THIS OUT AND DON'T FORGET IT.—A newspaper proprietor recently sued a subscriber for $48 due on his subscription. The defendant set up the plea that he had ordered the paper to be discontinued, but he did not pay up arrears at the time. The judge ruled that according to law a publisher may continue to send his paper until all arrearages are paid and then the parties to whom the papers are sent must pay, and judgment was rendered accordingly with costs of suit.

The Red Boot Still Leads the Trade.

W. J. LARMOUR

Having during the past few weeks added largely to his former well-assorted stock, has now much pleasure in soliciting the inspection of intending purchasers of FINE BOOTS AND SHOES, believing he can offer inducements, both in Material and Price not to be approached by any other dealer in town.

Since starting in business my aim has been to cultivate a trade in the Finer and Better Classes of work, with what success I leave the public to judge. The dealer who devotes his whole time and attention to any one line can supply his customers to much better advantage, and to carry out this theory, I have resolved in future to devote my exclusive attention to the manufacture and sale of Fine Work only, believing it to be more satisfactory to all.

In all Fine Lines my stock is now very complete, being well assorted, and of this season's purchase, and I can confidently ask for a continuance of the liberal patronage which has been so liberally bestowed on me since starting in business.

Selling for Cash.—On one point in business all are agreed, namely, those who give unlimited credit cannot sell as cheap as those who sell only for cash. In order to sell at cash prices and to cultivate a cash trade I have resolved, from this date, to give credit only to those who have promptly met their accounts in the past.

The Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, AUGUST 12, 1880.

Home from the Seaside.—Mr. John Bertram and party returned on Tuesday from their visit to Old Orchard Beach.

On a Tour of Inspection.—Mr. Thomas Cahill, Deputy Inspector of Weights and Measures, left yesterday for Mill Point, where he will commence a round of inspection which will occupy him for some three weeks.

Get Shod.—Those who desire to secure stylish, durable and substantial foot-wear can get the best and most fashionable goods at S. White's, George street, near Simcoe. Mr. is selling out a handsome stock for what it will bring. 29-tf

Being Removed.—The old building belonging to Mr. D. G. Hatton, originally erected as a distillery, is being torn down for the purpose of utilizing the timber in the erection of a storehouse. It had waited a long time for a sign of the "boom."

Cloth House.—A license has been taken out in connection with Mr. Turver's Cloth House, and a very neat and tasty bar is now available for those who choose to be supplied with the choicest of liquors and cigars, at moderate prices and with the best of attendance. Comfort, quietude and satisfaction are guaranteed. 29-3ins

Midland Railway.—Traffic receipts for week ending July 31st, 1880, were: Passengers and mails, $5,783.19; freight, $6,788.37; total for week, $11,120.56. For corresponding week in 1879.—Passengers and mails, $3,459.37; freight, $5,494.94; total for week, $7,954.31; increase, $3,265.25. Aggregate from 1st of January, 1880, $162,856.25. Increase over 1879, $45,735.67.

A Golden Opportunity should never be neglected—therefore those requiring cheap, comfortable and durable wear for their feet should not fail to examine Mr. W. J. Larmour' stock, previous to the closing of his great clearing sale of imported and ready-made work. Remember the stock is all new and this season's goods, and is being offered at prices much below the present ruling wholesale figures. 29-tf

The Collectorship.—The Town Council will meet on the 23rd instant, when the question of appointing a Collector will be brought up for consideration. The cow by-law will also be dealt with, and we hope in a manner that will afford relief to those who have been suffering from the depredations of these marauders, and encouragement to those who are trying to ornament the streets with shade trees.

Fire.—The clanger of the fire bell disturbed the stillness of Sunday evening last, and the Brigade were promptly on hand, and ran the engine and hose in the direction of the fire, to the location of the last tank, near Mr. Spry's, but the fire being half a mile distant still, nothing could be done. The house burned was that of Mr. Wm. Robinson, of Eagleshawn, and was a total loss. There was an insurance on house of $800, and furniture $150, in the Watertown Company.

New Facilities.—The EXAMINER office during the past week has added to the superior facilities it possesses for first-class printing, a large addition of material comprising all the latest novelties in type and other material. Among them are new fonts of wood type for posters, from Scotland, lines for programmes, cards, bill-heads, circulars, etc., and the latest novelty in type for visiting cards—cannot be distinguished from copper-plate engraving. Those who have occasion to get printing done are requested to call and examine late samples of work. We guarantee promptitude, satisfactory execution, and fair prices.

Good News.—No more Chills and Ague in this section. Our Druggists are selling an article called "AGUE CONQUEROR." It is about the only satisfactory preparation sold for the cure of Fever and Ague, Dumb Chills, Intermittent or Bilious Fevers. The Proprietor of the AGUE CONQUEROR has used but little energy to make this medicine known, and yet its sale is immense in Ague Districts. It purifies the blood, Liver, and other Secretory Organs so effectually that the Chills do not return even where persons have had them for years. Entirely vegetable preparation. Price, 50 cents and $1.00 per Bottle. Two doses will stop the chill. 29-13ins Bowdyism.—A fight was indulged in on Monday afternoon between two men named Donoghue and Cardiff, in the lane next Mr Roddy's Hotel. Cardiff afterwards came out on the sidewalk, where a crowd was collected, and with language of the vilest description, expressed his ability to take his late opponent up by the nape and mop the sidewalk with him. Constable McGhee was perceived in the distance, when the valorous Cardiff suddenly ceased his eloquence and disappeared up the opposite lane with remarkable celerity. Subsequently he returned and entered the hotel, and was ejected by Mr Roddy. He went out on the street and picked up a boulder with which he entered the house, threatening the proprietor, who laid him out with a blackthorn before he had time to carry his intentions into execution. He was revived with an application of cold water, and went his way.

Lacrosse Match—Bowmanville vs Peterborough.—The grand lacrosse match between the Excelsiors of Bowmanville and the Peterboroughs of this town took place on Friday last, when there was a fair attendance of spectators on the grounds, and the usual number of outside dead-heads at the various elevated positions of advantage in the neighborhood. The teams were composed as follows:—Bowmanville: J. Archibald, Field Captain; N. Muir, Goal; A. King, Point; R. Moses, Cover do; J. Gray and J. Jones, Defence Field; W. Dustin and J Jolliffe, Inside Home; A Henderson and H. Matthews, Home Field; G. —, Centre Field; J. Pathick, Outside Home; J. Scidder, Home; Geo. Wylie and Geo. Buxton, Umpires. Peterborough: John Hackett, Field Captain; W. Sanderson; Goal; W. Redfern, Point; J. Carbery, Cover Point; J. Jeral, Defence Field; C. Lebrun, do; M. Halpin do; J. Sheehey, Centre Field; P. Carbery, do; W. Morrow, Home Field; M. McDonald, do; H Phelan, Home; R. Fertye, do; S. W. English and J. G. McDonald, Umpires. Mr. P. O'Hara of Toronto acted as Referee, and the first game was opened in good form and lively contest. King, Moses and Muir, doing good work for the visiting club, who were kept on the defensive until their goal was finally passed, by a fine throw by R. Phelan. Fertye, Sheehey and Jeral, all played well, Halpin well on the side of the Peterborough boys in this and the succeeding games which were won by the home club, the second in eleven minutes and the third in seven minutes, notwithstanding that the Bowmanville Club had been strengthened by three members from Cobourg. The game was unfortunately contested throughout, and the result is only another evidence of the superior prowess of the Peterborough boys. Their next game is the return match with the Millbrook club and it is not unlikely a challenge match will afterwards take place with Toronto.

Bowmanville Matches.—The Bowmanville Cricket Club will play here on the cricket ground, Lakefield, on Monday next, commencing at 1 p. m.

Personal.—Mr. W. O'Beirne of the Lindsay Post, gave us a call yesterday.

For the Seaside.—Dr. George Burnham jr. and family left on Monday evening to spend a few weeks at Murray Bay.

Births, Deaths and Marriages.—The number of registrations in the month of July was as follows:—Births, 19; marriages, 2; deaths, 2.

Police Court.—There were thirty-four cases tried in the Police Court in the month of July, and the revenue from fines and costs amounted to $91.25.

Looking for Reinforcements.—Two non-commissioned officers of the 57th Regiment, now at Halifax, are in town, it is said, on the lookout for deserters.

Medical Speciality.—J. D. Stewart, M.D., Coroner and Accoucheur to the Cobourg Lying-in Hospital, from Monday 23rd August, until Monday September 6th. 29-2

The Grand Junction.—A party of men were conveyed to Hastings on Monday to fill in the approaches to the bridge at that place, preparatory to track-laying.

The Hotel at Burleigh Falls.—The Burleigh Falls Hotel, for some time past kept by Mr. Thos. Davey, has passed into the hands of Mr. John Holmes, formerly of Lakefield.

Police Magistrates.—Mr. W. J. Longmore was in town a few days ago with his constituent, Mr. Hayes. An inspection of the gaol was made and the return has not yet been received.

Recovering.—Mr. James Martin, who has been seriously ill for a long time, has sufficiently regained his health to be about. He left yesterday to try what the fresh air of Burleigh would effect for him.

Shipment of Horses.—Messrs Walsh and Singleton have shipped forty-six horses purchased in the vicinity of Peterborough, to Mr. Ellis, of Boston. They averaged $91.30 laid down at Port Hope, and comprised some very fine animals.

Police Court Notes.—On Thursday a man named Geo. Dunbar was fined $2 for using grossly insulting language to Constable Lovesee on the Otonabee bridge.—The Dawson liquor selling case received another remand.

Rag Baby Shooting.—On Thursday evening last Mr. Griffin, of rag money celebrity, was announced to address a meeting in the Town Hall. Mr. Griffin was on hand, but the meeting didn't turn up, and the lecturer had to bottle up his eloquence for a more favorable opportunity.

An Abominable Crossing.—The stone crossings at the corners of Simcoe and George street, are a decided nuisance in summer and a danger to life and limb in winter. Could not the Street and Bridge Committee be induced to take up the stone, to be used for other purposes, and put down a sensible wooden crossing?

Brutal Act.—On Wednesday evening a young cow belonging to Mr. John Brown, undertaker, came home on three legs, one of the hind legs having been broken near the hip, apparently by a stone, thrown by some person unknown. Whoever it was, was guilty of an act of most wanton barbarity.

Off for the North-West.—Mr. T. B. Clementi, C. E., having received instructions from the Government to make a survey for settlement of eight townships, about 20 miles north of Fort Ellice, has made up his party and leaves to-day for the North-West. He takes with him from town Messrs. R. Cooke, A. Cooke and Hoyland.

Educational.—We are pleased to be able to announce this week that Miss M. Benson and Mr. R. Junkin, of the Peterborough Collegiate Institute have been successful in obtaining First Class Certificates at the late examinations in Toronto. We hope to be able to give, next week, full particulars of the results of the Intermediate Examinations.

Cricket.—A game of cricket was played on Monday, at Cobourg, between the junior clubs of Peterborough and Cobourg. The result proved disastrous to the Northerners, as the following will show. Peterborough, 1st innings, 45; Cobourg, 126, of which Kerr made 76 and not out. Rain prevented the match being finished.

Street Improvement.—For some time past since the wash-out in front of Mr. Leah's store, on George street, the sidewalk has been in rather a precarious condition. In order to prevent the flooding of the cellar of the building, a stone retaining wall has been built on the street side of the excavation in front of the cellar, and the sidewalk is being put in proper condition.

Floating Party.—Under the guidance of a veteran sport, ex-Councillor, the Mayor, Town Clerk, Finance Minister, and some other prominent gentlemen spent the Civic Holiday near Campbellstown, on a fishing expedition. They caught a goodly number of bass and maskinonge, several coils, and got caught in the rain, returning well satisfied with the sport.

Grand Regatta at Midland.—The enterprising people of Midland City have arranged for a grand regatta on Midland Harbor, at which $1,600 in prizes will be given. The Midland Railway and Mr. Calcutt offer the best inducements to excursionists ever before given. Return tickets good for three days are given at $1.50 from Port Hope, Peterborough, Whitby and all intermediate [illegible]. Excursionists from points there to Brechin; 50c. from stations from there to Waubashene; 25c. thence to Old Fort. Return tickets are offered from Hastings by Calcutt's line of steamers good for $1.75; Keene and Harwood, $1.25. These very low rates ought to turn up a monster crowd at the regatta.

THE CIVIC HOLIDAY.

Jupiter Pluvius puts a Damper on the Proceedings.

Monday last having been set apart by proclamation of His Worship the Mayor as a Civic Holiday, was observed throughout the town as such, by an almost total suspension of business, which with the absence of crowds and bustle from the streets gave the place anything but a holiday aspect. At 7 o'clock the steamer Golden-Eye left the wharf, with a large party on board, for the Myl-Wild pic-nic of the O. Y. B. and T. B., and after the dispersion of the crowd which had gathered to see them off, scarcely a soul was to be seen on the streets till 10 o'clock, when took up their stand at the Post Office corner, and soon attracted a large gathering of listeners to the programme of admirable music with which they favored the citizens. Although the Band was several pieces short, they rendered a number of choice selections in a manner which elicited the warmest encomiums from those present. The effect of the new instruments recently procured from Paris was discernible even to the unprofessional ear, and will no doubt prove a valuable acquisition.

PIC-NIC AT WALLIS' GROVE.

Arrangements had been made for a grand pic-nic at Wallis' Grove under the auspices of the Emerald Dramatic Association, for which an excellent programme had been prepared, and a capital list of prizes were offered. Most of those who remained to enjoy the holiday in town, were looking forward to a most enjoyable afternoon, when the Clerk of the Weather interposed with a storm of rain, just at the hour in which movement began to the grounds, driving many on their way out home again, and making it dangely unpleasant for those who had reached the grounds before the downpour. The rain continued during the greater part of the afternoon, and it soon became evident that dancing on the grounds or agreeonderer with the sports and games was out of the question, and the majority of the crowd left for town. It is greatly to be regretted that the weather should have proved so unacquicious, after the care and trouble taken by the Committee to make the pic-nic a success, as it would undoubtedly have been but for the untoward conduct of the weather.

Those who remained at the grove after the rain started, on its clearing up towards evening carried out the programme of sports with the following results:—Half mile race, Cunningham; Running high jump—J. McNamara; running hop, step and jump—P. Redfern; running broad jump.—P. Redfern; putting heavy weight. F.W. O'Brien; standing back jump.—D. Donoghue; standing broad jump.—D. Donoghue; three-legged race.—J. Coughlan and W. Redfern; mile walking match, T. Monaghan; mile race.—M. Aird; boys' race.—T. McGinnity; Irish jig—James Beach and Miss M. Keenan; clog dance.—M. Tierney; tug of war —won by O'Connell's side; quoit match.—John Ross first, J. Coughlan second.

SUPER CONFIRMATION

was, however, effected in the evening by the ball in Bradburn's Hall, which was the concluding attraction of the day's programme. The hall was tastefully decorated and opened off with the most unqualified success, dancing being kept up with vigor and zest during the greater portion of the night, or rather, we should say, until well on in the morning, those present being evidently bent on having enjoyment for the disappointment of the afternoon, on account of which they appeared to succeed to their heart's content. The following were the Committee of Management:—Wm. Hedley, President; F. J. McKeown, Secy-Treas.; D. Donoghue, J. Callaghan, W. Redfern, J. Donoghue, P. Redfern, M. Tierney and T. Davis.

PIC-NIC RESORTED TO BY MYL-WILD.

About one hundred and fifty went down on the pic-nic of the O. Y. B. and T. S. to Myl-Wild, whose a pleasant day was passed. Owing to the rain the public spanktacle had to be dispensed with, but quite an enjoyable scene of jostling in the time were found. The Golden-Eye brought the party home at an early hour.

Peterborough Carmen.

The Toronto Mail gives the following account of the famous race in the Toronto regatta of Wednesday of last week, in which the Peterborough Club took part and created place:

"The senior four-oars was the general event of the day, and for months the members of the Argonaut, Toronto, Peterborough, Lachine and Ottawa Rowing Clubs, Centennial, Hamilton, Victoria, Kingston, Quebec, Metropolitan, Granite, Credit Valley, Royal City, Brock and Dominion clubs, all of whom had entered, were in daily practice. The Argonauts were a clean cut, handsome looking crew, and the Ottawas came on the ground in the same dress. The three boats crowded up at the start, but up to the mile and a half stake they were very close together, the Argonauts, Peterborough and Ottawa leading in the order named. At this point the Argonauts began to spurt in the Peterborough style, and soon had a length of the Peterboroughs, who, in their turn, began to spurt in the Ottawa style, and soon had a length of the Ottawas. The Argonauts, who were in the front shortly after passing the mile and a half stake, were rowing a steady, easy stroke, and were evidently not distressed in the least. They were pulling 31 to the minute, while the Peterboroughs were pulling 34 to the minute, and the Ottawas 36. The Argonauts were the first to get to the home stake, but the Peterboroughs were not far behind, and the Ottawas were not much behind them. The Argonauts were necessary to put on an extra effort to keep the lead, which they did, and the Peterboroughs and Ottawas were unable to respond. It was a splendid race from start to finish, and elicited the admiration of thousands. Of Mead's wherry the Argonauts pulled at 31 to the minute to a splendid finish. Still pulling 31 the Peterboroughs stuck to them until reaching Hanlan's point, when they began to spurt in the style of the Peterboroughs, being then about a length behind. The Ottawas, being then about a length behind, were well in front of the Mead Stake, when the heavy frames showed signs with their unusually powerful crews to get to the front. These crews had been training for months, and the Argonauts drew away until the finish, when the line four lengths ahead of their nearest rivals in 9.11 1-4. The Peterboroughs followed second in 9.20 1-4. Between the Ottawas and Victorias a splendid race took place for third position, but the men from the capital, who surprised everybody by their manner of pulling, arrived to maintain their place and crossed the line a length or so in front of the Mead Stake, when were fourth, with the Ottawas and Royal City crews were fifth and sixth respectively.

The four-oared race; prize, a $600 challenge cup and four medals presented by the Association for the first: four cups for the second.

Each of the four-oared crew receive a beautiful silver tankard of appropriate design, and elegant medals, both bearing inscriptions recording second place in the regatta of 1880. These are elegant and valuable souvenirs of a race of a race of which the crew have no reason to be ashamed.

THE LACHINE CUP.

On Saturday the Club rowed at Lachine, near Montreal. The Argonauts did not come to time, as was expected, and Peterboroughs won as they pleased over the Lachine crew.

The Peterborough crew arrived home on Monday evening, bringing with them the Lachine Cup, a magnificent trophy of the English pattern, a huge silver tankard, handsomely chased, mounted on an ebony pedestal, with four carsmen in costume, each holding an oar surrounding the base of the cup. It has to be won three times in succession, and the Peterboroughs hold it till the next contest.

NOTES.

On Monday the regatta at Barrie will take place. The four-oared cup, which has to be won twice in succession, having been last year won by Peterborough. It is not yet decided whether the Peterboroughs will row this year in this contest or not.

A number of Peterborough gentlemen are anxious to secure a trial of skill and strength between the four-oared crews of the Argonaut and Peterborough Clubs, on a long race, say three or five miles. They propose to put up four cups of $125 each, to be the property of members of the winning crew. The Argonauts are being communicated with, with a view of ascertaining if such a race could be arranged.

At a meeting of the Rowing Club held on Tuesday evening, resolutions were passed, acknowledging the courtesies received by representatives of the Club at the hands of the Argonauts, of Toronto, and the Lachine Club, of Lachine; [illegible] Railway and Grand Trunk Railways. The four-oared crew were congratulated upon the trophies they had returned home with, and a Committee appointed to make arrangements for a regatta here about the 1st of September.

We learn from the returned team that the Mail's account is quite incorrect. The Peterboroughs [illegible] time had the lead. Just at the moment the start was made the starter called "Back up, Peterborough," and the gun was fired while two oars were backing water. The Argonauts took the water together, and while the Peterborough crew were getting into form, recovering from the disadvantage with which they started, the Argonauts drew away. The latter won by 2½ boat lengths, not four, or about 30 yards on 2,000. The Argonauts had a vastly superior boat, but our scullers admit that they could beat them on a short race. They are willing to try them, however, on a three or five mile race.

Civic Excursion to Myl-Wild.—On Monday last the Town Council, Harbor Commissioners, civic officials, and a number of the most prominent citizens of Port Hope, paid a holiday excursion to Myl-Wild, where they spent a pleasant day, expressing themselves highly pleased with the improved condition presented by the Island, and the facilities presented for comfort and enjoyment.

Removal of Business.—The Fenelon Falls Gazette says:—"A few days ago, the business agent of the Toronto Bank visited the village for the purpose of seeing whether a good site could be obtained for the large sawmill built at Harwood, on Rice Lake, by Messrs. Ledgere & McDonnell, but which is now the property of the said Bank, and is to be removed to a more suitable location. The recent revival in the lumber trade has determined the owners to utilize the mill, which has been idle for upwards of two years, and as it is far from its timber limits that the logs cannot be got to it in time to ship the lumber the year it is cut, and as it is impossible to move the limits nearer to the mill, the mill is to be carefully taken down and transported to some point a good deal nearer the limits than it is at present." The mill was formerly located at this place, but the old one destroyed by fire was rebuilt at Harwood, on account of the exorbitant charges asked by the old management of the Midland Railway for the movement of lumber. Under present conditions, however, the Midland has adopted a more liberal policy towards the lumber trade, and we hope it may be found more advantageous to return the mill to Peterborough, shipping lumber by the Midland to Port Hope.

Rideau Church.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER.

SIR,—I should not have troubled you with any further communication on this subject, but for the appearance in last week's paper of a letter signed by Rev. M. Clark. The Rev. gentleman appears to think that it would have been better if I had waited till better informed, in which case he thinks I would have let the Review scribe's remarks pass unnoticed. I think Mr. Clark would have shown to better advantage had he not been in such haste to show his sympathy with, and anxiety to justify the correspondent in the statements put forward by him. Had the Review correspondent confined himself to saying that certain improvements had been made, and that some parties thought it was to be a Union Church, I should not have noticed it, as that was the case. But he goes on to deliberately impute wrong-doing, intimating what the Bible Christians had by some trick taken possession of a building for themselves, which was designed as a Union Church by the builders. I deny this imputation entirely and emphatically. On the 18th day of February 1878 the land on which the church is built was deeded to five Trustees, members of the Bible Christian church, the deed being drawn on the model deed form of the said church. And further I was informed at the time the corner stone was laid, that the deed was there and then publicly read. Where is the flaw! If any person was asked for a subscription on the representation that it was to be a union church, whether that party gave a subscription or not, it was wrong, and with the party making the representation the wrong must rest; and not on the Bible Christian church. Mr. Clark has not preached in the church for over a year; but I am in a position to say, if he had asked for the privilege to do so, or if any person had done so for him, it would have been willingly granted; while I am a member of the Bible Christian church, and trustee of that particular church, and believe no church can be successfully carried on on the union principle, yet I believe in cultivating a union feeling with all Christian denominations. Though we claim the said church, rightly too, yet I trust while I have anything to say in the management of it, that that spirit of liberality and unity, will ever be shown, that will have a tendency to alloy any little feeling that may have existed, and be the means of accomplishing the largest amount of good.

I am yours,

ONE WHO KNOWS.

Lakefield.:

(From Our own Correspondent.)

Last Friday evening a number of the members of Court Lakefield, C. O. F. went down to Peterboro receiving a warm welcome from the Peterboro brethren by whom they were most hospitably entertained, a pleasant evening was spent and the invitations to some again will no doubt be often accepted.

The Commissioners appointed to equalize the School rate between that part of School section No. 10 in the township of Douro and the village of Lakefield, met in Mr. Casement's office on Monday evening, Mr. W. J. Bullock representing Douro, W. C. Casement Lakefield and Mr. J. C. Brown School Inspector, being the third, after some discussion they agreed to the rate of Lakefield, 90 cts; Douro, 20 cts on the $. Mr. Casement dessenting. It will thus be seen Douro will save another $45.00 and the village ratepayers pay it.

A village constable was appointed some time ago to look after the enforcement of the village by-laws, and from all accounts we were to have a new order of things instituted, but like others he does not believe in working for nothing, so horses and pigs roam the streets of their own free will. Again the status against Canadian Thistles is not enforced and some lots are a disgrace to the village. Why does not our Council wake up and compel their by-laws to be enforced or else give over the farce of enacting them.

Our Constables made another raid last week up into Burleigh after young Spencer but failed to capture him. Hearing that Constable Cochrane was to be sent up he came down on Tuesday and surrendered himself to Constable Hull. He will receive his trial before T. J. Nelson J. P.

COUNCIL MEETING.—The village council held their regular meeting in the Council Chamber on Tuesday the 9th inst. Present Councillors Gerbutt in the chair, Nelson, Horner and McWilliams. Minutes of former and special meetings read on motion adopted. A petition requesting the Council to move a vote of sympathy to Messrs. Ross & Co. on their late loss by fire, and that in the event of their rebuilding the Council do grant them exemption from taxes for five years, was presented, signed by Geo. Cocks and 37 others, which on motion was received. The Reeve entered and took the chair. Moved by Councillor Nelson seconded by Mr. McWilliams that the petition of Mr. Geo. Cochrane and others be received and adopted and the Reeve be and is hereby requested and authorized to write to J. Ross Esq., expressing to him the hearty sympathy of the Council and village with him in his recent heavy loss by the burning of the steamer Chippewa and steam saw mill.—Carried Moved by Councillor McWilliams seconded by Councillor Garbutt that the following accounts be paid, Isaac Watson, $19,25; John Cox, $10,50; Charles Grills, $10.00; J. C. Carruth, $5.00; Wm. Hamilton, $1,50; Toker & Co. Printing, 11,97; J. Griffen, Repairing fire engines, $15,47, Total $73,69. The report of the Licence Commissioners was on motion received. Moved by Councillor McWilliams, seconded by Councillor Garbutt that the Council do now adjourn to the call of the Reeve.—Carried.

Rice Lake News.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

LUMBER.—There is a regular "boom" here just now in the log business. Messrs. Ullyott, Saddler & Co., are turning out the lumber very fast, and have already commenced to ship to the other side. I believe this mill alone will cut ten million feet this summer.

FESTIVE SOLONS.—The Mayor, Council and Harbor Commissioners and friends, of Port Hope, "excorted" on Monday last to Rice Lake, driving to Bewdley, and there taking the steamer Foley to various points of interest on the lake. Refreshing the inner man with dinner at the Brady House, the party enjoyed themselves immensely, letting official dignity slide for the occasion, and unbending themselves to the pleasures of fishing, boating and indulging in soft drinks, truly delightful to behold in men so engrossed generally with public and private cares.

CAMPING PARTIES.—Year by year there is a rapid growth in the numbers of people who seek the solace and sport afforded by a return to a more natural mode of living such as camping affords. We Canadians have been long reproached, and with too good reason, for refusing to enjoy life as we travel along, but I am glad to say that is becoming less applicable to us every year as the rapidly increasing number of cheap trips by rail and water attests. For those who can afford the time and see not averse to roughing it a little, a week or ten days spent on some of our lakes offers such pleasures as cannot be notoally experienced to be understood, and once enjoyed are a continually recurring temptation every summer. Rice Lake has long been a favorite resort for Americans as well as Canadians, though not as widely known yet as its merits deserve, and this year more than ever before its many islands have been dotted with the white tents of camers after health, comfort and amusement. A large party from Port Hope, under the management of Dr. Powers and Mr. G. M. Furby, are now located at Lee's Point. They occupy no less than seven tents, have a house for cooking in, and after gather their arrangements in this very complete department of life are as complete as the most fastidious could desire. Another party from Millbrook with friends from Toronto are encamped on Scott's Island. They are also well provided, and enjoy their stay on the lake as much as any. Their scene would do no discredit to a first-class hotel. Dr. Geo. Hodgins, Deputy Minister of Education, spent several days in camp with this party. I must not omit to mention the "Skylark" party under the experienced guidance of Mr. H. Hagar, of Cobourg, with Mrs. MacLeod of Bowmanville, and Mrs Scott of Cobourg as chaperons. The party is noticeable because of the "nobby" sailor costumes they wear, and the ladies are apparently as much attended to the water as real tars, while the gentlemen prefer something just a little stronger. Mr. S. S. Wanamaker of Bewdley, and Mr. H. K. Wanamaker of New York, were camped several days at Fothergill's Point, and did some big feats in the fishing line. Many other small parties, are also out for a few days sport and at night the spectacle of camp fires blazing on so many points forms a most pleasing sight.

Garfield held a grand reception at Buffalo last night.

Nothing has been heard whatever lately about Mr. Bentley, the Brazilian Consul who seems has figured so prominently in connection with a line of subsidized steamers to ply between Montreal and the Brazilian ports in the summer and Halifax in the winter months. It was confidently asserted that the first steamer of the new line would leave Montreal in June. It is now the first of August, and nothing more tangible than the promise of a subsidy and of a line of steamers has come before the Board of Trade and Shippers of Montreal.

Mrs. Gorham makes a statement to the effect that she was led from the path of virtue by Rev. Mr. Handford, who afterwards deserted her, and in answer to her pleading, roughly asked her why she did not drown herself. Her allegations are made in writing, but the paper in its entirety is unfit for publication. The papers have all declined to publish the filthy confession of Mrs. Gorham, as they all believe it should not find its way into the columns of any paper to be read in the family. The people generally are sick of the Handford matter, and think there has been quite enough of it.

A Visit to Bobcaygeon.

For the EXAMINER.

O tourist, far-wandering, pray hast thou ere this
In all thy wide rambles to Muss on the scene
Romantic Bobcaygeon presents to the view
Of lovers of Nature, where elements true
Of much that is picturesque may delight you.
If roaming in quest of strange wonders to do
Or seek this isle of beauty, and gratified be.

Here rock, tree, and water, bewitchingly vie
With sometimes and grandeur to please Fancy's eye.
Relieving the glare of the fancy pav'd street
Luxuriously boasting a score or two feet.
An oasis fertile we here and there meet.
How refreshful the shadow of trees as we walk
O'er the soft grassy sward of the mow-beamed'd rock.

Now the wide circling lake's pure, cool limpid tide
Invitingly lures o'er their surface to glide;
Reclining we hasten with paddle or oar
And soon our brave skiff launches out from the shore.

Whose oven sheir'd banks surprises as more
Than th' entrancing lodges engirding the lake
And Rimestone edg'd mainland for many a mile.

After down the lakeway bow fleetly we float,
Smooth o'er the white-cone rides the safe little boat;
'Mong many a haven that here and there woos
Us with sweet attractions 'tis wild'ring to choose
A short resting-place, but some must refuse
This time, but some other may stay there and say
If they be what from appearance we took them to be.

Rested by the respite turn'd homeward again.
We list to the rippling wavelets low strains,
Or the wild plaintive chant of the whip-poor will down
In lonely ravine, while the bright golden-brown
Of departing sun-beams the tree tops doth crown;
Then gather some lillies, the sweetest we o'er
Have seen, for the last is the best ev'rywhere.

Or changing the pastime we leisurely rove
As suits our sweet will in the beautiful grove.
Now reading, now musing, time speeds fast away
In dreamy enchantments, while bland zephyrs play
'Mid the leafy wreath'd tow'r, where sun's scorching ray,
Unable, shall ne'er luminee the dark coppice
green.
And the 'arching blue' steams through the spray woven screen.

But here from the gifted and well-guitar'd mind
We likewise both pleasure and profit may find.
Surprise at the high-toned refinement met here
Is equall'd alone by the excellent cheer.
And true christian graces that in kind deeds appear Invigorated both body and mind must have been
Of guests in this house at Bobcaygeon we ween.

In beholding the rocks apt questions arise,
Are we sure that our hopes of a home in the sky
Are stay'd on the Rock which was smitten that so
The gift-covered soul may be washed white as snow
In this sin cleansing stream and eternal know!
Are we kid inside its chalta, so that when the sound
Of the trumpet be heard safe in Christ shall be found!

PETERBOROUGH, AUGUST 12, 1880.

MAY'S LOVERS.

CHAPTER I.

A long, straggling church was Bridford church—at least so said the rival parishioners of Longton-sum-Tidermarsh—a long, straggling, ugly church, with no redeeming point but its tower, which did not belong to it; and perhaps it somewhat deserved the abuse.

It was a one-naved church, this and skeletonless, bulk of brick, and covered with plaster; its hideous proportions set off by strong contrast with a magnificent tower of Kentish ragstone, containing a peal of bells which the whole county could only envy.

It stood however, in one of the prettiest spots in the neighbourhood. Green-fringed hills on every side; light-green shadows, with here and there a small, variegated copse, and and a patch or two of brown heather; a small, rippling stream running merrily through the pastures, and a line of dark firs to the church yard, to set off the opecre-looking tombstones, formed a picture, in which the trimly-kept walks and lawns of the Vicarage garden, skirting the churchyard wall, showed to the best advantage.

On the sunniest of June days May Trevor was leaning against the rustic bridge over the Vicarage lake, casting a few crumbs into the water.

'Don't come out, then, you sulky old thing!' she said. 'Don't come out if you don't want to. I never can get a sight of your scaly old back. Ugh! you little cormorants, like boys you are; always putting yourselves forward and gobbling up what's meant for your betters. Ugh!—get along! I've no patience with you.'

And May waved her hat over the water, and turned, laughingly, toward the house.

'And may I make so bold as to ask, Miss Trevor, where the boy ends and the man begins?' was asked, in a pleasing voice, from behind a clump of rhododendrons.

'Oh, Mr. Blake, are you there?—and did you really hear my nonsense?—and how did you come there?' asked the girl, confused, and blushing crimson.

'I was there; I did hear what you call your nonsense; and I came there by walking. Now, having disposed of your questions may I repeat mine?' And young Mr. Blake, the curate of some four or five months' standing, came forward and joined May Trevor. He was rather nice-looking—pale, with regular features; a mouth that looked as if it could cerl disagreeably on occasion; and eyes that seemed, when they looked at you, as if they were to read, and not to be read. They did not avoid your gaze, but were themselves passionless, cold, and unreadable—gleaming with a certain lustre—the lustre of highly polished metal, which, when you look earnestly into it, reveals your own lifeness.

'Certainly, Mr. Blake, you may, if——'

'Mr. Blake! why so?'

'Certainly, Ralph;' and the curate's eyes shone with proud triumph. 'A boy becomes a man when he puts away boyish things; and a man becomes a boy when he becomes an eavesdropper.

'You do me an injustice. I had been in your father's library, and having become rather weary, came out to look for recreation.'

'Well, and I hope you found your recreation Had it hidden itself inside the bush?' asked May, smiling.

'You won't hear me out. I was like yourself, having nothing better to do, looking for your wonderful fish. I heard you examine, and seeing that you were alone, determined to surprise you; and I think I did so,' said the curate, smiling in his turn.

'You did, indeed.'

'And pleasurably?' asked he, in a pleading voice, just raising his eyebrows.

'And pleasurably,' answered May, looking down. They walked on a few steps in silence across the lawn, when she said, 'By the bye, have you heard the news?'

'What news, May?'

'About Harry's coming home to-morrow?'

'Yes; I knew he'd coming down home for part of the long vacation from Oxford.'

'Yes; I expected, of course that you knew of that.' And then, in a very consciencestricken voice 'And I suppose you know as well that Gordon Dare is coming at the same time. He is going to stay at the 'Dragon.''

'It is like you to choose an occasion when there is a chance of happiness, to break in with something nicely calculated to make one utterly wretched.' And Blake looked loodly at May, who smiled unconcernedly.

'Dear me, Ralph,'—this with one of her sweetest smiles.—'I didn't mean to spoil an afternoon's enjoyment; on the contrary, I thought that you might be rather relieved to know that in future there would not be the same need to dance an irksome attendance. Gordon, I expect, will want to monopolize me rather; you see it's a long time now since he went away to sea.'

'May,' said the curate, his lips setting firmly, and his voice growing a little,—'May, do you mean this? Do you mean that you expect me to let matters be as they once were? Do you think that I am going to recognize as binding an engagement you made to a young schoolmanager before you could know your own mind?'

'You forget, Mr. Blake,' answered May, calmly, 'that I am engaged, to marry the young sea-jackanapes.''

'May,'—the curate's voice grew very earnest,—'have you not seen what must be the result of our meeting so often? Were you so ignorant of your own charms as to think that one could look upon them so much and remain unmoved? May, I ask you, for the first and last———'

'Is that you, Blake?'—and the vicar's portly body followed his voice out on to the lawn, on to which the young people had strayed. 'I'm glad that you are here. Mother Jeffries is much worse, and wants one of us to go up directly. I was just going to send to you; however, now there's no need. I don't want to go myself, as I have my sermon to prepare for Sunday.'

This was the Reverend John Trevor's stock excuse. Some of the parishioners were disrespectful enough to express that, considering the number of things put off in order that the sermons might be prepared, those discourses were not better than they were.

The curate, among whose faults that of inattention to duty was certainly not included, went on the visit at once, merely stopping to shake hands and raise his hat to May.

May began to wonder what the curate had been going to say, when to ponder over what he had already said; and, with her woman's curiosity unquenched, and her vanity not quite satiated, she thought of her triumph over the popular curate.

How she would have liked others to have seen her! What a commotion among the slipper-working community! What envy!

She looked very pretty as she walked with elastic step among the pretty flower beds. Her fair, golden hair was beautifully set off by the flush of triumph mantling in her cheeks.

The proud Ralph Blake at her feet! Another added to the long list of slavish adorers of her blue eyes, small equiline nose, rosy lips, and round, girlish face!

'And so he was in earnest, after all, was he? I wonder if I managed him well? I wonder which feature he likes the best?' And she pulled out a little pocket mirror to see how she looked. 'Poor Bobbie Cox used to rave about my hair; young Lavington about my eyes; Ecclestone, my dimples; while poor old sober-sides, Wakely, about what he called the 'general contour;' Gordon generally talks about my mouth.'

And that pretty little feature seemed capable of talking a great deal of very great nonsense Not a single thought did she bestow upon that proper pride which a man's real admiration always kindles in a true woman's heart; not a thought upon the havoc she had wrought, and would probably continue to work, in many men's lives.

The possible consequences of trifling with a determined man's affections never occurred to her.

Like the drunken crew of some pirate ship, she rejoiced in the triumphs of past successes and escapes, and gave no head to dangers ahead.

May hastily shut up the glass and put it back in her pocket, as a girl a year or to older than herself approached.

Grace Worleigh was just what one would have expected the vicar's daughter to be. She had been left an orphan in early life, and had been received into her uncle's household; had easily learned to undertake the cares of managing the Nicaragua; and, indeed, the parish as well.

The Vicar looked upon her as an elder daughter.

She had learned her duty well, and discharged it unswervingly.

Nothing could daunt her in her cares for the poor. No disease could frighten her; no rough reception dim her smile, no carelessness scare her. Her first thought was what she ought to do, and that once determined, she did it unflinchingly.

She soon overcame all hostility, and was everywhere welcome in the parish.

Hats were doffed and curtseys dropped; ill-natures quilled and brawling ceased: grief was soothed and tears dried; misery became more bearable; poverty, hunger and want less burdensome, wherever she went.

In a word, she was, in the highest sense, a true woman—a 'ministering angel.'

As she walked across the lawn, her figure looked splendid in the peculiar light of the June afternoon, and a smile was on her lips.

'Oh, May, dear, lend me your glass a moment. I have just come from the village and feel so untidy!'

May stood confessed; she pulled it out with a jerk, and said, 'I didn't expect you would take to one. Are you really going to look at yourself in a glass?'

'I am, really. Thank you, dear!'—reaching out her hand for it. 'I met that little rascal, Willie Patchett, and his mother, and nothing would content him but that I should kiss him.'

'Ugh! I can't think how you let such a little brutes kiss you; I couldn't,' said May, shrugging her shoulders.

'May, dearest,' remonstrated Grace, 'he is a cripple, you know, and it is the first time he has been out for many a month. Besides, his mother stood near, and I could not find it in my heart to appear to slight her. She has enough troubles of her own to make one wish to ease them, if possible, by a little kindness. Then, again, you know, you are not used to it as I am.'

'No; and not very likely to be, if I can help it. But then I don't want to be a parson's wife!' With the faintest feminine accent on the 'I.'

'It is not necessary to be a clergyman's wife to visit the poor and sick.'

'I suppose that's one of your little insinuating comprehensives. Well, I'm not above confessing that I don't think I am naturally adapted for visiting. I don't like dirty children and dirtier bowels.'

'Neither do I, dear; and for that very reason I try to get the poor people of the parish to be cleaner. Besides, I must look after the parish; I have done so so long.'

'Oh, yes; that's right enough. I should do the same as you if I were obliged to, like you; I am only very glad that I am not. And there, again, I've not neglected with my particular cant to view.'

'What has put you out, Ella?' said Grace, using a pet name to charm away the temper.

'I don't know; I feel upset.'

'Upset! At what?'

'Oh, I don't know! Don't bother me so! It's Gordon.'

'About Gordon! Why, what has poor Gordon done? He'll soon be able to answer for himself. Won't it be nice to have him back in the place again, although he only for a little while? He only stays a month this time, does he?'

'That's all, and I'm rather glad of it. I don't want him at all. He'll spoil everything when he comes.' And the grudging Nale honesty passed sweetly.

'Spoil everything! Poor Gordon! And what are his ringing laugh and jolly face going to spoil? No two, for he keeps us alive with it.'

'No; but he expects one to be so demure, and he keeps one away from everybody else and all to himself; and one can't do anything that's jolly. I mean—I mean—one mustn't talk to any one but him.' And she looked up with a half-frightened expression at her cousin.

'You mean he is a little inclined to be jealous. But then, May, you know how much he loves you; and think how little he is at home! Isn't it natural that he should like to have you always close to him? The love of a nature like his is not to be had for the mere asking, Ella, and when gained is well worth the keeping. Don't you care to be near him, then, when he is at home?'

Grace asked this seriously, after a pause.

'Of course I do, Grace; you don't understand what I mean. Nobody ever can understand me, I do believe. Of course I like to have him near me. I declare I have often felt terribly jealous when I have seen him talking to some other girl, although I know that he loves me, and all that. But then I sometimes like to speak to other fellows without being frowned at so. You know when a fuss he made at the Crofton's croquet party, because Henry Crofton wanted to show me some hothouse flowers in their large conservatory.'

'You know, Ella, that uncle said Gordon was quite right to tell you he didn't like it.'

'It's very peculiar why you should always take his part so. If he were Mr. Blake I shouldn't be so much surprised. It's a pity Gordon didn't take orders. What a favorite he would have been!'

'Why call Mr. Blake's name into the discussion? I don't think the two men can be compared in any respect.'

'I don't suppose you do! I only wish that Gordon were a little more like Ral——Mr. Blake. He wouldn't tyrannize so much over me in so many things!'

'You mistake, Ella. Your lover is a much gentler man than Mr. Blake. If you had seen as much as I have of him, you would know him better!'

'I don't think so, then; I like Mr. Blake; so there, now!'

'That reminds me, I had nearly forgotten; he is coming back here to have a cup of tea after he leaves Mr. Jennings; so I must go in and get things ready. Are you coming, Ella?'

'Not directly, Gracie; I want to pick a flower or two for my hair; I shall be in soon. Call me when tea's ready, if I'm not in before.'

And Grace turned away to go in, wondering whether May had really meant what she had said about being sorry to meet Gordon.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

The experience of the manufacturers of the "Myrtle Navy" tobacco is a valuable lesson in political economy. Previous to their commencing that brand, the tobacco made of the finest Virginia leaf, was always held at fancy prices, and put up in some fancy style of manufacture. It was thought that only the rich would buy such tobacco, and at the old prices none but the rich could buy it. The makers of the "Myrtle Navy" resolved to strip the manufacture of the tobacco of all its fancy costs and put their profit at so low a rate that no competitor could possibly undersell them with the same quality of article. From the very first, until now, their rate of profit has been a uniform percentage upon the cost. It is their enormous sales which make their low rate of profit a satisfactory one in the aggregate, and also gives them their firm hold upon the market. Their success is an excellent lesson for manufacturers to study over.

PETITT'S EYE-SALVE.

An Infallible Remedy for all Diseases of the Eye (acute or chronic), Granulation of the Lids, Ulcerations of the Lachrymal Glands, Piles, and Weakness of the Vision from any cause.

The American Eye-Salve is presented to the public with the assurance of its efficiency as a curative of most diseases of the eye, acute or chronic inflamation, whether induced by scrofulous origin or otherwise, weakness or defect of vision, diminished tone of the optive nerve, or a diseased state of the tissues constituting that organ. Also, for all persons whose vocation requires an incessant action of the eyes, the salve will act as a charm in restoring a uniform healthy action, where weakness, pain, and misery may have been long threatened with a fatal termination. It is the most simple, safe and effectual remedy ever discovered. The materials of which it is made are pure, perfect, and costly, compounded with elaborate care and exactness, safe in its application, being used externally, and, of course, avoiding the pain and danger which necessarily attends the introduction of caustic minerals and eye-washes. Bisgworm and old Chronic Sores, of scrofulous origin, or resulting from whatever cause, yield to the American Eye-Salve. IT IS DEBILITATE-CRESFULLY FOR PILES. Its soothing effect is immediate, and a permanent cure requires but a few applications. The proprietors of Dr. J. P. Petitt's American Eye-Salve' while making new and improved machinery forwarding a new, perfect box for the Eye-Salve, have changed the Trade Mark on the cover so as to correspond with the Out on the Wrapper, Circulars, advertisements, etc. We call attention to this, as it might otherwise be regarded as counterfeiting.

Not the slightest Affinity

exists between the numberless cough mixtures with which the market is flooded and that successful preparation—Northrop and Lyman's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda. It stands alone, distinct, is like itself and nothing else. It embodies the best results of advanced pharmaceutical science. It accomplishes positive decisive results, effectually relieving coughs (when the lungs are not tuberculous or hopelessly affected), colds, laryngitis, and diseases of a scrofulous origin. While it does not cure consumption, it is the most reliable means of defence against the dreaded scurge. The invigorating properties of the hypophosphites reimburse the system debilitated by the constant tear and wear of a cough, while the paroxysms rapidly diminish in violence, in consequence of the soothing, emollient action of the cod liver oil on the inflamed lung membrane. The phosphorous, lime and soda, in combination with it, are all natural components in the construction of the bodily edifice, which, in a state of decay, lacks a sufficiency of the elements. Thus the hypophosphites supply, increasing the nutritive properties of the blood, and building up and rehabilitating the tottering human structure with a degree of promptitude as astonishing as it is gratifying to the invalid. A perceptible gain in flesh as well as in strength is one of the consequences of using this standard preparation, which both these and experiance have demonstrated to be fully worthy of the confidence reposed in it. Prepared by Northrop & Lyman, Toronto, and sold by all druggists.

Joy Among the Children.

Cotlare's Sweet Caster Oil, equally suitable for children and adults. Endorsed by over 600 doctors in Canada.

The difficulty of administrating nauseous medicines, and the desirability of having the pleasant to the taste, induced T. Copland to undertake the researches which resulted in the discovery of a Sweet Castor Oil, perfectly palatable, of the same strength and medical qualities as the ordinary Castor Oil, and while equally safe and harmless, yet acting with more certainty, and rendering mother nature not gripping. Some children say it is honey; others call it syrup—they all say they like it. One parent says—"My children drink it like water," another—"We had to hide the bottle or they would have finished it right off;" another—"My little girl has taken it twice without any trouble, and does not know what it is, though she hates the ordinary Castor Oil, and we could never get her to take it without a fight;" yet another—"I wish you success of your Sweet Castor Oil; it is a splendid thing—sure to take the place of all the common oil."

The extraordinary demand for this improvement on a simple household medicine has brought fraudulent imitations into the market, but the public can guard themselves against imposition which impoverished parties are attempting to sell on the reputation of this article by using that of the "Copland's Sweet Castors Oil, is on both the wrapper and direction label.

The undersigned having purchased Messrs. T. Copland & Co's interest in the above preparation, are now manufacturing it from the original recipe. Sherbourne St., Toronto.

PETERBOROUGH, AUGUST 19, 1880.

ELECTION TAFFY.

It would appear from despatches received from London, that after six weeks' negotiations with the English capitalists, the three Canadian Ministers aided by the Resident Ambassador and his Military Attache, have so far succeeded in their mission as to have induced some English gentlemen to take the negotiations off their hands, and are about to return leaving the question of the Pacific Railway in about the same shape as when they started on their excursion. Some of the Conservative journals, the Review among the number, have rushed wildly to the conclusion that the mission has been in every respect a successful one, and are quite liberal in their abuse of the Globe and other journals, for daring to express the opposite opinion. It is significant, however, that the Mail takes little share in these premature triumphal demonstrations. No doubt it is better informed and knows very well that it will be time enough to whistle when its patrons get out of the bush. That Sir John has most emphatically failed, is a fact patent on the face of the circumstances which attend his departure from England. Before he left Canada he told the public that the English capitalists were waiting, ready, eager and anxious to take this work off the hands of the Government, for the sake of "the certain fortune" which the lands would afford them. Yet after a nearly three months of a stay in England the aforesaid capitalists have not made themselves manifest, and the Premier has to return with the humiliating reflection that he has nothing better to present to his colleagues than the mortifying comparison between stern facts and the exuberant imaginations with which he regaled them previous to his departure. All Canada would rejoice, if without creating too great a land monopoly, without locking up the lands of the North-west in a manner to discourage settlement, this burden on the national back could be removed; but we fear that the prospect is not calculated to reassure those who looked forward with dread and dismay to the enormous load of debt and taxation which it is proposed to lay upon four millions of people. Had Sir John taken Mr. Blake's advice and expended the $10,000,000 which are being wasted in British Columbia mountains, in pushing the railway westward from Winnipeg he would have saved himself much tribulation and the country much difficulty. The fact is, that though Sir John is away from home, he is not unaware that there are important elections pending in Ontario, and these ambiguous telegrams, from which the Review implies so much, are merely intended to hoodwink the good people of West Toronto and North Ontario.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

THE CONTEST in West Toronto is now at fever heat, and the Mail, following its policy laid down after the general elections last year, is pursuing the Reform candidate because he happens to be an Irish Catholic, and seeking to stir up sectional and religious animosities against him on that account. It is to be hoped these disgraceful tactics will be crowned with the defeat they deserve at the hands of a liberal and tolerant people.

ELSEWHERE will be found an account of a melancholy fatal accident at Stu geon Point, in which Mr. Robert Wilkes, ex-M.P., lost his life, with his two children. In Mr. Wilkes Toronto loses one of its ablest and most public spirited citizens, and the Reform party a supporter of great activity and influence.

In its 148 pages will be found a large quantity of useful information relating to the Countries of the World, embellished with 45 Colored Maps and 210 Illustrations. It will be on sale at the Bookstores. Price $1.50

Wm. Boyes, London, Ont., is the publisher of two very interesting little works which have been laid on our table, one entitled "Choice New Selections for Autograph Albums," and the other "Chesterfield's Letter-writer and Book of Etiquette." The former supplies a want long felt, and the latter contains the pith of all all former publications, together with many new and valuable hints and should be in the hands of everyone. No doubt they will meet with a ready sale.

We have received from W. Warwick & Son, Toronto, the Canadian editions of the Boy's Own Paper, Sunday at Home, Leisure Hour, and Girl's Own Paper for Aug., price 15 cents each. The contents of these gentlemen and cheap magazines are not of the dime novel grade, but of an interesting and elevating tendency. If more literature of this class were introduced into families and less of the dime novel species it would have a very beneficial effect on the youth of our land. Parents examine these magazines and you will be convinced of their merit.

OBITUARY.

The Late Rev. John Sanderson.

The subject of this short sketch passed to his rest on Friday last, at the advanced age of 85 years, after an illness of several weeks. Mr. Sanderson was a native of Church Hill, County Fermanagh, Ireland, and was born June 12th, 1795. He came to Canada in 1831, and immediately after his arrival, commenced active work as a Minister of the Methodist Church, in which he continued till 1857, when he was forced to retire through physical inability. He was early placed on the Cavan Circuit and while there visited and preached in Peterborough, before there was a building to accommodate a congregation in this town, using a room in Hesthorn's hostel for the purpose. The hotel stood where Dr. Taylor's drug store now is. The deceased will be remembered, especially by the older members of the community, as an active and earnest laborer in that branch of the Christian Church to which he attached himself. He was highly respected by all for his active and uncontentious piety. Deceased was married very early in life to Miss Raphel Elliott, by whom he had eleven children, three of whom only survive. She died in the summer of 1868, and in the autumn of 1840, he was united in marriage with Miss Jane Knowlson, by whom he had six children, of whom five survive him. In 1863 he took up his residence in Peterborough, to spend the rest of his days here, and has since that time led a quiet and unobtrusive life. He watched with interest the growth of the town, from his early associations in its history. As is the case with Ministers of his denomination the burial services of the late Mr. Sanderson took place at the George street Church, which was draped for the occasion. On the communion table, were a beautiful bouget, and at either end, a few stalks of ripe grain, emblamatic of the ripeness of age and good works at which Death the Reaper, had gathered the aged Minister. Above the table were the texts:

"Thanks be unto God, who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ."

and

"He giveth his beloved sleep."

The Pacific Railway.

Another Scandal Expected before the Commission.

The Ottawa correspondent of the Globe writes:—"The Pacific Railway Commission on Saturday managed to explode another Tory scandal, and Mr. Plumb will be saying to Sir John Macdonald on his return from England, 'I told you how it would be if you didn't appoint me on the commission.' One of the pet Tory scandals in connection with the construction of the Thunder Bay branch railroad was that when the contractors came to effect a junction of sections 14 and 15 it was discovered that the grade of one section at the point of junction was considerably less than that of the other section, and that the line had to be levelled up or cut down—it is immaterial which—to effect a connection. This, it was said, entailed considerable expense upon the country. Absurd as the yarn was the changes were rung upon it, but yesterday before the commission Mr. Rutan, the contracto.'s engineer on the section, laughed at the story as absurd, and gave it a most emphatic and unqualified denial. It is strange that while the commissioners were inquiring into matters connected with this contract they made no attempt to discover the truth of the charges so frequently made, that Conservative politicians have played confidence games on the contractor under the pretence that they could obtain a favorable consideration of his claims for work done etc., which claims were in dispute, but which he and his engineer regarded as just. The contractor is said to have been victimised. The funds received by one of the Conservative politicians were swallowed up in an unsuccessful attempt to establish a Ministerial organ in the city of Winnipeg, and what the other person, who is the editor of a Conservative organ published not far from Parliament Hill, Ottawa, did with his share is best known to himself. A Conservative M. P. is also credited with being mixed up in the affair. This would be a perfectly legitimate branch of the commission'a inquiry, because the charges are that the moneys were paid for services to be rendered in connection with the contract; but value, it is stated, was not given for the money, and the contractor was victimized. What were the services to be? what were the amounts paid, and who are the recipients? are the questions the commission might attempt to solve. The probabilities are that the payments were made by cheques, and that the cheques passed through the hands of the past or present bookkeepers or accountants in the contract. If so, it would be an easy enough matter to call the witnesses. Witnesses are available if the commission possesses the courage to make the inquiry.

Death by Starvation.

While Dr. Tanner has been undergoing the tortures of self-inflicted starvation, Dr. Fowler, of Burford, has been the victim of a similar experience, but in the latter case it was caused by the inexorable hand of disease. For years past the doctor has been troubled with a mild form of indigestion, but until lately he bid fair to live to a good old age. Almost three months and a half since he one day went beyond his usual dinner hour and then partook of a hesty meal. This the stomach rejected, and from that day to that of his death he did not see a well day. He was compelled to take less and less of nourishment until, during the last four weeks, absolutely nothing has passed from the stomach to the bowels. The case was so peculiar and so completely baffled the medical treatment that a post mortem was held. This was done at the request of the deceased, in the interests of science, and the case is so peculiar that we presume Dr. Healy, the medical attendant, will prepare a paper on it for the medical journals. This revealed the fact that the passage from the stomach to the bowels had become hardened and so nearly closed that no food, solid or liquid, could pass. When food, even in minute quantities, was taken it would soon be thrown off. This was accompanied by viscid mucus, so that a greater quantity was vomited than actually swallowed. During all this time the patient suffered no pain. He could, at any time, have taken a good, hearty meal, but he knew the terrible consequences and refrained. His mind was perfectly clear until cloaded by the weakness of approaching dissolution, and all his affairs, for time and eternity, were were arranged with perfect complacency. We have spoken thus at some length of this case, for it has excited general interest. It may be added that the stomach did not present the appearance of cancer, as many supposed it would.—Brantford Expositor.

Sabbath Desecration.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER:—

DEAR SIR:—The season for duck shooting opened last Sunday. Taking advantage of this, a large crowd of loafers from outside the township, well primed with bad whiskey, amused themselves swimming, swearing, running and firing off guns all along the banks of the river. We, the farmers of this section, will have no more such rowdy and profane conduct, and now give fair warning that all similar disturbances will be promptly and summarily dealt with with. In former years the Sunday was desecrated with impunity, and our otherwise peaceful lives were disturbed. In future we will put a stop to these outrageous "capers."

Yours &c.,

Public School Statistics.

The enquiry into all matters connected with awarding contract No. 3 has been commenced. This was a contract awarded to Mr. R. Fuller at $127,500 on October 5th, 1874, for the construction of Section No. 3, minus the portion that was let to Sifton, Glass & Co. as section 1. Section 3, as awarded to Mr. Fuller, was for the construction of 580 miles of telegraph line from Livingstone, opposite Fort Pelly, to Edmonton. The schedule of rates was $213 18 per mile for construction and $23 10 per mile for maintenance or $18,000 per annum. Thirteen tenders were received, and the lowest accepted. Mr. Trudeau was examined, relative to the award of this contract, but before testifying he filed a statement showing the extended tenders received for every branch of the work, together with an analysis by Mr. Sandford Fleming. The witness testified that Section 3, or contract No. 2, originally included section 1, but the work was divided because Mr. Fuller wanted for that portion now forming Section 1 fifty or sixty thousand dollars more than appeared on the face of his tender as originally sent in to the Department. Mr. Fuller's tender for the two sections, 1 and 3, if accepted, would have amounted $216,000, but the tenders actually accepted and existing amounted to $235,080.

The Chairman—How do you account for the acceptance of a higher tender?

Witness—It is a Departmental rule not to accept a tender when once its face has been altered after being sent to the Department.

The Chairman—Well, if that is the practice, and was observed in Mr. Fuller's instance, can you tell us why the Department accepted the tender of Sifton, Glass & Co. for Section 1 after it had been altered by the addition of $16 per mile per annum with profits for maintenance, as you have already testified.

Witness—If I have stated so I did not intend it should be so understood, because I am not sure that the price for maintenance per annum was in addition to the tender. I regard it as an explanation. The amount agreed to be paid for the construction of Section 3 was $117,250, in addition to 65,000 for maintenance during five years, which makes a $182,250. The Department had previously agreed to pay for the construction of the balance of Section 3, known as Section 1, $107,850 and $20,000 for maintenance, making a total of $127,850 for Section 1, and a grand total of $310,100 for the construction and maintenance of both Sections 3 and 1 as now known, or Section 3 as originally specified.

The Chairman then referred to a low tender for Section 3 as orginally specified, including both Sections 3 and 1 as now known, in order to see if the Government really did gain or economize by the division of tenders.

The witness testified that one Mr. Thompson tendered for the whole of Section, and that by Mr. Fleming's estimate his tender for the whole would amount to $277,877 without the construction of offices, the time for construction being three years.

The Chairman pointed out that this showed an apparent increase of $32,000 in the cost of the sections by the division of the contracts, as against Mr. Thompson's tender, and asked him if he thought the cost of the offices which was included in the other contracts would cover the increase.

The witness expressed his inability to answer that question, as it was one more adapted to the engineering service, and he also stated that the Department made no offer to Mr. Thompson respecting his tender.

A calculation was entered into to see if the extending of Mr. Thompson's prices had been brought to a correct total, when it was discovered that the total should have been $330,750 for construction, and $53,877 for maintenance, or a total of $391,637 instead of $377,877, as estimated by Mr. Fleming, a discrepancy of $114,000. In fact the discovery of the error shows that by the division of the contract the Government have saved the country about $90,000, instead of inflicting a paltry loss, if the cost of offices be added to Thompson's tender, of a few thousand dollars.

The Commission then adjourned.

Drowned at Sturgeon Point.

SAD FATE OF MR. ROBT. WILKES AND TWO MEMBERS OF THE FAMILY.

LINDSAY, Aug. 16.—A very distressing drowning accident occurred at Sturgeon Point about 11.40 o'clock, resulting in the death of Robert Wilkes, the well-known Toronto merchant, his only son Bertie, aged eleven, and his daughter Florence, aged fifteen. Mr. Wilkes and family, consisting of wife, nine children, and nurses, arrived at the hotel on Saturday noon for a summer holiday. This morning about eleven o'clock the elder children went in bathing from a little sandy point in front of the hotel, the mother and a number of ladies at the hotel

WATCHING THEM FROM THE SHORE.

The water is quite shallow here, and makes a fine place for bathing, and bathing houses have lately been erected for that purpose. They had bathing dresses and were enjoying themselves finely, and Mr. Wilkes was rowing just outside of them. The son incautiously got beyond his depth and Mr. Wilkes rowed to his assistance. He threw an oar to the struggling boy, but the latter did not succeed in catching it and sank. The father who could not swim, and endeavored to reach his boy, while his daughter from her safer point nearer shore, made a rush to save her brother. There was a short struggle and all sank, to rise no more in life. The alarm had been given in the meantime by the screams of the ladies, and in a few minutes several gentlemen ran down from the hotel. The boats were all out, but Fremont Crandell bravely sprang into the lake, and after diving several times of Miss Wilkes. The body was yet warm, but all efforts at resuscitation were fruitless. Efforts to recover the body of father and son were not successful until half an hour had elapsed in the first case and an hour in the latter. They were found in not more than ten feet of water not fifty feet from the shore. Medical aid was summoned, but could not arrive in time to be of any avail. Nothing remained but to render the last sad services to the departed ones.

JUMPED FROM HIS BOAT,

BROUGHT UP THE BODY

THE REMAINS

were brought to Lindsay on the steamer Vanderbilt, under the care of Mr. W. G. McWilliams, City Solicitor of Toronto, Judge Dean, and Mr. A. Devlin, County Attorney of Lindsay. Coffins had been hastily ordered, and in them were placed the remains and conveyed to the Whitby railway train, kept half an hour waiting to receive them. A considerable concourse of our leading citizens accompanied the cortege from the wharf to the station.

THE WIDOW AND CHILDREN

also returned by the same boat and train. Mr. Wilkes had intended to go to Montreal this evening to close up the sale of his business at that place in accordance with the change recently announced, and purposed rejoins his family in a few days. He was in a very joyous mood on Saturday, and in conversing with several Lindsay friends on the Vanderbilt in the morning looked forward with bright anticipations to his holiday. He had expressed himself as greatly pleased with Sturgeon Point, and had left some gentlemen a few minutes before the accident in order to go and have some fun with the children. The melancholy death of Mr. Wilkes and his children has has shocked the community, and the warmest expressions of sympathy come from all classes.

CURED OF DRINKING.—"A young friend of mine was cured of an insatiable thirst for liquor, which had so prostrated him that he was unable to do any business. He was entirely cured by the use of Hop Bitters. It allayed all that burning thirst; took away the appetite for liquor; made his nerves steady, and he has remained a sober and steady man for more than two years, and has no desire to return to his cups; I know of a number of others that have been cured of drinking by it."—From a leading R. Death of Capt. Sherwood.

FRUSTRATED BY SUICIDE—SHARP MISTAKE OF A DRUGGIST'S CLERK.

On our first page will be read the sad and startling intelligence that Captain Sherwood of the steamer "Hamilton," whose young wife was drowned at Charlotte on Thursday last, had died from the effects of an overdose of morphine. The funeral of Mrs. Sherwood took place at Whitby on Saturday, and it appears that the Captain, who was staying at the residence of his father-in-law, Dr. Shaw, had had quinine prescribed for his relief. The prescription was sent to Whitfield's drug store and there made up. A dose of six grains was administered at eight o'clock. Early yesterday morning, alarming symptoms setting in, further medical aid was summoned, but it was of no avail and the Captain expired at seven o'clock. The remainder of the medicine in the bottle was examined and on analysis proved it to be morphine instead of quinine. It seems that the druggist's clerk in mistake gave the wrong medicine. A coroner's inquest was summoned for today at five o'clock.

The Captain's remains are to be taken to Prescott for burial, where his family reside. The distressing event, and all the sad circumstances surrounding it, excite the liveliest feelings of sympathy and regret for the afflicted families.

The Trent Valley Canal and the Grand Junction Railway.

Messrs. Andrew Robertson, Henry Blumer and J. B. Rolland, the gentlemen who formed the deputation of the Montreal Harbor Commissioners to inspect the Trent Valley Canal route, have presented their report to the parent body. They give a number of details and conclude as follows:

"There is no doubt that the canal would be of considerable value to the country which it passed through, and, of course, every new avenue from the West must be of benefit to the trade of the city and harbor of Montreal.

"It would, however, be desirable, before any decision is arrived at as to building the canal, that an estimate should be made of the cost of making it of a depth of nine feet, so as to enable barges to pass through with 20,000 bushels or over.

"Midland City seems to be well adapted for a lake port, and is now connected directly with Lindsay and Port Hope, and when the Grand Junction Railway is completed will have an outlet to Trenton and Belleville. It seems to be well situated to command a share of the grain trade and if an elevator were established at Midland City and another at Trenton or Belleville, navigation could be conducted by barges now using the St. Lawrence canals, thus saving considerable by this route of continued water and rail, with the largest barge navigation to Montreal."

Ebenezer Church Again.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER.

SIR,—Your last week's issue contained another communication from "One who Knows," still adhering to his very significant name. Then Mr. Editor I owe you an apology for accusing you in your haste of overlooking the no less significant particle not, that we thought ought to form part of the name.

This is an age when men court honors and literary distinction, and from the purity of diction, subtlety of reasoning, and the amount of general information acquired, we hope your correspondent justly merited this distinction. He is the very embodiment of wisdom—one of the five to whom the deed of Ebenezer Church was given in trust. When he speaks, and what he says, it is more than irreverent to call in question, or to ask the reason why. I am, however, one of the unfortunates, who did, though in a whisper, ask for further information, and have the short but sharp homily he reads me.

To make amends, and that no further mistakes may arise, I will put the arguments of "One who Knows" in syllogistic form and leave the readers of your excellent paper to confer on him the well merited honor.

Syllogism No. 1. (a) The Rev. Clark was not denied the use of Church.
(b) For I am one who knows. Conclusion.—

It was either not asked for, and if asked for he is and has been holding services therein.

Syllogism No. 2. (a) The church was not built as a Union Church.
(b) For I am one who knows. Therefore—

It was built a Bible Christian Church and Bible Christian Church must remain, consequently no flaw. Mr. Reporter of Review please pocket that argument and hide your head, for if a few more of similar calibre be hurled at you I am afraid of the consequences—an inquest.

In looking at the arguments "fashioned so elsaderly, so light, and so fair," we would ask your readers to "touch them with care."

The legitimate conclusion to syllogism No. 1 is, Mr. Clark is, and has been holding services in Ebenezer Church. If not he, or no one else for him, has asked for it. I hope when stating it thus I am doing the gentlemen every justice. These are the two horns of dilemma—your correspondent may choose either and he is transfixed. If he should choose the former, it is a fact that about eighteen months ago I quit preaching in that Church. If on the other hand he would prefer the latter, the people at the Point are prepared to call in question the conclusion; we know from experience the many times they pressed their claims.

If this be true whose then is the fallacy? It is in the major premise.

In order to understand this more clearly it is requisite to go back to the time the church was being built which enterprise the people entered upon with an earnestness and zeal worthy of the occasion, and as only a people similarly situated can do. But, alas, a zeal, but not according to knowledge. During this time, however, many friends, Presbyterian and Bible Christian, asked me to give them an occasional supply. At the formal opening of the Church the request was again repeated. At their earnest solicitations I consented; a day was fixed so as not to interfere with the parties who had the first claim upon it, and to whom the meed of praise is due. I went according to appointment and found, by some mistake, the door locked. After making further arrangements, which I carried out to the letter.

These services began about the first of August, and were continued monthly with growing interest, to the end of the year—when suddenly they came to an end.

Your readers may well ask what was the cause? It could not be "One Who Knows" for he is thoroughly evangelical. There are only three reasons that can be assigned for them, and only these parties particularly interested—the people, myself or trustees. Either the people did not appreciate my services, and kept away from the Church, or I became wearied and ceased my labors among them; or the party or parties most interested refused me any longer permission. The fault was not in the people—the attendance was large and the attention given to the presentation of the gospel was that of an earnest people—of a people who knew and loved the truth. The fault was not in myself, for there was no service I enjoyed, and no evening more pleasantly spent than the one at the Point. Yet I was compelled to stop. Let the inference rest upon the proper parties.

It is needless and unprofitable, as well as occupying too much of your valuable space for me to enter into particulars. Suffice it to say, the man who was the soul of the whole enterprise, the leader of almost everything pertaining thereto, told me that one of the Trustees was asked to train upon and to hinder me of the fact that the church was no longer at my disposal. That gentleman was the then Incumbent. When pressed for a reason, the only one he could urge was that we used the Psalms in the service of song; "Tell it not in Gath; publish it not in Askelon." Rather than make use of a B. C. hymn book and the services have since been exclusively Presbyterian characters. I considered to quit—till at least there was a better understanding.

This, Mr. Editor, is the reason of my discontinuing services at the Point, and this the reason the people of the Point

W. J. LARMOUR

Having during the past few weeks added largely to his former well-assorted stock, has now much pleasure in soliciting the inspection of intending purchasers of FINE BOOTS AND SHOES, believing he can offer inducements, both in Material and Price not to be approached by any other dealer in town.

Since starting in business my aim has been to cultivate a trade in the Finer and Better Classes of work, with what success I leave the public to judge. The dealer who devotes his whole time and attention to any one line can supply his customers to much better advantage, and to carry out this theory, I have resolved in future to devote my exclusive attention to the manufacture and sale of Fine Work only, believing it to be more satisfactory to all.

In all Fine Lines my stock is now very complete, being well assorted, and of this season's purchase, and I can confidently ask for a continuance of the liberal patronage which has been so liberally bestowed on me since starting in business.

Selling for Cash.—On one point in business all are agreed, namely, those who give unlimited credit cannot sell as cheap as those who sell only for cash. In order to sell at cash prices and to cultivate a cash trade I have resolved, from this date, to give credit only to those who have promptly met their accounts in the past.

PETERBOROUGH, AUGUST 19, 1880.

Medical Speciality.—J. D. Stewart, M.D., Coulist and Aurist, will be at the Oaklee House, Peterborough, from Monday 23rd August, until Monday September 6th. 32-3

Club House.—Those who desire to secure stylish, durable and substantial first-rate can get the best and most fashionable goods at S. White's, George street, near Simcoe. Mr. is selling out a handsome stock for what it will bring. 32-tf

Pic-Nic Boats.—Yesterday a large number left town to visit the Idyl-Wild Regatta, in which more than the usual interest was taken. We have not yet been apprised of the result. To-day there is a grand display of aquatic at the Mid-land Regatta. On Wednesday next, the brewers hold their annual pic-nic, and on Thursday the Firemen follow suit.

Club Houses.—A license has been taken out in connection with Mr. Turver's Club House, and a very neat and tasty bar is now available for those who choose to be supplied with the choicest of liquors and cigars, at moderate prices and with the utmost of attendance. Comfort, quietude and satisfaction are guaranteed. 32-tfdw

Presentation.—Mr. Geo. C. Rogers, of Ashburnham, was the recipient on the occasion of his marriage on the 5th instant, of a very handsome gold watch chain, accompanied by an address, from members of the Peterborough Boat Club. The address referred in warm terms to Mr. Rogers' large share in promoting the repute and interests of the Club.

A Golden Opportunity should never be neglected—therefore those requiring cheap, comfortable and durable wear for their feet should not fail to examine Mr. W. J. Larmour' stock, previous to the closing of his private clearing sale of imported and ready-made work. Remember the stock is all new and this season's goods, and is being offered at prices much below the present ruling wholesale figures. 32-tf

At Large.—Last Friday, at noon, a pet parrot of Mrs. W. H. Wrighton, made its escape from the house, and finding itself at liberty resolved to make unwonted use of its wings, finding its way to the top of one of the trees in front of the residence of Dr. Bingham. After some difficulty it was dislodged from its lofty perch, and seemed quite pleased to get back to its ordinary home.

The Mail Contracts.—The tenders for the mail contracts between Norwood and Peterborough, Marmora, and Keene, have been awarded. The tenders of Mr. John Vosburg for the Peterborough and Marmora routes have been accepted, and that of Mr. Wm. Richardson for the Keene route, his tender being at an advance of $200 on the sum Mr. Mahoney received.

Railway Notes.—Extensive improvements are being made at the Midland Railway depot at Port Hope. The whole of the front portion of the main building is to be made the general waiting room, the northern portion to the rear the ladies' waiting-room, and the rest of the ground flat will be the business offices. The new arrangements will be far more convenient.

Another Old Horn.—Having seen a paragraph in the Mail, recently, of the existence of a powder horn bearing date 1776, Mr. G. C. Rogers, of Ashburnham, writes to say that his father has in his possession a powder horn with the following inscription:—"Made by Joseph Senior, July 26, 1705." The horn was made for Col. James Fraser, about the time of the taking of Quebec. Who has the next oldest horn —Mail

Temperance.—At the last regular meeting of Carnwell Lodge, I. O. G. T., the following officers were elected for the ensuing quarter:—Sister F A Douglas, W C T; Sister Morrison, W V T; Sister E Morris, W S; Sister M Cobb, W F S; Bro W S Cooke, W T; Sister J Cashler, W M; Bro S Patterson, W D M; Sister Baxter, W I G; Bro C Barrett, W O G; Sister Glass, W Chap; Sister M Risher, P W C T; Bro A H Cobb, R H S; Bro John King, L H S; Bro D M Sim, L D.

Game Regulations.—The open season for wild ducks and geese opened on Monday. The following are the dates between which various kinds of game may be killed under the amended regulations:—Deer, 1st October to 15th December; Partridge, 1st September to 1st January; Wild Turkeys and Quail, 1st October to 1st January; Woodcock, 1st August to 1st January; Snipe, 15th August to 1st January; Ducks—Mallard, Grey, Black and Wood or Summer Duck, and Geese, 15th August to 1st May.

Fatal Accident in New York.—On Wednesday evening last the body of the late James Hall, whose parents are residents of this town, was brought home for burial by his brothers William and Edward, and was interred on Saturday. It appears that the deceased was engaged at work repairing a leak in the roof of two-storey building, in New York, on Monday of last week, when he lost his hold and fell over the side of the building to the ground, death resulting instantaneously from concussion of the brain.

The Weather Fiend.—Mr. Vennor thus prophesies concerning the month of August and succeeding months:—"August will likewise be characterized by severe storms and heavy rain, or in places hail; but on the whole the month will be comparatively a dry and hot one in Canada and bordering United States. A cool or cold term, with frosts, may occur between the 15th and 20th days, after which heat may again be expected up to September 1st. The month will resemble that of the year 1876. I already fore see very early and and severe cold with snowfalls in October, but of this more anon."

Good News.—No more Chills and Ague in this section. Our Druggists are selling an article called "AGUE CONQUEROR." It is allwe the only satisfactory production sold for the cure of Fever and Ague, Dumb Chills, Intermittent or Bilious Fevers. The Proprietor of the AGUE CONQUEROR has used his State energy to make them medicines known, and yet its sale is immense in Agues Districts. It purifies the blood, Liver, and other functions. It is effective that the Chills disappear from whom per sons have taken it for ague. Entirely vegetable preparation. Price, 50 cents and $1.00 per bottle. Two doses will cure the chill. 32-33ow

Scandals.—We commend the subscribers, from the Provincial Paper, to those villains in the habit of asking from others the loan of running their scandalous paragraphs, or vicious and false paper; flash dailies, penny, apples and pumkins; whose subscribers wait for nothing and therefore go in for free notes and no cashing; and generally to all those who are in the habit of borrowing journals' papers for the fun of the thing, that we shall put our columns at the disposal of the 1st person of correspondent's letter and free path and advertisements by the dozen for every undue and poor cracker. We do not publish the Papers for our health or to save our thick, only Sovereign, friend that they can not borrow or demand same worthless as to offer to.

Shooting their Wings.—How absurd! A mere two men, being laid down as Simcoe and George Streets, from Peterborough common.

"Tenderness."—Shopkeeper testimony of its many excellences is try it. Delightfully refreshing. Everybody uses "Tenderness." 32-33ow

St. Paul's Church.—Rev. Mr. Turner will conduct his pulpit in this church on Sunday, after an absence of several weeks.

Grading.—By some misconception apparently of the handsome plaster given in the front of Mr. Lake Fisher's grocery store opposite the EXAMINER Office, has been removed by an early coach. It is attributed to the heat.

Midland Railway.—Traffic receipts for week ending Aug. 7th, 1880, were:—Passengers and mails, $6,886.31; freight, $4,382.15; total for week, $11,268.46. Per corresponding week in 1879 [illegible]; freight $4,[illegible]; total for week, $[illegible]; increase, $1,134.11. Aggregate from 1st of January, 1880 $[illegible]. Increase over 1879, $[illegible].

Correction.—We inadvertently last week did injustice to Mr. Donovan, the young man mentioned as having been engaged in a fight with Cardiff. The party engaged in the fight was named Donovan, and Mr. Donoghue's only connection with the affair was that of a peacemaker, he having interfered to separate the combatants.

Do not forget H. Thompson's unreserved sale of Household Furniture and Piano Forte, at his residence, over Leahy's fish store, Gerrard street. Entrance same as to Thompson's Gallery, in the rooms lately occupied by Masters & Wood, a few offices. Sale at one o'clock p.m., on Tuesday, Aug. 24th. Everything nearly new and in good order. See posters. 32-tf

Died in the Situation.—Mr. John Carvath, of this town, who had been engaged in Mr. T. G. Hazlitt's factory, in Minden, died under sudden death on Wednesday of last week. Deceased had been working up to the day of his death, but in the morning of that day went to the doctor, complaining of severe illness. The physician found him coming from an aggravated indisposition of the bowels. He gave rapidly worse, and died about half past five in the evening. The body was brought to Peterborough for burial.

Peterborough Abroad.—The following appears in the Campbellford correspondence of the Belleville Intelligencer:—

The new brick foundry is now in operation. The proprietors, Messrs. J. Wyre & Co., deserve great credit for their enterprise in erecting one of the best machine shops in the Counties of Northumberland and Durham, and their machinery is second to none in Ontario for the manufacture of all kinds of agricultural implements. Their buildings are commodious, and well arranged for carrying on a [illegible] business. The motive power is derived from a [illegible] water wheel under, and 6 feet head, with plentiful supply of water all the year round. With these facilities, we predict the company will be well repaid for their energy.

Annual Regatta.—The annual regatta of the Peterborough Boat Club will be held this year near Savigney's, a short distance from town, on September 3rd. In connection with it a grand pic-nic excursion will be held on the steamer Golden-Eye, and will, we trust be liberally patronized. The Club is deserving of public recognition, and our citizens can aid them in this way, and enjoy a pleasant holiday, and some interesting matches in the bargain. Those of the club who intend competing in the various events, are requested to organize their practice so as to be able to give a good account of themselves on the day of the Regatta. Remember the date,—Friday September 3rd. neve. 34-35ns.

Successful Excursion.—On Friday evening last the choir of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church held their eight annual excursion down the river to Idyl-Wild, on board the steamer Golden-Eye. There was as usual a very large attendance of excursionists, and a most pleasant and agreeable day was spent, both on board of the steamer and on the Island. In addition to this party there were a number of private parties on board, all of whom enjoyed a most pleasant trip. Capt. Dion and Purser McCallum on the boat, and Manager Gilbert at the Island were indefatigable in their attentions to the excursionists and contributed much to their comfort and enjoyment. Mr. Calvett is fortunate this season in his officers, whose courtesy and obliging disposition is not the least of the attractions presented by a trip to the Island.

Suicide in Black Lake.—Maurice Horrigan was drowned in Black Lake, Township of Ribout, on Friday, 6th August. Mr. William Irwin, foreman for T. Smith & Son, with a gang of men had arrived at the camp that day. When the men went in to dinner Horrigan was seen to go towards the stable, and when called said he would be back in a short time. As he did not come to dinner search was at once made for him, but [illegible] until Sunday morning, when his body was discovered in the lake, close to the shore, and about one-half mile from the camp. Deceased has been drinking hard for some weeks before leaving [illegible] It would seem that he deliberately committed suicide, as he had tied his handkerchief with his breaces, and was on his knees in about four feet of water. He is supposed to have relatives living in the neighborhood of Norwood or Omemee.

Wishing for Consumption.—Rev. —— Wrottesley, D. D., writes: "I believe it to be all wrong and even wicked for clergymen or others to publish what will lead sufferers from consumption to wish for death. Why not tell them of Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam, which has cured thousands of the worst cases of Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma, Coughs, Colds, Croup, Whooping Cough, and all Throat and Lung Diseases? Why not tell them that it is sold by all druggists, at fifty cents per bottle, or five dollars for six bottles?" Rev. —— Wrottesley, D. MAY'S LOVERS.

CHAPTER I—Continued.

The truth was beginning to force itself upon May that she was tired of her engagement, and would not be very sorry if it was broken off. She stooped to pluck a flower or two, and then stood still, picking one to pieces.

'Love—no love! Love—no love!'

'Love?' said a voice in her ear, which made her start.

'Mr. Blake, how could you frighten me so? I didn't hear you coming. You delight in surprises to-day,' she said, rallying and laughing.

'May, I have long been wanting to say something to you. I can't——'

'I don't know how many things you want, but it is very certain that there is no time now for anything of the sort. Promie tea is ready; Miss Blake must give place. In plain English, I am going in. Will you come, too?'

'There is really no need to go in just immediately,' suggested the curate, casting both by the neglected and the idle talk. 'They will call us in when tea is ready.'

'I know; but they will think it very peculiar that we should be talking together for so long a time in one day without anyone knowing you were in the place,' said May, anxious at any cost to get away. 'You know how much I should like to stay, Ralph; but I daren't.'

'No one will know that I am here. I came in through the side gate purposely, in the hope that you might be about. I want to finish what I began to-day. Let us turn down here,' he said, pointing to an inviting little path lined by trees of all kinds, which ran round one of the glebe meadows, and go round to the house by the Sunlight Pool.'

'No, I mustn't. If they should see me—and Grace is so jealous—there would be such a row!'

'What need there be anything said?' he replied. 'Why not give me the right——'

'Oh, don't keep me any longer, Ralph. Do let me go!'

It was not the curate's disposition, however, to let slip such a chance as this; so he took her hand and detained her, not forcibly, but with sufficient determination to let her feel that her chances for getting away were hopeless.

'I cannot let you go,' he said, biting the words clean, as was of his disposition do when opposed. 'I cannot let you go until I have said what I came here to say. May, this estate of uncertainty must end. I——'

'——must let me go!' she interrupted, with an attempt at a laugh. 'I agree with you, if you finish the sentence so. I will go,' she said, trying to lose her temper. 'I will go. How dare you hold my hand? You have no right to keep me against my will. I have never been treated so before by any gentleman,'—emphasizing the gentleman,—'and I am sure my father's curate has no right to do it!'

His voice grew indescribably softer as he proceeded after the first sentences, and he came closer to the girl, bending lovingly over her.

'You must have seen, my May, how much I sought to please you from the first; how I tried to let you see and feel the deep and heart-stirring interest I had in you; you did not see it, I know. I could see that you were always more or less agitated when I came near you; I judged, May, by those thousand minute signs which make lovers presumptuous, and by my own heart. And yet I could not but wonder how it was that I could be so successful. When I first heard of your engagement to Gordon Dare, I sought to find out from you whether he was dear to you; and can I tell you the joy that swelled in me when I persuaded myself that you cared not for Dare? At last, one day, you called me by my Christian name, and as the simple word fell faltering from your lips, and the sound of it brought the blush to your cheeks, the truth flashed upon me, and I was convinced that you loved me. I could have taken you to my heart for ever. Oh, May! my darling! my little shy darling! I felt on that bright morning as if the whole world were new to me, and that I was the happiest of all people in it; that life was really worth living for, and success for your sake worth attaining. I would gain laurels and bind them to the brow of my fair one. I would court the favours of the world that they might shine upon my darling.'

The curate winced, but retained his hold.

Just then came the voice of the vicar, 'May—May! where are you?'

'There, now!' she went on; 'they are looking for me. Let me go at once!' And she stamped her foot impatiently.

'They may look,' said the curate; 'but they know that you very seldom go down this path and would rather think that you had strolled away towards the village.'

'Oh, how silly you are! You would provoke a saint! I tell you I don't want to stay; I don't want to hear; I don't want to be found! Please, Mr. Blake—Ralph—have mercy, and let me go!'

'No,' he began, quietly. 'I came up this evening, determined to speak to you, and I am not going to be baulked of my resolve. You know, May, how much I have sought your society ever since I first came to this place. You know, if you have a heart, and I think you have a tender and loving one, that I recognised in you the one girl whom I could love, and whom I would ask to be my wife. I determined to make you love me, and believe that I have kept my determination.'

May, who had only been thinking how she might get away, now believed that the best plan would be to keep still until he should harass his hold.

'And now, May, when Dare is coming back, I want to hear from your own sweet lips that I am first, and that your heart is mine. I will guard it well, as a holy trust; and I swear to you, May, that whatever fortune may befall me, I will be true to you unswervingly. I have never loved woman yet. Men call me cold, callous, and worldly; but I have spared my love for others to heap it on my darling's head. I have been miserly of it to be prodigal; covetous, to be lavish. I have found my darling, my sweetest, my wife!'

'May! May!' came the calm, nearer and nearer. 'May, my child, where are you? Gordon's come!'

Hearing this, the curate looked up involuntarily, and loosened his hold.

May ran off directly towards the house.

'I was hiding from you, papa, dearest,' Blake heard her say, as she joined the vicar. 'I didn't know Gordon was here, or I should have come before.'

He couldn't understand it. The voice was just the same as ever—the same careless and easy tone.

He walked towards the house slowly, and, as he came in sight of it, saw the sailor rush out and fold the girl in his arms.

CHAPTER II.

Sick at heart at the sight, the curate turned back, and re-entered the grove he had just left.

It was a right lovely spot. The brick, fresh colour of the spring verdure was giving place to the richer and fuller tints of summer; the bloom of the cherry-trees had fallen, and lay thickly strewing the moss-covered path, while their bare fan-leaves waved a stately and mournful requiem over them; the bright may-blossom was falling in showers with every puff of air; the brisk young leaflets on the oaks flirted merrily with the light zephyrs; the heavily clad limes cast a perfumed shade; while arrangant, self-asserting poplars craned out their long bodies to the utmost, to impress surrounding nature with their superiority.

'What does it all mean?' Blake muttered, speaking to himself at intervals. 'Can she love this Dare, after all? He, it can't be—it can't be! I have studied her character as minutely as ever Lavater did that of Socrates. I can't be mistaken! And this man—this Dare—he must be reasonable; must be shown how foolish it was to expect such a girl to wait so long; that she didn't know her heart; that she loves another.'

He was now entering the front door of the Vicarage, and halted at the sound of voices and laughter fell upon his ear. He went in, and was greeted by the vicar with unusual warmth.

'Come in, Blake, come in; here's one of the best fellows that ever lived, whom I must introduce to the best curate I ever had. Gordon, my son (for so I hope you will be soon—oh, May?), Mr. Blake.'

Gordon Dare rose from the side of May Trevor, where he had been sitting, and came and shook hands; the curate pushed down his feelings, and observing himself with an inward 'to-morrow,' gave his hand to his rival. He then shook hands with Henry Trevor, and, with a bow to May, who hardly lifted her head, passed on and dropped into a seat on the sofa by the side of the vicar's niece.

The conversation, which had been interrupted by his entrance was resumed.

Gordon Dare began talking in a somewhat subdued tone to May; while Grace, who up to the time of the curate's arrival had been playing an awkward third, immediately engaged him upon parish affairs.

There did not, however, seem to be that amount of interest in these which was generally the case. Scraps of the others' conversations occupied the attention of both—the curate more especially. Once or twice he answered at random, and had to apologize by saying that he was listening to a tale which Gordon Dare was telling.

'A most romantic story, May, I assure, there is attaching to young Culpepper. Do went out, you must know, in the Indian Civil Service, and hadn't been in Bombay long before he met with this Miss Annie Edwards, and got spoons on her; the next thing he did was to fall ill, and be invalided home.

'They were engaged, and as her mission to India was thus fulfilled, it was arranged that they should all go home in the same ship, which happened to be ours. Well, all was just as jolly as it could be. She was pretty, and he was very well off, and likely to be much better, so everybody cried amen. It seems that Miss Annie liked a wee-wee bit of flirting, when it was safe; and as poor Culpepper was a good deal down below on the voyage, my lady didn't want to waste her opportunity.

'As luck would have it, there happened to be a Captain Long, also doing the invalid, and as there had been a good many soft nothings between this couple on shore, it soon began to blow a pretty strong breeze.

'Now comes complication number three. Culpepper had been jealous of the red-coat before, and the fair one had said that there was really nothing to alarm him, and had promised never to speak to the 'sojer' again. Culpepper trusted her like an honest man, and she tried a double game. She liked Culpepper a little far himself, and more for his position and chances, but she liked the military long legs the most; she would sit and spoon in the day with the one, and lounge about the deck all the evening with the other.

'Poor Culpepper, who was awfully knocked up with the voyage, never really had a suspicion till we were nearly in port. The red-coated Lothario was just going ashore at Plymouth; the other, having a frightful head, had shut himself up in his bunk. Miss Edwards thought it was all right and tight, and was just offering a chaste and tearful salute to the one lover at the one end of the cabin, when a doleful, 'Annie! Captain Long!' from the muffled-up head of the other, disturbed her. There was rather a scene, as you can imagine. Long walked off after the manner of the soldiery in such matters. The girl first screamed, and then fainted, while Culpepper was too overcome to do more than turn into his cabin again, where he lay like one dazed.

He never showed the whole time we were making up Channel, but it was pretty well known that the sight nearly killed him. As Long went over the side, he was greeted with a yell which he'll remember for some time. But I don't blame him as I do the girl. What say you, May?'

May did not know exactly what to say. She would have liked to be able to change the subject; but that was not to be done, so she murmured, 'Oh, I don't know,' and glanced uneasily under her long lashes, first at Gordon and then at the curate.

'Don't know, May? Well, all I can say is that there was a pretty strong impression on board ship. I never heard of a more heartless case of downright flirtation. There was not a single fellow on the whole ship to take her part.'

'And I quite agree with the verdict,' chimed in the curate; 'there was no excuse. If the girl loved the officer best, she was wrong not to say so boldly. The blow would not have been half so hard for the poor lovesick.'

'Must I plead alone for her?' said Grace. 'Was it not rather the mother's fault? Do you think, Gordon, that the daughter really wished of herself to marry Mr. Culpepper and not Captain Long, feeling as she did towards the latter?'

'I don't like to be too much down on her; but I must confess that if they were the mother's tactics, the daughter understood them very perfectly.'

'Well, it's all very well to get up a virtuous indignation about a flirtation,' said young Trevor, who had been paying great attention to Dare's tale 'but I have met very few women yet who wouldn't flirt upon occasion, and I should like to know under what circumstances such a thing would be more likely to be brought about. Her lover was ill. What was the poor girl to do?'

'Harry, how can you talk like that?' said Grace.

'Well, old fellow, as you say, that may have been your experience, but I'm glad to say it hasn't been mine. I don't believe girls are flirts until men make them so,' said Gordon.

'It greatly depends,' put in the curate, 'upon what you call flirtation. To constitute flirtation, as I understand it generally, there must be insincerity; and there appears really to have been a great deal of that in this case. This young lady must have intended to deceive either Mr. Culpepper or the Captain; and, therefore, I say, there is no excuse for her. If she had intended to marry Captain Long, and had merely engaged herself to the other, deceived as to the nature of her feelings for him, the case, in my opinion, would be very different. She would have been quite right to break with Mr. Culpepper, whatever the cost to his feelings.'

'I don't agree with you there,' said Gordon Dare, hurriedly. 'I say that a girl who, after she has solemnly pledged herself to another, and who behaves as that girl did, is not fit to live.'

'Oh, Gordon!' cried out poor May, involuntarily turning pale; and sinking, with a patriot-simulated laugh, 'what a dreadful thing to say!'

'I mean it,' answered the sailor, frankly. 'What are you young people all so serious about?' asked the vicar, whom May's exclamation had awakened.

'We are discussing the worth and deserts of flirts, uncle,' answered his niece, to whom he had addressed his enquiry, as was his wont upon almost every occasion.

'Well, then, don't talk too harshly of them,' answered the old man, 'or you'll catch it; for May, there, is a regular little flirt, and knows it; oh, May?'

'Papa, dear, how can you say such a thing?' answered May, laughing uneasily.

Both the curate and Gordon Dare showed signs of displeasure. It was altogether an unfortunate a thing as the vicar could have said.

At this moment, luckily, tea was announced.

Gordon jumped up and offered his arm to May, saying, laughingly, 'Well, May, dear, as as there is no military captain here, and I'm not an invalid, I'll walk you into tea myself.'

The curate offered his arm to Grace. At the table he sat between her and Henry Trevor, and the talk ran only on general subjects. Afterwards he made the excuse of an urgent visit.

Just as he was getting up to go, poor May's nose began to bleed, and she had to put her handkerchief up to her face, and rush out of the room.

Grace was following, but she begged her not to.

The curate watched her with great anxiety; and, although he would gladly have waited until she came down again, yet he pleaded as special an appointment, that he had no alternative but to take his departure.

Directly he was gone, Grace hurried after May, but was surprised to find her already on her way down stairs.

'Wasn't it foolish of me? I made sure my nose was bleeding; and, after all, it wasn't. I hope Mr. Blake isn't gone yet. I am afraid I quite upset his good-byes, and should like to explain,' she said, looking up into the elder girl's face and smiling.

'Never mind Mr. Blake, May, dearest,' said Grace, putting her arm lovingly round her waist, and drawing her closer to her—she loved the girl very dearly. 'You'll see him again to-morrow, and then you can explain. But come, let us reassure uncle and Gordon. It was only a false alarm, uncle,' said Grace, as they passed back into the room together.

'You young rogue?'—the vicar was standing by the window—'what do you mean by frightening us like that? Go and make peace with Gordon. If I were he, I would exact a heavy indemnity. I must be getting back to my books.'

As he went out, May crossed to where Gordon was, on the sofa, and sat down, subdued, beside him.

The varied emotions of the day proved too much for her, and, against her stoutest resistance, she dropped her head, as a tear gathered and forced itself down her cheek at the thought of the love that was showered upon her.

'May, dearest, what's the matter?' asked Gordon, anxiously, trying to raise her head.

'Nothing, Gordon, nothing—that is, nothing that I can tell you.'

And laying her head upon the sailor's shoulder, let her tears fall unchecked.

She was not, however, apt to give way long to such emotion, and her tears were soon dried by the sunshine of a happier mood.

She did not offer any further explanation to Gordon than that she did not feel quite herself, and did not know why she had cried. This was strictly true. She could not have analysed her feelings had she tried.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

PEOPLE TORMENTED by the many disagreeable sensations produced by dyspepsia, or are this, nervous and weak, should use the standard tonic—Northrop & Lyman's Quinine Wine. They will find it agreeable and beneficial. It enriches the blood by aiding digestion and assimilation; soothes and invigorates the nervous system, and imparts a healthful appetite. When used as a remedy for bilious and intermittent fever, it produces the happiest results, if taken between the attacks. Convalescence is hastened, and ultimately decay of the physique and constitution is arrested by it. The spirituous constituent, sherry wine, is of the best quality, and the aromatics combined with it renders its flavor additionally pleasant. They who use it gain flesh as well as strength, and it exerts a cheering influence upon the mind. It promotes a healthy secretion and flow of bile, sound repose and regularity in the action of the bowels. If judiciously used it may be taken without apprehension of any ill result by persons of the most delicate constitution. A fair trial is all that is needed to prove the genuineness of its claims to public confidence, and to the truth of the general verdict in its behalf. No article of its class commends itself so strongly to nervous invalids who require building up—none is so well adapted to fortify the system against the dangers which threaten the debilitated. It should not be mistaken for a mere stimulant of appetite, which many so-called tonics simply are. It so regulates the stomach that it is enabled to perform its various functions with regularity and vigor, and its action is not only thorough but prompt. Ask for the 'Quinine Wine of Northrop and & Lyman.' Sold by all druggists.

Joy Among the Children.

COPLAND'S SWEET CASTOR OIL, equally suitable for children and adults. Endorsed by over 600 doctors in Canada.

The difficulty of administering nauseous medicines, and the desirability of having the pleasant to the taste, induced T. Copland to undertake researches which resulted in the discovery of a Sweet Castor Oil, perfectly palatable, of the same strength and medical qualities as the ordinary Castor Oil, and while equally safe and harmless, yet acting with more certainty, and producing neither disgust nor griping. Some children say it is honey; others call it syrup—they all say they like it. One parent says—"My children drink it like water," another—"We had to hide the bottle or they would have finished it right off;" another—"My little girl has taken it twice without any trouble, and does not know what it is, though she hates the ordinary Castor Oil, and we could never get her to take it without a fight;" yet another—"I wish you success of your Sweet Castor Oil; it is a splendid thing—sure to take the place or all the common oil."

The extraordinary demand for this improvement on a staple household medicine has brought fraudulent imitations into the market, but the public can guard themselves against substitution (which unprincipled parties are attempting to sell on the reputation of this article) by seeing that the name, "COPLAND'S SWEET CASTOR OIL, is on both the wrapper and directions label.

The undersigned having purchased Messrs. T. Copland & Co's interest in the above preparation, are now manufacturing it from the original recipe. BOSWORTH & LYMAN, Toronto.

MANHOOD:

HOW LOST, HOW RESTORED!

We have recently published a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical and permanent cure (without medicine) of Nervous Debility, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediment to Marriage, etc., resulting from excesses.

☞ Price in a sealed envelope, only 6 cts., or two postage stamps.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicines or the use of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

☞ This lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

The Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, AUGUST 26, 1880.

THE GEOLOGICAL MUSEUM.

The Ottawa correspondent of the principal Tory newspapers circulates the following despatch in those journals:

"A deputation consisting of Messrs. P. Ryan, M. P., Kirkpatrick, Q.C., Clarke, Wallis, & MacArthur, Lieutenant-Colonels Jones, Gilmour, Murphy and Lowry, waited on the Hon. Mr. Langevin and stated that they had reason to believe that it was the intention of the engineer appointed to make alterations in the Geological Museum to have the main entrance on George street, and the purport of their visit was to request the Minister of Public Works to have the plans so altered as to have the entrance on the principal thoroughfare of the city. The deputation also represented to Mr. Langevin that the public generally would be much better pleased if the main entrance was on that street. The deputation who were introduced by Mr. Casey, were most cordially received, and assured by the hon. the Minister of Public Works that it would afford him the greatest pleasure to accede to their wishes, the importance of which had been made evident by the favorable statements made. Hon. Mr. Langevin then called in Mr. Scott, engineer, and in the presence of the deputation ordered the plans to be altered so as to accede to the request made. The deputation then withdrew, highly delighted at the cordial manner in which they had been received, and the satisfactory manner with which their request had been granted."

This despatch indicates what a very obliging and convenient Minister of Public Works Mr. Langevin makes when there is a political object to serve. The London Advertiser very properly calls attention to the evident fact that the whole management of initial steps to the establishment of the Geological Museum, at Ottawa was a job of the rankest description. It is very doubtful indeed if the Geological Museum would have been removed from Montreal, but for the fact that the Government, and some of its supporters at and in the neighborhood of the capital, were anxious to provide for the owner of the property which has been selected for the museum. Senator Skead, who has sat and drawn his salary during two sessions, under the present regime, though, being a bankrupt, clearly disqualified under the Confederation Act, was the owner of an old stone building, formerly in use as a hote, and to which, while it was rented as a barracks for the Imperial garrison, a wing had been built, admirably adapted for its purpose of barrack rooms, but totally unfit for the object to which it has now been devoted. For some years the property had been tenantless, and while paying no interest to Mr. Skead, it was being eaten up with taxes and water rates. To oblige a faithful supporter, who had always been a liberal contributor of the "sinews of war" in election contests, the Government became the purchaser of this building on terms highly gratifying to the gentleman who had found it so poor an investment. To answer, in any measure the purposes of a Geological Museum, it has to undergo a complete remodelling and reorganization, the cost of which will have to be added to the purchase money, some $18,000. The money that will necessarily be spent in repairs and alterations, would have quite sufficed for the erection of proper premises designed specially for the purpose of a museum upon the ample property belonging to the Government in a much more suitable locality in every respect. It appears that, no doubt acting upon the recommendation of the head of the Geological branch of the Department of the Interior, Prof. Selwyn, plans had been prepared for the Public Works Department, for such alterations as were found to be necessary to make the building in any measure answer the object with which it was ostensibly acquired, and by these plans the Museum was made to front upon George Street, a wide avenue comparatively little travelled and free from dust. To please a few Conservative merchants on Sussex Street, Mr. Langevin without any consultation with Mr. Selwyn, and without the slightest regard or consideration for the purposes of the building, promptly promised to make the alterations demanded by the handful of "business men," and has placed the main entrance to the museum on the narrowest throughfare and the dirtiest to be found in the city. The Museum never ought to have been placed in the locality at all, and probably never would have been, had Senator Skead not been in urgent need of a customer for a property that was producing no income for its owner; but having been placed there, it is outrageous that the plans of Mr. Selwyn for making the best of a bad bargain, should have been altered merely to please half-a-dozen business men at the capital. The Geological Museum was supposed to have been a national institution, and was to placed before Parliament when it was asked to vote money for its establishment at the capital; but it would seem from the manner in which it is being handled by the Minister of Public Works, that the main object, after satisfying the gentleman from whom the building was purchased, is to so expend the public money as to be of the greatest "advantage to business men" on a street in the capital, which appears to have more claim upon Mr. Langevin than the public interests.

THE OLD TARIFF AND THE NEW.

The Toronto Mail must have a most profound belief in the ignorance and credulity of those for whom it writes. In its issue of Friday it says:

"Under the old tariff our imports were enormous and in bulk; now it is rapidly increasing. Under the old tariff our imports exceeded our exports; but now, for the first time, our exports exceed the imports by a large sum. Under the old tariff the bulk of our trade was with the United States; now it is with Europe. Under the old tariff our manufactures were languishing; now they are rapidly increasing. Under the old tariff our factories were lying idle for want of capital; now capital is abundant; new mills are springing up in every part of the country; and in town after town we hear of new factories starting."

We presume the great people of West Toronto, for whom this fancy picture of prosperity is conjured up, are sufficiently familiar with their own interests to know whether or not they pay now, in 1880, more than they did in 1878, for their sugar, tea, coffee, bread, coal and coal oil, and will know, too, whether employment has multiplied and wages increased as they were promised would be the effect of the Mail in 1878. So far as Peterborough is concerned, however, we know very well what protection has done and what it has failed to do for the people of this town. If the author of the "bosses" we have quoted above would take the trouble to drop down this way, he would have the opportunity of examining back files of the Review, in which was much promise, and also of satisfying himself that the brick factory is not in very active operation, and that Mr. Stevenson's machine shops still remain a dumb and mute reproach to those who, in 1878, told the people of this town what the N. P. was going to do for them. Not a man in Peterborough but knows that not a single new industry has been set in motion, not a single old industry has been revived, by the beneficent N. P. We would be able, too, to show the Mail writer that business has shrank in volume, and that at the present time those who buy goods in Peterborough are paying a greater amount of duties upon a very much less value of goods imported than was the case prior to the new tariff. We could produce the assessment of the town to prove that there has been a serious shrinkage of values and to prove also that with the reduction of the total assessment of the town, there has been a diminution of the population upon whom the consequent taxation has to be laid. These and other like results are the offspring of the N. P. It may be that other localities have been more favored; but it certainly is a fact that the N. P. has worked most disastrously for the town and county of Peterborough. Then, too, we were promised an immediate and permanent increase in the value of all things produced by the farmer, as a result of the "protection to our manufacturing, mining and agricultural interests." How has it been? A glance at the market reports as published in the Review of corresponding dates, in August 1878 and August 1880, shows that the laboring man and mechanics have to pay $6.50 for a barrel of flour to-day, instead of $5.00 in August 1878, while the farmer who then received $1.05 for his fall wheat, now only gets 96cts, and from 92c to 95c for spring wheat, against $1.03 to $1.05 in '78. Peas, which brought him 65c a bushel in 1878, by the process of the N. P. have been reduced in value to from 50 to 55c. Barley in that year quoted at 55c per bushel, now only brings 50c. Dressed pork has been reduced in value by 50c per cwt, while wool, upon which there was a special and exceedingly peculiar tax levied for the benefit of the farmers, sold in August 1878, for from 26 to 27 cents per pound, and is now quoted in the Review at from 20 to 22 cents per pound. These are homely but practical exemplifications of the results of the N. P. in this district, and we must beg the Mail to count us out of its category of constituencies in which that wonderful impulse in trade and progress and prosperity has been discovered. We defy either the Mail or the Review to deny what we have here set forth, and will give the most ingenious writer in either paper a leather medal, if he can show that in any single respect, the N. P. has been of benefit to the people of this town or county.

TUPPER ON TEMPERANCE.

Among the many feasts provided for the delectation of our junketing Ministers in England was one given in London on July 29th "in honor of Sir Charles Tupper and Senator Vidal," by temperance advocates in the Imperial Parliament. These innocent gentlemen, presided over by Sir Wilfred Lawson, who has often been described by Tupper's organ, the Mail, as a sort of visionary lunatic, congratulated Sir Charles Tupper upon the "completeness of the provisions of the Temperance Act of 1878 in supplying a popular veto to the liquor traffic." Sir Charles took it all in, and in his speech made some remarkable and astonishing statements. As a sort of "court plaster" to Sir Wilfrid Lawson, who is an influential friend of the Government in England, Sir Charles said:—"It would "be unworthy of him, as a member of "the House of Commons in Canada, and "one of the friends of temperance in "that country, if he did not at once say "that the valuable measure that was "now on the Statute-book of Canada in "relation to temperance was inspired by "the efforts made by Sir Wilfrid Lawson." Sir Charles, perhaps, did not know, as he was one of those politicians who never by voice nor vote gave countenance or encouragement to temperance legislation, that he was stating a ridiculous untruth. So long ago as 1847 temperance legislation was agitated in the Canadian Parliament, and has only been frustrated by the friends of Sir Wilfrid Lawson's foolish and fulsome adulator. He went on to say:—

"If Sir Wilfrid Lawson was entrusted that while it was proposed by the Prime Minister on the one side it was supported by the Leader of the Opposition on the other, and obtained the assent of the House of Commons, he could explain what appeared to be rather a remarkable estrangement by the statement that the Leader of the Government and the Leader of the Opposition then only gave expression to the matured public sentiment of the people of the country; that in the Provinces of the which country it was remarkable that every section should have the right and opportunity of deciding whether they would or would not prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquors in their districts."

If Sir Charles had desired to be just he would have said that the leader of the then Opposition in no wise favored the Bill, and he would have given the credit of its enactment to Hon. R. W. Scott, to whom it belonged. Sir John Macdonald never supported the Bill but quite the reverse. Sir Charles owes his own position to-day in a large measure to the hostility of the liquor interest to the late Government on account of the passage of the Scott Act, and he could have told Sir Wilfrid Lawson whether or not the election of himself and his supporters was facilitated or "promoted" by a contribution of $35,000 from Toronto liquor interests to the U. E. fund, for the defeat of the Administration which had enacted a permissive temperance measure, and because they had enacted such measure. The liquor interest, which gave Sir Charles Tupper and his friends such a warm and cordial support in 1878 will no doubt be shamed to hear he "hoped then that the temperance sentiment would finally "rise to a point when the Government "would feel justified in asking the "Legislature to double that fine [illegible] "traffic throughout the Dominion of "Canada should cease." He explained that the Scott Act had not accomplished all that was expected of it by the statement that "the persons concerned in the liquor traffic obstructed it by every possible means," and took credit to the Government, of which he is a member, for having established the constitutionality of the law, stating that "the present Government was prepared to maintain it in all its integrity." With the most unblushing impudence he denied all credit to the late Government for temperance legislation, though opposition to that legislation was one of the means by which he attained to office, and left Sir Wilfrid Lawson in the firm conviction that in the cause of temperance he had the sympathy and collaboration of Sir John Macdonald, Sir Charles Tupper, J. H. Pope, J. C. Pope and other well known advocates of temperance in precept and practice. For what is called "cheek," commend us to the Minister of Railways and Canals.

NO FORGIVENESS.

The St. Thomas Journal alluding to the utter failure of Judge Clarke, Government Agent for enquiring into the Pacific Railway management of the late Government, to elicit a single instance of wrong-doing either on the part of the Government or of prominent contractors, whose pursuit was the primary object of the institution of the Commission, says: "Only when the grave closes over, Glass, D. A. Smith, and Huntington, will the relentless hostility with which they are pursued come to an end." Mr. Glass was a member of the firm of Sifton, Glass & Co., which had a contract for telegraph construction, and a desperate effort was made by Judge Clarke, who acts as interlocutor in the farce known as the Pacific Railway enquiry, by a cross-examination of the officials of the Public Works Department worthy of a Division Court practitioner, to elicit something that would damage the reputation of Mr. Glass and with him the integrity of Mr. Mackenzie the former head of the Department. The result has been a signal failure, and the evidence taken before the Commissioners will but afford another proof of the thorough honesty and straightforwardness with which Mr. Mackenzie conducted that branch of the public business for which he was personally responsible. The offence of Mr. Glass was that having been a conscientious Conservative, he refused to condone the Pacific Scandal, or to vote approval of that most nefarious piece of rascality ever perpetrated by any responsible Government. For the crime of having been honest, and for having refused to prostitute his self-respect to the necessities of dishonest men, even though they were entrusted with the control of the party to which he belonged, Mr. David Glass has ever since, both in public and private life, been pursued with the most bitter animosity by the henchmen of Sir John Macdonald and Dr Tupper. He has shown, however, that an honest man can endure calumny without injury, and that the mud with which his character has been sought to be bespattered, clings only to the hands which have resorted to it. In the same way Hon. Mr. Huntington has been followed by the most unremitting slander ever since his impeachment of the Pacific Scandal conspirators in 1873, and with a similar result. In Quebec, where he is best known, his calumniators are simply laughed at, and in Ontario, where his would be detractors have most sought to injure his reputation, people who knew him only as a figure in Parliamentary life have been satisfied, by the criticism to which his public and private life has been subjected, that he is not only an able, patriotic and conscientious man, but an honest and upright man as well. The curses which have been showered upon him have come home to roost, and people, led to enquiry, having been forced to satisfy themselves of his integrity, are led to enquire what has been the private and public morality of his astagonist, whose instruments have sought to vilify him. The result of that enquiry is not flattering to the reputation of Sir John Macdonald, and only leads one to wonder that he should have the temerity to invite criticism to himself by directing it against others. Implacable malice, however, is about the only characteristic in which he is consistent.

Three Fire Scares in Millbrook.

In the early part of last week, at Mr. Burtons, shoemaker, children set fire to the window curtains. Prompt attention and plenty of water, saved the building.

On Tuesday morning, of last week, fire was discovered in Mr. True's residence, in the upper part of A. Fee's wooden block, immediately north of and adjoining Dawson's block. A sudden alarm was given and the fire extinguished. Fire supposed to have been caused by children playing with matches

The third alarm was on the same evening, Tuesday, about half-past nine, at the residence of J. N. Kirchkoffer, Esq. Two men going home observed a fire in the upper hall, and ran to the door to give the alarm. W. H. Russell, Esq., who resides next door, knowing that the family were away from home, proceeded to tell the men that Kirchkoffer was not at home. On knocking and not getting an answer, a ladder was procured, the balcony reached, and the doors forced, when it was observed that a serious fire was in progress. Water was procured and the fire extinguished. In this case, the fire was caused through the explosion of a coal oil lamp. The cook, who was in charge of the house, having occasion to go to the village, placed the lamp on the bureau, in the upper hall. From some cause the lamp exploded, setting fire to a set of clothes over the bureau, on which were a number of ornaments, desk, work-shops, etc., all of which were burned to a cinder, as was the top of the bureau, carpet, etc. Had the fire not been discovered for ten minutes more, this splendid mansion would have been totally destroyed.

DISTRICT NEWS.

Millbrook.

STRUCK BY LIGHTNING.—The Messenger says that on Monday afternoon, August 9th, on the farm of Mr. Robert Shea, of the 19th concession of Manvers, during a thunderstorm, the lightning struck the knife of the reaping machine, throwing the driver off and leaving him insensible for a time. The horses ran away, and completely demolished the machine.

Downeyville.

TROUBLE UNDER DIFFICULTIES.—Mr Jeremiah Shea, a farmer residing near Downeyville, has for some time been in financial difficulties which culminated in his chattels and crops being sold some months ago under execution by the sheriff. The crops were purchased by Mr. Touchbourne of Lindsay and on Saturday last he sent a threshing machine to the Shea farm to thresh barley. The machine had not long been at work when unmistakeable sounds of iron being in the cylinder were heard. When the machine was stopped it was found that twenty-four teeth had been knocked out of the cylinder, and about forty broken by iron bolts which had been concealed in the sheaves. The teeth flew in all directions but fortunately none of them struck any of the workmen as the result undoubtedly would have been fatal. On Monday threshing was resumed, the machine having been put in working order in the meantime, and special care was taken against permitting a repetition of Saturday's proceedings. but notwithstanding the watchfulness of the workmen a horse-shoe concealed in one of the sheaves was overlooked and again the machine was badly damaged. The owner of the machine, after this second experience of Biddulphism, refused to go on with the threshing and Mr. Touchbourne is having considerable difficulty in getting a person to do the work.

Norwood.

REMARKABLE ACCIDENT.—As a child of Mr. Thos. Carr, of Norwood, was coming down stairs with a lead pencil in her hand, she dropped it on the step in front of her. In some inexplicable way the pencil remained standing on its end, and the sharpened point entered the child's foot, passing completely through it, so that the point protruded above. In attempting to pull the pencil out it was found to have broken off in the wound, and about an inch of it was hidden from view. Dr. Stark was sent for, and, after putting the child under chloroform, succeeded in extracting the splinter.

The Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, AUGUST 26, 1880.

FACILIS DESCENSUS AVERNI.

Samuel Leonard Tilley was once regarded, as an honest upright and eminently respectable man. Up to the year 1867 he had been a Liberal leader in New Brunswick, and as such entered the "no party" Cabinet in 1867. Even up to so late a period as 1878, Mr. Tilley retained, on account of his past record, a large share of public respect, notwithstanding the demoralizing influences of his surroundings and associations, and it was generally considered that being one of the "inferior members of the Cabinet," as Sir Hugh Allan termed them, he had been kept in ignorance of the nefarious proceedings of his associates in the Cabinet, with respect to the Pacific Scandal and kindred undertakings. After the 5th November of that year public confidence in his integrity received a rude shock when it was found that he had been sitting and voting in Parliament, as a member of the Government, up to the very hour of its dissolution, with his commission as Lieutenant-Governor in his coat-tails. After enjoying the Lieutenant Governorship under Mr. Mackenzie for five years, he again entered the field of politics, as candidate for the city and county of St. John, and having secured the support, by questionable means, of the slums of Portsmouth, was elected by a majority of nine votes, though his opponent, Mr. Daveber, had polled a very large majority of the wealth and respectability of the riding. Since then he has become Sir Samuel Tilley, and whether from the corroding influences of a title of quasi nobility shared by such distinguished confreres as Sir John, Sir Hugh, and Sir Charles, or from a conviction that the only way to rival Sir Charles in the race for the succession of the Tory leadership was to outdo him in practice of his peculiar virtues, Sir Samuel has shaken hands with his old-time reputation, and by his last performance has shown how easy is the downward path. For nearly two months beyond the usual time, the people of the Dominion have been waiting and wondering—waiting upon the usual publication of the public accounts as required by statute, and wondering why they should be so kept waiting. Suspicion pointed very strongly to the probability that the returns of the revenue under the N. P. had proved so disappointing to the anticipators of the framers of that nostrum, that they put off the evil day of making public a return which would overwhelm them with confusion: and suspicion has proven so far to have been exceedingly well-founded. But it is now proved that that was not all the reason. Sir Samuel has been engaged in making fantastic tricks with figures, with the object of blinding the people to the real condition of the public finances, and the result of his experiments is published in the Canada Gazette of Saturday, purporting to be a statement of revenue and expenditure in account of consolidated fund of the Dominion for the year ending and up to the night of June 30th, last past. Here is the statement in the Gazette as Sir Samuel gives it:

Expenditures	$20,161,712 66
REVENUES.
Customs	$14,151,563 65
Excise	4,382,288 85
Post Office	1,300,388 85
Public Works (includ. Railways).	2,158,367 19
Bill Stamps	178,910 79
Miscellaneous	1,456,095 06
	$23,468,585 19
ADD.
Customs and Excise received during fiscal year 78-79 on goods consumed during fiscal year 79-80 and entered in anticipation of the change in Tariff	1,300,000 00
	$24,768,585 19

By this statement Sir Samuel would make it appear that the deficit is only $393,127.47 whereas the actual deficit on the year's operations is no less than $1,693,127.47! He has actually the audacity, the foolishness, to add on to the actual revenue $1,300,000 collected in the year 1878-79, comprised in the financial statement of that year, and actually spent in that year! Not one dollar of that $1,300,000 is available to meet a single charge of the enormous expenditure of $25,161,712.66, which had been reached under the Tilley management, in 1879-'80, as against $23,900,000 to which expenditure had been reduced by Mr. Cartwright. And Mr. Tilley has the childishness to place this silly statement before the intelligent tax-payers of the country, and expects them to believe that $1,300,000 spent in the year ending June 30 1879, is an offset to an expenditure of $1,693,127.47 over and above actual income in the year ending June 30, 1880! A more transparent and witless attempt at deception was never placed on exhibition. Mr. Tilley's estimate of revenue for the year just closed was $24,450,000. That was what that great revenue producer the N. P. was going to bring into the public treasury. The amount the N. P. did actually yield according to his own statement was only $23,468,585—in round numbers just one million dollars less than that astute and "heaven-born financier" as his friends call him, had anticipated. Yet this is the man who affects to sneer at Sir Richard Cartwright! What is to become of the public credit—in what position will the tax-payers of this country find themselves at the end of five years of his management, with an annual deficit, from $1,700,000 to $2,000,000 a year? Truly, the sooner this political quack is removed from the position which he disgraces with his incapacity, and in which he is bringing ruin upon the country by his insane fiscal experiments, the better for this Canada of ours. We hope to see the good work well begun in West Toronto and North Ontario.

UNPARALLELLED EFFRONTERY.

If Sir Samuel Tilley's financial trick referred to above, commands our admiration on account of its cool audacity, words fail us to do honor to the bedfable brass with which it is followed out and improved upon by his local organist in Peterborough. The Review of this week will tomorrow not only commend the remarkable feat of Mr. Tilley in appropriating $1,800,000 of the revenue collected and spent in the year 1878-'79 to cover up the deficit of nearly a million and three quarters in 1879-'80 but will actually proceed to claim, not only that there was an actual deficit in the former year of $2,358,999, but that the "Mackenzie-Cartwright Government was "wholly responsible" for it! Of course, the Review conveniently overlooks the fact that the N. P. administration took office in the beginning of November 1878, and that they had full control of the expenditure during the remaining nine months of that year. Had the new Government followed out the estimates of expenditure prepared for the year by Mr. Cartwright, they might then have held their predecessors responsible, and they would have experienced no, or at most a trifling, deficit. But flushed with success they rush ed into every conceivable extravagance, and having gone outside the estimates by a very large amount, they succeeded in piling up a deficit of close on two millions of dollars, wholly during their nine months of management. Now they have the impudence to accuse Mr. Mackenzie of their own extravagance, and not only that but to assert that the deficit was three and a quarter millions, in order that they may cover up the consequences of the extravagance of the succeeding year 1879-'80, which consequence was an actual deficit last year of $1,693,127. And in the face of this palpable, undeniable, incontrovertible fact, the Review will prate to-morrow of "what the N. P. has accomplished in the way of equalizing the revenue and expenditure of the Dominion!" and "look forward to an overflowing Treasury!" The simplest schoolboy in the county could not be deceived by so absurd and nonsensical a position as the Review takes up. Perhaps the Review would favor its readers by working out this calculation:—"The deficit in the first two years of the N. P. has aggregated $3,652,126—what will it amount to in five years?" Or this:—"Given an annual excess of expenditure over income of $1,826,013—how long will it take the public Treasury to 'overflow'?"

The New Pacific Scandal Commission.

Hon. Edward Blake in his speech in favor of Mr. Ryan, the Reform candidate in West Toronto, alludes as follows to the sham Commission of Enquiry into the Pacific Railway Expenditure, now on its way for a holiday excursion to Winnipeg:

History, Mr. Chairman, repeats itself. Thing have happened which might happen again. Now, what Government is in power? It is the Government that contracted for the Pacific Railway before. The same old men (laughter), the same old policy (laughter), and they have issued a Pacific Scandal Commission of a similar kind again. (Great laughter.) They say that complaints have been made in and out of Parliament of Mr. Mackenzie's management of the Pacific Railway, and they have issued a Commission to enquire into them. It consists of a judge —he is only a junior County Court judge now, I don't know how soon he may be a senior one (laughter),—an Assistant Commissioner of Inland Revenue—he is only an Assistant now, I don't know how soon he may be a Commissioner (laughter)—and an occasional odd-job man, for whom they hadn't anything else in particular to do. Two of these three are permanent servants, the third man an occasional servant, and they are, forsooth, to enquire into Mr. Mackenzie's management of the Pacific Railway! (Laughter.) Two of these men have suffered from observations made by Mr. Mackenzie in the House. In the course of his duty as member of Parliament he had to condemn the conduct of Mr. Keefer as arbitrator in a great railway case, in which Mr. Keefer mulcted the country of a hundred thousand dollars. He was also obliged last session to move the rejection of a vote of an additional gratuity to the other gentleman beyond the gratuity given him by the late Government over and above his salary for serious services performed in connection with the Halifax Commission. That is the relation in which these two gentlemen stand to Mr. Mackenzie, whose conduct they are to impartially investigate! (Great laughter.) They are doing their work well. I quite admit, beforehand, that they deserve the reward which I am sure they will shortly receive from the Government which they are so faithfully serving. (Laughter) Now, in the old country such a thing as that would be impossible. Many Commissions are issued there, but they are, as a rule, composed of men of both parties. They choose men of high eminence on both sides of politics, and fair play is secured. Even in the House of Commons, in which we have so paltry a minority, they could not by the rules appoint a single committee in which we have not two votes. We do not care particularly about the verdict, but we want to see that the evidence is properly taken. When the Commission is all one-sided, when you find it composed of men of one political stripe only, when you find them occupying the relations present and expectant to which I have referred, I call the thing indecent. (Cheers.)

The Midland Regatta.

MIDLAND, Ont., Aug. 19.—Early this morning which means four o'clock in this busy little borough, boat after boat commenced to arrive and before seven o'clock the bay, or rather Midland harbour presented indeed a most picturesque appearance. The Midland railway brought in two trains of fourteen cars each, and by eleven o'clock fully three thousand people had assembled on the shore and wharves to witness the carrying out of a well arranged programme. Excursions were run from Collingwood, Owen Sound, Meaford, Parry Sound, etc. The following is the result of the races:—

Professional double-scull race—J. Gaudaur and F. Gaudaur first, time, 10 minutes and 40 seconds; Humphrey and Foley of Collingwood, second, four boat lengths behind the winners; Wise and Elliott third.

Amateur double-scull race—5 entries—Donoghue and Furlong first, time, 14 minutes; Gaudaur Brothers second, five lengths behind the winners. There were five entries for this race, and from the start it was well contested by all the boats.

Single scull race for the champion cup of Midland Bay—Three entries, viz., W. F. Dunspaugh, E. Jarvis, and H. F. Wilmot. Dunspaugh was the only one to put in an appearance and was ordered to row over the course by the referee.

Professional single scull—Distance, three miles with a turn; six entries; Geo H. Hosmer, Boston first, time 30 mins. and 30 secs.; Jas. H. Riley, second; J. Gaudaur, third; Elliott, 4th; Austin, 5th. This was a hotly-contested race, Riley pressing hard upon Hosmer for first place and making several spurts to overhaul him, but all to no avail. He, however, came in two lengths behind Hosmer, who was loudly cheered. Gaudaur was the favorite.

In the sailing race there were ten starters, and the wind blowing fresh there was a very pretty race. Doherty's yacht, of Collingwood, first; the Bunns of Midland, second.

Messrs. H. Calcutt, of Peterboro, R. C. Smith of Port Hope, and T. W. Beck, of Waubashene, acted as judges, and Ed. Hanlan as referee. Hanlan gave an exhibition two-mile row followed by the boys, etc. The carnamen generally are highly pleased with Midland Bay as a sheet of water for sculling, and say it is second to none in the world. To-night a grand concert was held at which the champion and the other carsmen were present.

Regatta at Idyl-Wild.

The third, and probably the last Rice Lake Regatta of the season, was held at Idyl-Wild on Wednesday of last week. Owing to the lowering and forbidding appearance of the morning sky, which gave every indication of a rainstorm, the excursion from town was not so large as it would otherwise have been, but the deficiency was fully made up by an unusually large number of visitors from the south. The Golden-Eye arrived at Idyl-Wild at 11 o'clock, having received a large accession of passengers at Harwood. As the Regatta did not commence till 3 o'clock, there was ample time afforded for an excellent dinner at the hotel, which was largely patronized, and for "seeing the Island." A very pleasant and social time was put in, Mr. Calcutt and Manager Gilbert doing everything in their power to make the party comfortable, and as usual succeeding to the general satisfaction. At 3 o'clock the first event of the day was called, being the

in which there were two competitors, both Indians—J. Howard, of Hiawatha, and G. Tobosco, of Chemong Lake. Both men paddled a plucky race, though it was evident from the start that Howard had a decided advantage, both in superior skill and a much lighter and better canoe. Tobosco, however, stuck close to Howard, pulling desperately till the turning buoy was reached, and keeping about even till half way from there to the finish, where he caved in, and Howard came in the winner, after a splendid race, by half-a-dozen lengths: time 13 minutes. The next race called was the

for the Champion Cup, in which great interest was taken, as a keen contest was anticipated between Jarvis, of Hamilton, the winner of the previous contest, and Dunspaugh of Toronto. Instead of this proving to be the case, however, the affair proved an unmitigated sell, and both men will have some ado before they wipe out the very unfavorable impressions left on the minds of all present by the manner in which the contest was carried out. A good start was made and both men pulled very fairly to the turning buoy, Jarvis getting around about four boat-lengths ahead. From this point his opponent seemed to lose all interest in the race, entering into conversation with people along the course, and allowing the competitor to win by about a quarter of a mile. Dunspaugh subsequently averred that Jarvis was too much for him, but the fact that both parties had entered for the Midland Regatta, and that Jarvis suddenly changed his mind and returned to Hamilton, leaving Dunspaugh to row over the Midland course without opposition, did not look much like it. Evidently there there was a very large-sized African in the palings, and the general opinion is that the two "gentlemen amateurs" had agreed to pool the prizes in the two regattas. A much more satisfactory and honest race was the in which Jerry and Robert Crow were pulled against G. Tobosco and D. Wheetong. The former took the lead, but a short distance from the start the Chemong pair drew upon them, only to put renewed exertions into the brothers Crow who had gained a lead of a length at the half mile. At the turning point Tobosco and Wheetong put in a desperate spurt and got past the Crows, holding the lead and coming in by two canoe lengths in spite of the efforts of their opponents. The race was loudly applauded by the spectators and is considered one of the best ever paddled on the lake.

This ended the programme, and shortly after the excursionists wended their several ways homewards, the Golden-Eye, after a rapid passage, reaching Peterborough at half-past eight o'clock.

DISTRICT NEWS.

Trenton.

TRENTON, Aug. 21.—This morning about 3 o'clock, an attempt was made to set on fire the Public and High School building of this town. It was fortunately discovered by J. N. Lee, Esq., who lives close by, and with the assistance of some neighbors extinguished the flames. It appears the incendiary got up on a ladder which some workmen had left on the west wing, and pushed an old stocking saturated with coal oil under the shingles. Quite a large portion of the roof was burned before it was extinguished. The Board of Education offer a reward to discover the guilty party.

South Monaghan.

(From our own Correspondent.)

ACCIDENT.—On Saturday the 7th inst. Mr. Wm. Rutherford, whilst returning from Peterborough, and when near the new brick School House, came into collision with another party. Immediately the wheels struck, the horse driven by Mr. Rutherford gave a sudden bound leaving the buggy behind and taking its driver over the dashboard, severely injuring his left shoulder, and leaving him insensible, so that he had to be brought home. I am pleased to say he is getting on nicely now although he is not yet able to use his arm.

FIRE.—On Saturday night last a fire occurred at the residence of Mr. Wm. Perrin, lot 17, 2nd con. The house was burned with most of its contents; the fire is supposed to have originated in the cook house. Insurance in Grange fire office $150.

CURED OF DRINKING.—"A young friend of mine was cured of an insatiable thirst for liquor, which had so prostrated him that he was unable to do any business. He was entirely cured by the use of Hop Bitters. It allayed all that burning thirst; took away the appetite for liquor; made his nerves steady, and he has remained a sober and steady man for more than two years, and has no desire to return to his cups; I know of a number of others that have been cured of drinking by it."—From a leading R. How to Get Rich.

The great secret of obtaining riches, is first to practice economy, and so good old "Doctor Sapper" says. "It used to worry the life out of me to pay enormous doctor's bills, but now I have 'struck it rich.' Health and happiness reign supreme in our little household, and all simply because we use no other medicine but Electric Bitters and only costs 50 cents a bottle." Sold by all druggists.

TOWN COUNCIL.

Monday's Routine—Freight Rates from the Midland R. R. Company—The New By-Law Passed—Other Matters Pertaining Municipal—Council Resumes.

The Town Council held a regular meeting on Monday evening, the Mayor presiding, at which were present Councillors Cahill, Taylor, Smith, MacNaughton, Paterson, Yelland, Douglas, Toole, Menzies, Deane and Robertson.

COMMUNICATIONS

were received from Mr. James F. Dennistoun, Solicitor of the Midland R. R. Co., requesting that the Council should fix the amount of the bonus to the new station, so that the Company could pay over at once the amount of their indebtedness to the Town Trust; from T. G. Hazlitt drawing attention to the dangerous condition of the bridge on London street; from Hatton, Hatton & Bell, cautioning the Council against paying railway damages to Mr. Fitzgerald; from E. Green complaining of a nuisance, and also stating that the late freshet had washed out a portion of the street near his premises; from Mrs. Thornton, notifying the Council that unless the paupers Portsmouth and Noble were removed from her house she would charge $3 per day for keeping them; from John McDonald stating that the pound near Spalding's Bay was so open that it could not be used; from Jas. Hogan, showing the amount of taxes in arrears to May 1st last to be $1,664 44, and recommending the procuring of a proper book for entering dates of payments, etc.; from the Secretary of the Fire Brigade Band asking a grant of $25 for purchase of Drum Major's uniform; from E. J. Nesbit, referring to the condition of Sheridan st.; from Henry Totten, statement of the License Fund of the West Riding, showing amount of fees collected to be $4,-925, of which the town's share was $2,-282.91; from T. W. Robinson and 22 others asking to have the stone crossings at junctures of Simcoe and George streets removed; from Wm. Aldridge offering to collect the taxes of this year at the rate of ½ per cent. on amount collected.

ACCOUNTS.

The accounts of T. E. Fitzgerald, $3,83; Henry Best, $3.45; Ranney and Blackwell, $18; and McKee & Davidson, $256, were referred to the Finance Committee.

THE HOSE TOWER.

Mr. Toole asked for an explanation of the account of Ranney & Blackwell, as their plans for hose tower had not been used.

Mr. Patterson said it was on the minutes that the committee were instructed to procure plans from both Mr. Belcher and Mr. Ranney. The engineer whose plans were not used was to be paid from them simply; the other was to have in addition the supervision of the work.

THOSE CROSSINGS.

Mr. Smith moved, seconded by Mr. Toole that the petition of Mr. Robinson and others for the removal of the stone crossings at Simcoe and George streets be granted. He said the crossings were very danger. ous in winter time, and were useless in the summer. The merchants in the locality complained they were injuring their business, and he thought they should be replaced by wooden crossings.

Mr. Toole thought the stone would pay for the construction of proper wooden crossings.

Mr. Menzies thought the crossings did very well. They should be left for another year anyway. He moved, seconded by Mr. Deane, that the crossings be left as they are.

By request the Clerk read the names in the petition which comprised the names of the principal merchants and property owners between Charlotte and George streets, and on Simcoe street.

Mr. Cahill had been formerly of opinion that the crossings would answer, but he had had reason to change his mind. It was evident the crossings were not suitable, they were a nuisance, and everybody in town complained of them.

Mr. McNaughton wanted to know what they would do with the stone.

Mr. Toole said the stone would be required in the bridges.

Mr. McNaughton said the crossings had cost $60, and it would cost $40 more to replace them.

Mr. Stevenson was heard and said the crossings were not only an eyesore but were dangerous. The petitioners paid a large portion of the taxes, and had never asked for crossings before. These crossings had been put down against their wishes. In muddy weather they were no crossings at all, and in winter they were a mass of ice. He though the Council should make the four principal crossings of the town fit to pass over. He himself would take the stone at what it cost, $4 a cord.

Mr. Cahill moved, seconded by Mr. Toole, that the matter be referred to the Street and Bridge Committee with power to act—cost not to exceed $40—Carried.

The communications of Jas. F. Dennistoun, Jas. Hogan and William Hall were referred to the Finance Committee. The letter of John McDonald referring to the pound was referred to Mr. Beavis.

THOSE PAUPERS.

In reference to Mrs. Thornton's letter the Mayor said Portsmouth being able to shift for himself had been removed. As to Noble he was bed-ridden with paralysis.

Mr. Menzies didn't think the town could afford to pay $3 a day for him. He should be sent to the hospital.

The Mayor said the Hospital authorities at Toronto had been written to but had made no reply.

Mr. Yelland said the man's wife resided in Westwood, and ought to take care of him.

Moved by Mr. Toole, seconded by Mr. Menzies,—That the Street Inspector be instructed to put down a crossing on George street on the north side of London street.—Carried.

In reference to the nuisance complained of by E. Green, Mr. Toole moved, seconded by Mr. Menzies, that the matter be referred to the Street and Bridge Committee with power to act.

Mr. McNaughton would move that Mr. McDonald take it away at once.

Mr. Toole's motion carried.

Some discussion took place on the communication of Hatton, Hatton & Bell, in reference to the question of railway damages, Mr. Douglas considering it a private matter with which the Council had nothing to do, Mr. Toole and Mr. Smith favoring getting legal advise, a motion by Mr. Cahill referring the matter to the Finance Committee for report being carried.

In reference to Mr. Hazlitt's communication regarding the London street bridge Mr. Deane said it was in a dangerous condition. It was referred to the street Inspector with power to act.

Regarding Mr. Dennistoun's letter, Mr. Smith said the Council had already fixed the amount of $4,000 to be allowed as bonus to the new station building.

On motion of Mr. Cahill, seconded by Mr. Menzies, the subject was referred to the Finance Committee with instructions to consult with Mr. Cox and the Commissioners and report to the Council.

Wm. Aldridge's communication was referred to the Committee on Appointments.

Mr. Robertson moved, seconded by Mr Deane, that the street in front of Mr. Clegg's mill be repaired as a cost not to exceed $15.

Mr. Cahill said some of the gentlemen who were so urgent for economy that they wanted the whole street appropriation confined to $2,000, would bring in resolutions enough to consume it in a single night. It should go to the Street and Bridge Committee to report.

The matter was referred to the Committee with power to act.

THE GREAT COW QUESTION.

Mr. Smith moved the first reading of a By-law to prevent cows from running at large during certain prohibited hours.

The Council went into Committee of the whole, Mr. Menzies in the chair.

Mr. Smith said he had no wish to injure poor people by preventing their cows from pasturing at large, but to prevent this liberty from being an injury to other people. He had voted against a By-law to prevent cows from running at large before, but he half feared that not only poor people's cows, but cows belonging to those who could well afford to pasture them, were allowed to roam around the streets at nights and the result was that property was being destroyed right and left. While he was in favor of a measure to protect property, he thought it would answer the purpose to restrain them during the night, say from 7 to 7 o'clock, giving them the privilege of pasturing during the daytime.

Mr. MacNaughton suggested from 8 in the evening till 7 in the morning.

Mr. Toole was in favor of the By-law but thought it should not go into effect at once as it might create hardship with people living in premises which had not the necessary accomodation. He thought the 1st of next April would be time enough.

Mr. Paterson said at this time of the year the gardens were at their richest and more damage could be done now than at any other time.

Mr. Toole asked if he could mention any case of injury by cows.

Mr. Patterson mentioned his own case.

Mr. Smith said his premises had been burglarized by cows in spite of all he could do, and mentioned the cases of Dr. Boucher, Mr. Hazlitt and others.

Mr. Yelland spoke of the nuisance of cows at large on the market.

Mr. Deane said he had seen as many as half a dozen cows around one load of hay on the market.

Mr. Toole thought it was hard that all the honest cows in town should suffer from the depredations of two or three dishonest ones.

Mr. Paterson moved that the hours prohibited be from 6 a. m. and 8 p. m. from May 1st to October 1st, and 7 a. m. and 6 p. m., from October 1st to May 1st. The motion was carried and Thos. Taylor was appointed pound-keeper, the By-law to come into force October 1st, next.

The Committee rose and reported the by-law which was read a second and third time and carried.

THE COLLECTORSHIP.

Mr. McNaughton said he would move the first reading of a by-law to appoint a Collector.

Mr. Robertson said he had given notice of such a motion, but in view of the application of Mr. Aldridge, and as there was no hurry he thought it might lie over.

Mr. Smith said there were several things to be considered. It would be necessary to provide that the Collector should pay his money into the bank every day, instead of as formerly, and as the Council would have to meet in a week to strike the rate, it might lie over.

Mr. Robertson asked when the Committee on Appointments would be ready to report on the matter.

Mr. Toole said they had made their recommendation a long time since.

THE RATE.

Mr. Smith said the Finance Committee would meet on Wednesday to strike the rate.

THOSE $2,000.

Mr. Deane asked if any information had been received of those $2,000.

The Mayor said Mr. Dennistoun had received a letter from Mr. Leys, asking them not to press the matter, as they would have to look into it and consult Mr. Scott, and stating that it would be allowed to lie over for a time without prejudice.

Mr. Deane said he had heard that Mr. Scott was ready to pay over his $1,000 if Mr. Dumble would pay his.

The matter was allowed to stand.

Mr. Deane was allowed the use of some earth off Rubidge street in return for gravel, and the Council adjourned.

Ebenezer Church Correspondence.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER.

SIR, in your last week's issue, appears another remarkable epistle from the pen of the Rev. N. Clark,—remarkable for length and for wandering from points at issue. The Rev. Gentleman's mind must be troubled about something, and he is endeavouring to relieve it of its burden, rather than discuss the charges made by the Review scribe, and my denials thereto. I can assure him it is unnecessary for him to war warm on this subject, as nothing was further from my intention than to do him the least wrong or to mar his peace of mind in any way. My attention was called, by a friend, to the charges in the Review and I at once denied them, which right I had knowing they were not correct, and in view of the fact, that—so soon as it was known, that the Rev. Gentleman wished to have service at the point once a month, (though to hold service at the point he had to close his own church about one mile and a half from the Point) yet his wish was (and I will venture the assertion no questions were asked if he was to use psalms and paysms), willingly complied with, and the Bible Christians to allow him the privilege of doing so, closed their service, as the hour we held service was the only hour that would suit him. And the first opportunity, after the first service held by him, those charges appeared in the Review, which charges Mr. Clark tries hard to uphold. I would ask him is it fair, is it honest, to charge a body of Christians, with fraud or wrong-doing, who have never done him any harm but on the contrary, have always paid him every respect and treated him with the utmost civility, just because Mr. Rowe and him happened to cross each other's paths and as Mr. Rowe has removed from here over fourteen months ago, and will not have a chance to answer for himself. I and a great many more think not. I must tell Mr. Clark I hold him responsible for this discussion which is neither edifying to the public nor profitable to either party, and if persisted in I will be compelled to take a different course which I will do very, reluctantly, as I have tried to hurt no one's feelings but to put the Bible Christian Church in its proper light. I again am

ONE WHO KNOWS.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER:—

DEAR SIR,—Allow me, a plain old man, a line on this subject. I will not dabble with "logic," for fear of being lost in the labyrinth of a non-ending "fallacy." But Sir, let me give your correspondents, those friends (?) at "Young's Point," a small piece of advice, and that is this: Dry up your pens, shut up your correspondence; Clark: you go to your own church and stick to it; let the B. C.'s alone, but be sure you take with you your Psalms and your particular friend at the Point—the correspondent of the Review, who is so well known. Your outbursts of cowardice, inexplicable, conglomerate, superfluous, fastidious, "syllogistic," beg pardon, I mean "fallacious," effusions, are only creating a mist, which will endanger yourself rather than edify the public. And you B. C.'s be quiet and let the matter drop. It appears to me and my friends (for we are numerous) that some "Black" man has circulated an untruth about your connexional property. Well, bear the lie and be quiet; "better be wronged than be wrong."

I am,

Your humble servant,

ONE WHO KNOWS THE PLOUGHMAN.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER.

SIR, According to promise in last week's issue we co nclude our review of the most congestive arguments of your correspondent "One who knows." We feel exceedingly anxious to do him every justice, for his language is that of an honest, conscientious man. I am only sorry he had not seen fit to write down his own signature, or at least been candid with a less pretentious name. Had he done this I would never have attempted to oppose him and would have answered his letter off to the waste paper basket to save room. Feeling however his claims have been ignored more than he quite pleases himself to

The Red Boot Still Leads the Trade.

W. J. LARMOUR

Having during the past few weeks added largely to his former well-assorted stock, has now much pleasure in soliciting the inspection of intending purchasers of FINE BOOTS AND SHOES, believing he can offer inducements, both in Material and Price not to be approached by any other dealer in town.

Since starting in business my aim has been to cultivate a trade in the Finer and Better Classes of work, with what success I leave the public to judge. The dealer who devotes his whole time and attention to any one line can supply his customers to much better advantage, and to carry out this theory, I have resolved in future to devote my exclusive attention to the manufacture and sale of Fine Work only, believing it to be more satisfactory to all.

In all Fine Lines my stock is now very complete, being well assorted, and of this season's purchase, and I can confidently ask for a continuance of the liberal patronage which has been so liberally bestowed on me since starting in business.

Selling for Cash.—On one point in business all are agreed, namely, those who give unlimited credit cannot sell as cheap as those who sell only for cash. In order to sell at cash prices and to cultivate a cash trade I have resolved, from this date, to give credit only to those who have promptly met their accounts in the past.

a borrowed garb, on him rests the responsibility of this practice in sword exercise.

In the letter of last week we prove both logically and historically the fallacy of his first argument. In this I address myself to syllogism number two, or to the question proper, was Ebenezer Church built as a union church? The reason of our passing by syllogism No. 2 is, on account of its peculiar structure. Being diseased in every member, needs the most careful handling. Indeed it would be the better of being under the paternal care of "One who knows" for some time ere it is fit to be seen. If however he still persists in trotting it out before the gaze of the people we will be under the necessity of asking you, Mr. Editor to hang it up in "old curiosity shop" as a specimen of the elegancy and refinement of our more modern literature. To this question your correspondent gives the most emphatic denial, and to strengthen his position he gives day and date in which the deed was executed, and the peculiar form in which it was written. All this we are prepared to grant. Further the transfer of the deed to Trustees under the care of B. C. Church was done in the most businesslike and honorable manner. And last there should be any misapprehension in the mind of any, permit me to say, we do not desire any change.

What then are you contending for? may well be asked by your readers. We are contending for principle—a thing more precious than rubies and more binding than any written scroll. That obligations assumed, covenants entered into shall be recognized as sacred. The treating of these matters lightly and the recognizing them of little moment, always indicates a low state of morals, to say nothing of religion.

That the Trustees of the said church did covenant with the people to build it on union principles may be easily established. True there was no formal covenanting; yet it is equally true there was an actual covenanting. Some of these gentlemen recognize this fact and have always been willing to implement their part of the agreement by opening the church to all evangelical denominations—all honor to those noble men. There are others, such as "One Who Knows," who deny this. We would ask him to settle the question with his brother trustees before he undertakes to settle it with those outside.

When the building of the church was fully determined upon, the committee acting in behalf of the congregation solicited subscriptions for a union church. The reason of this change from original design we know not. It may be, they discovered the undertaking too arduous for the few of this particular denomination at, or in vicinity of the Point, or moved out of sympathy for the scattered members of other folds—we presume the latter. Be it what it may, it is certain that members of the said committee did solicit subscriptions for Union church. The committee being appointed by the said congregation represented the congregation in every particular—what they did the congregation did. They solicited subscriptions for the Union Church, therefore the congregation solicited subscriptions for the Union Church, and we presume "One Who Knows" is a member of that congregation, consequently must share his part of the odium, if it is as he says B. C. Church.

This idea of a Union Church was freely talked of—it was not done in a corner, and hence we are surprised at the language of your correspondent "if such a thing were done" as if there was some doubt on the matter. But says he, "if such a thing were done, I am ignorant of it,"—granted, why then assume so pretentious a name? It was not only done, but freely discussed.

I would ask your correspondent if he remembers the formal opening of the church, when amid the many congratulations offered, and the many pleasant words spoken, the question was asked by one of the speakers "Is not this Union Church?" What answer did it receive? Being addressed to the Chairman—the then incumbent, he arose, tardily I confess, and said, "It is." (This may not be the exact language, but it is, however, the literal import). Your correspondent, always a meek man, was especially so when this declaration was made in the ears of that audience. To do "One who Knows" every justice, we are satisfied this was the first intimation of the kind he received.

But wherein we blame him is, because he did not then and there get up and protest against any further procedure. He permitted the Chairman in his official capacity, to come down, book in hand, and go through among that audience, ere yet the echoes of his declaration had died away, and solicit subscriptions to wipe off balance, still unprovided for. And that balance, in whole or in part, was raised. If it is not a Union Church as declared by Incumbent, then your correspondent, inasmuch as he did not raise his protest, and thus undeceive the people, is guilty of deception. He asks that the responsibility, if such were done, rest upon the proper parties. Such was done, and your correspondent being cognizant of the fact, must bear his share of the blame.

But Mr. Editor there was no deception. It was an honest transaction throughout, and your correspondent did not consider well what he was doing when he called in question the statements of the reporter of the Review. We are satisfied he is alone in his declaration, that he could not, of that particular congregation, get a corporal's guard to sign his statement. We will leave him severely alone, and doff the sword of the gladiator, and in future cultivate the things that make for peace. He having appealed to bar of public opinion, there we part with him, and leave your readers to determine whether he or the reporter of the Review was on the side of truth.

Thanking you for the space afforded,

I am yours,

N. CLARK.

"A TIME FOR EVERYTHING."

"What fish weather for the crops we have been having," has been the most frequent remark made by our customers during the past week. And they are right. Nothing like a good strong hot spell of weather to secure a good harvest. In spite of the forebodings at the first, and other direful things, the indications are that there will be a full average, and in many cases more than an average yield. We recognize the fact that just now and in consequence have no time to attend to other business than that just now on hand. We shall therefore defer talking to them about our NEW FALL STOCK, until the hurry and heat of harvest is over.

FARMERS ARE AWFUL BUSY,

COMMON SENSE SUGGESTS that it is no earthly use prodding a housekeeper fresh from the sweltering harvest field, with bulletins about GREY FLANNELS, and EXTRA WIDE WINCEYS, HEAVY BLANKETS or FULL-CLOTH. Not a bit of use, we wouldn't pay any attention to such statements ourselves—under the circumstances. We shall just casually remind them that when they are ready to purchase, we will be quite ready to sell them. Our

PETERBOROUGH, AUGUST 26, 1880.

Rifle Camp.—The Peterborough Rangers (57th Batt.) will go into camp a week from Tuesday. A good muster is anticipated.

"Tenberry."—Emphatic testimony of its unique excellence is by it. Delightfully refreshing. Everybody uses "Tenberry." 25-3line Military Appointments.—Dr. T. W. Miller has been appointed Assistant Surgeon of the Peterborough Rangers, vice Stevenson, left limits.

Accident.—Mrs. Thos. Weston, of Otonabee, had the misfortune last week to have her arm broken and elbow dislocated by a fall from a wagon. Dr. Miller attended to her injuries, and she is progressing favorably.

Readjusted.—Peter Badgely, who had his thumb cut off by a band saw in McFadden's furniture factory, and replaced by Dr. Kinsold, is recovering from the effects of it, and will have perfect use of the maimed member.

The Port Hope Fire.—The Port Hope News says:—"The insurance companies are arranging for a settlement with Mr. John Holm, by arbitration. It is said that Mr. Hamilton, of Peterborough, is to be one of the arbitrators."

Heavy Loser.—Mr. Robert Brodie, for some time Manager of the Auburn Woollen Mills, was superintendent of the Newcastle Mills burned last week. He will also be a heavy loser, having invested his means in the company.

Gas Shed.—Those who desire to secure stylish, durable and substantial foot-wear can get the best and most fashionable goods at S. White's, George street, near Simcoe. Mr. is selling out a a handsome stock for what it will bring. 22-tf

The Midland Excursion.—Last Thursday morning between two and three hundred persons left Peterborough by special train for the Midland Regatta on that day. The Fire Brigade Band accompanied them, having been engaged by the Regatta Committee to enliven the proceedings. Some 1,400 persons in all were taken up by the the Midland R. R. excursion trains.

A Golden Opportunity should never be neglected—therefore those requiring cheap, comfortable and durable wear for their best should not fail to examine Mr. W. J. Lermonth' stock, previous to the closing of his great clearing sale of imported and ready-made work. Remember the stock is all new and this season's goods, and is being offered at prices much below the present ruling wholesale figures. 35-1in.

Annual Regatta.—The annual regatta of the Peterborough Boat Club will be held this year near Savigney's, a short distance from town, on September 3rd. In connection with it a grand picnic excursion will be held on the steamer Golden-Eye, and will, we trust be liberally patronized. The Club is deserving of public recognition, and our citizens can aid them in this way, and enjoy a pleasant holiday, and some interesting matches in the bargain. Those of the club who intend competing in the various events, are requested to organize their practice so as to be able to give a good account of themselves on the day of the Regatta. Remember the date.—Friday September 3rd. prox. 34-2ins.

Lacrosse.—In the race for the Quarter Mile Medal given for competition by the President of the Peterborough Lacrosse Club, on Friday evening last, four members started, the race being close between P. Rudkins and James Delaney, the former winning. The final scenes took place last evening between P. Rudkins and M. Halpin, the two who have been successful in the largest number of contests during the season. We had not learned the result up to going to press.——The return match with the Belleville Club will take place on the third or 6th of September, the exact date not being yet settled.

Poor Fellow!—The Lindsay Warder sententiously states, concerning excursion fares on the Midland:—"When there is an excursion to either Toronto or Rochester, we do not find the people of Port Hope and Whitby compelled to pay as much as the people of Lindsay. This may seem a small matter, but such conduct on the part of the company will not make friends for them in this town." We should say, a very small matter indeed. When there is an excursion to Toronto or Rochester Port Hope and Whitby people don't pay as much as Lindsay or Peterborough, for the simple reason that they don't use the Midland line at all.

Good News.—No more Chills and Ague in this section. Our Druggists are selling an article called "AGUE CONQUEROR." It is about the only satisfactory preparation sold for the cure of Fever and Ague, Dumb Chills, Intermittent or Bilious Fevers. The Proprietor of the AGUE CONQUEROR has used but little energy to make this medicine known, and yet its sale is immense in Ague Districts. It purifies the blood. Liver, and other Secretory Organs so effectually that the Chills do not return even where persons have had them for years. Entirely vegetable preparation. Price, 50 cents and $1.00 per Bottle. Two doses will stop the chill. 23-52ins

Auburn Factory Annual Excursion.—On Saturday morning the steamer Golden-Eye, with a dancing now attached, chartered for the occasion by Mr. Jas. F. Dennistoun, left town for the annual excursion of the Auburn employees to Idyl-Wild. The excursionists, 165 employees and their friends, to the number in all of 220, arrived at the Lodge at noon, and spent a very pleasant afternoon, in dancing and various other amusements. The party was in charge of Mr. James Kendry and a Committee of Management, consisting of Messrs. John Craig, John Smith, Robert Mann, E. Kendry and Geo. Way. The company embarked for home at 6 o'clock, and arrived at an early hour. On board the boat dancing was maintained both down and up, and the young folks of both sexes enjoyed themselves to their hearts' content. In accordance with the arrangements the bar was closed for the day, and the comportment of the party was most creditable to them, in every respect.

Serious Loss by Fire.—Mr. Daniel Costello, of Emsmere, seems to be fated to be a sufferer by fire. Only a short time ago he was burned out, under circumstances which indicated that incendiarism had been perpetrated, and now again he is similarly visited. On Saturday night, during his absence as with his family at Young's Point, his wife only remaining at home, Mr. Scollard, a neighbor, discovered the two barns of Mr. Costello to be on fire, which had apparently gained equal headway in each building, pointing to the probability that both buildings had been fired simultaneously, and that the fire was not accidental. Both barns with their contents—[illegible] bushels of wheat, 75 barley (estimated) and a large amount of agricultural implements, [illegible] were totally destroyed. There was an insurance of $600 on the two barns, the loss on which is estimated at $700. The insurance on contents was $1,200, and the loss, which will be paid by the Royal Insurance Company (in which both buildings and contents were insured), will be $500. There is no clue as to the origin of the fire and nothing to go upon to warrant an investigation.

Still Bleeding Harvesting Machinery.

Wire Binding Superseded by Cord.

On Tuesday last, by the courtesy of Messrs. Greene & Fowler (the Agents of the Toronto Reaper and Mower Co'y), we had the pleasure of paying a visit to the fine farm of Mr. Joseph Walker, in Smith, where there was on exhibition, one of the most wonderful triumphs of labor-saving agricultural machinery ever invented, being the self-binding harvester, being introduced by the Toronto Reaper and Mower Company (whose machines have grown into so much favor within the past few years) which the Company propose putting for next season's work. Many of the principal farmers of the township were present during the afternoon, and watched the operations of this machine with the greatest interest, and with an unanimous approval. The grain in which it was operating was a field of oats, very badly tangled, and affording the best possible test of the capacity of the machine under the most unfavorable circumstances. It would be difficult to describe intelligently the exact working of the machinery by which so peculiar and difficult a result is accomplished, but we may give a general idea. The grain is taken from the knife, which cuts a swath 6 feet 2 inches wide, to the right hand side of the machine, and is carried up over the rear of the driver's seat where it is fed to the binding apparatus. So soon as a sufficient quantity for the sheaf has collected it is seized by an arm, which is set in motion at the moment of the filling of the sheaf, and tightly compressed. A shuttle passes over the sheaf at this moment, by means of which, and by a very simple but effective process, the end of the cord is tied firmly into a regular "double bean knot" to the cord as it is fed out. The string is then cut, the end of the cord secured, and the sheaf, firmly tied, expelled to the right of the machine. The operation takes less time in performance than this writing, so easy to judged from the fact that no matter what may be the speed of the reaper or the quantity of grain, the binder does its work with regularity and precision, never failing to tie its sheaf, as rapidly as it is supplied. The great advantages of such a machine are obvious, and were remarked by Mr. Dawson Kennedy, Mr. Davidson, Mr. Wakon, and many of our most experienced farmers. There is not a straw allowed to drop on the ground, there being absolutely no raking, even under the sheaf. It does the work of four men who follow a reaper, in a manner which it would be impossible for any men to equal, avoiding all waste and taking the thistles as they come. It keeps up to the work, on that in event of bad weather, the grain is always ready for stooking, and is never left in the sheaf unbound, to be ruined by the wet. The draft of the machine is no heavier than the Johnston or Wood reaper, though performing all this extra work. The great width of the knife—about 12 inches wider than the ordinary knife—enables it to cut with ease from 12 to 14 acres per day, binding every sheaf. Here's something for our farmers to think about. It is compact and very durable, a great test of the latter being that the machine which we saw working so perfectly at Mr. Walker's had cut this season two hundred acres, and had been driven over stone roads over one hundred miles and had never needed repair. We only give the opinion of the leading farmers who visited the trial at Mr. Walker's when we say that it is destined to supersede all others. We omitted to say that the cord used is the common cord used for bagstrings, etc., and costs about 18 cents an acre for binding. The use of the cord obviates the danger to cattle in feeding which had been experienced with machines binding with wire.

RAILWAY NOTES.

Traffic receipts for week ending August 14th, 1880, were:—Passengers and mails, $1,832.09; freight, $6,789.59; total for week, $7,621.68. For corresponding week in 1879.—Passengers and mails, $2,162.25; freight, $4,141.86; total for week, $6,304.04; increase, $1,317.41. Aggregate from 1st of January, 1880, $201,122.03. Increase over 1879, $61,989.70.

The old culverts on the portion of the Cobourg & P. R. to be used by the Grand Junction are being replaced by new ones.

The work of relaying the Midland R.R. track with rails has been completed on the main line from Port Hope to beyond Franklin. Steel rails are also being put down between Millbrook and Peterborough.

The Lindsay Warder has a silly reflection on the Midland Railway in reference to the fare charged for the recent Midland excursion, intimating that the attendance from Lindsay would have been larger had the fare from that place not been the same as from Peterborough and Port Hope. The fact is the attendance on the excursion was larger than the company anticipated, quite as many being present as the company could accommodate, with comfort to the excursionists and satisfaction to themselves The regular fare from Lindsay to Midland and return is $2.25—and the Warder grumbles at $1.75. With such cheap rates it is impossible to make a few cents difference at each station.

The Midland R. R. Company are erecting a new station at Wabaushene, similar in design to that at Peterborough, but smaller in dimensions. Mr. D. Carlisle left on Monday for that place, to oversee the operations.

POLICE COURT NOTES.

On Wednesday of last week, Mick Cardiff, not appearing in answer to a summons to show cause why he should not be punished for drunk and disorderly conduct on the streets, a warrant was issued for his arrest.

On Thursday morning James Murphy, for an assault on John Galvin, was fined $5 and $4.25 costs. Mr. H. H. Smith appeared for plaintiff, and Mr. D. W. Dumble for defendant. Another charge against Mr. Murphy, for malicious injury to property, was held in abeyance. Mr. Dumble on his behalf agreeing to have dam age repaired. The case arose out of a disputed boundary line. In default of payment of the fine he was sent to gaol.

On Tuesday morning, about 11 o'clock, two young men named Charles Brunning and Thos. Poole got into an altercation in Bell's Hotel, Simcoe street, in which both parties received injuries from kicks. Brunning got the best of it, and Poole had him arraigned before the P.M. yesterday, charged with an assault with intent to do grievous bodily harm. The evidence was somewhat indistinct as to who began the assault, and on application of Mr. H. H. Smith, prisoner's counsel, the charge was reduced to common assault, and the defendant was fined $10 and costs, which were paid.

A brutal fight took place on Tuesday morning in front of the Stewart House, between two raftsmen, one of whom was badly used up. This case did not come up in the Police Court; but it should have done so.

THE NORTH-WEST.

Letter from Shell River.

The following extract is from a letter from Mr. Marvin Calcutt to a friend in Peterborough, dated August 5th:—

"I suppose you have arrived at the conclusion ere this that I had either forgotten my old friends or gone back upon my promises. But have allow me to assure you that such is not the case, for if there is anything I delight in more than another it is receiving letters from my old friends, as they act as a remembrance of the many happy days I have spent in the society of them still remaining in old Peterborough, and they keep one posted in the hops and mishaps of the old town. After some six weeks of hard toil—day after day trudging through alkali mud holes, water sveals, lakes, rivers and creeks, I have at last reached that country known as "God's country," and well repaid have I been for the hardship and toil we have endured. Many and many a man has turned back upon the trail and cut into the for Ontario, and many a curse have the Government pamphlets got for advising the people to try their fortunes, or rather their misfortunes, as those disappointed settlers have chosen to call them, and not few in the number who have lost their all in attempting to make their way through this country single-handed. It is truly discouraging when one has no means dog himself and conveyance out of one mud hole then he is into another, and no sooner is he out of this than he sees nothing down upon him one of those much dreaded prairie fires, and here again he has to turn and burn the prarie behind, and draw his waggon back upon the burned land to save his little fortune. It is a MOST beautiful sight, a great prarie fire at night, flying across the country, licking up as it were, every thing before it: but when daylight dawns upon us how changed is the aspect of affairs. Ah! dreary indeed is the sight that meets the beholder's eye. Nothing but a black, smouldering country as far as the eye can reach: desolate, indeed, does it look: nature has lost its charms; no living creature is to be seen; for days and days you travel through this country—no feed for man or beast. Now, is it at all wonderful that man's spirits fail him and causes him to turn his face once more to civilization? I should say not! Courage and hard work is all that is wanting to overcome all this. I know that if ours had not have been a large party we would never have reached this country at the season of the year that we attempted it. Sometimes we had as many as six oxen on our waggon at once, and then we had to unload and dig the waggon out, and when we got it to the surface it looked more like a Barnum's circus waggon than anything else, the wheels being one mass of alkali mud. But, like everything else, this, too, must have an ending. We arrive at last in the country known as the Shell River district. It is truly a most beautiful section. This country has not been surveyed as yet, except in 12 mile blocks, so we had to subdivide in order to ascertain the numbers of the lots. This done, we are not long choosing which shall be our little estate for life. We are situated about five miles from the river. I believe ——— think we have made a great mistake in not getting upon its banks. However, I can not see the matter in the same light: It is all very well for one to advise without knowing the nature of the country. If one wanted to run a steam farm he must go to the river. However, as my ambition does not lay in that direction I have settled east of the stone ridge. Major Boulton informed me that just before leaving Ontario he was at Ottawa, and saw Sir John A. and Col. Dennis, and they informed him to make for the Shell River, and upon this information he wanted me to settle near him, but not liking the country we came down south some six miles. I think the Major would now trade farms and give Sir John A's. advice into the bargain, as Mr. Tupper has informed me this morning that the C.P.R.R. Engineers have abandoned the Shell River crossing and are coming up the valley about one mile south of my lot (24). This will put me as close to the R. R. as I wish to get, while the Major will be about 9 miles north of it, so you can see what my prospects are likely to be. I am now erecting a house for my mother. I will also commence building next week, as I want to put up about 20 tons for the coming winter. I have got a fair amount of ploughing done for next year, and have also seed growing to plant with. All which you may say is not so bad for a greenhorn. When we came into this section there was not a settler within a radius of fifty miles; now I am the ocean 150 settlers. We will have a store this fall, a saw and grist mill will be running next summer. All this has been done since last May, and the people keep tumbling in as fast as they can come. This settlement bids fair to be one of the finest in the North-West, and I think that there are lots of people remaining in Peterborough who are throwing away chances they are not likely to get again for some time to come."

Other Fellows Think so too.

There was one thing a man can have
In all this world of woe and strife,
That turns the bitterest pot too sweet,
And that one thing's no easy wife.
Dost know that I love my girl
Her rosy cheeks or raven hair?
She holds my heart, because she laughs—
Because she laughs, and doesn't care.

I put my hands just where it suits,
And find them where I put them, too;
That is a thing you must allow.
A shop can very seldom do.
I leave my papers on my desk;
She never treats them in a heap.
Or takes to light the kitchen stove
The very one I want to keep.

On winter nights my cozy dame
Will warm her toes before the fire;
She never scolds about the lamp,
Or wants the wick a trifle higher.
On Sundays she is not so fine
But what her ruffles I can hug;
I light my pipe just where I please,
And spill the ashes on the rug.

The bed is never filled with "shams"—
A thing some women vilely plan
To worry servants half to death.
And spoil the temper of a man.
She lets me sleep to any hour.
Nor raises any horrid din.
If in I roll, long hours after them,
To be quite late when I come in.

I tell you, Jack, if you would wed,
Just get a girl who lets things run:
She'll keep her temper like a lamb,
And help you on to lots of fun.
Don't look for money, style, or show.
Or blandishments, ripe and rare;
Just take the one who laughs at fate—
Who laughs, and shows she doesn't care

You think, perhaps, our household wars
Are just percussions a little mixed;
Oh, when they get too horrid bad,
We still about and get things fixed.
What compensation has a man
Who earns his bread by sweat of brow,
If home is made a battle-ground,
And life one long, eternal row?

PETERBOROUGH, AUGUST 26, 1880.

MAY'S LOVERS.

CHAPTER II—Continued.

Her merry laugh soon satisfied the sailor; and Grace, May, and he sat for a long time in the deepening twilight, talking over the events of his former visit, and those of the interval since they had met.

Grace wanted to steal away several times; but May each time contrived some excuse to keep her in the room. She did not want to be alone with her lover. She could not exactly tell how she really felt towards him. Certainly, she did not want any of the rough, loving caresses he was wont to bestow; upon her directly they were alone together.

The evening wore on without the sailor having an opportunity to ask concerning the love he had left in her charge. But gradually something of the old feeling, which had prompted her originally to accept him, began to steal upon her.

She found herself listening with more and more interest to all he was saying. The man's innate manly character, as it showed itself in his conversation, could not but influence her; the consciousness of great power always greatly employed; consideration for all that was weak and tender; hearty and healthy contempt for everything that was mean and underhand; charity and forgiveness for all openly-acknowledged faults; abhorrence of assumed and hypocritical virtue; and, to crown all, the tender solicitude for all women, 'for May's sake,' as he whispered, when Grace was not in hearing.

She could listen to it then. She was fast beginning to feel the effects of the influence he exerted over her.

Few women, more particularly of such a nature as May, can resist the indefinable interest which such characters as Gordon Dare exert, and few can be long in their company unmoved.

May, who had once fallen under the charm—for she had fancied herself in love with him at the time of their engagement—soon yielded again, and was beginning to wish what she herself had most striven to prevent—namely, that they two might be left alone.

She felt the injustice she had done him in her thoughts, and wished that she could make him some amends without telling him. She began to consider whether she could get Grace out of the room, when Henry Trevor came in, and put an end to all chance.

Lights were brought and the illusion was dispelled.

Supper was announced, and soon after Gordon left. He was to sleep at the 'Dragon.'

Just before he left, Grace carried them all off to the drawing-room; and when Gordon was going to say good night, she sent her cousin Henry to get his hat, and then followed him, so as to give Gordon and May five minutes alone.

May was nervous again. The feeling produced by the long conversation had worn off, and she did not welcome this 'good night.' She felt that she must act her part.

Gordon began.

'I'm so glad to see you again, little May blossom,' he said, 'although it's only for so short a time.'

'Is it really only for a month, Gordon?'

'That's all this time. I have that most wearing of all duties to get through this time—to see the cargo shipped.'

'What a shame! Can't you get off it?'

'No, little lassie; but still a month's better than nothing. Well, I must be off. Are you glad to have me back with you, May?'

'Oh, Gordon, how can you ask?'

'And have you thought about me, or spoken about me at all? It's very nice to think on a cold watch, that there's someone at home who is thinking kindly of one.'

'Why, you know, Gordon, we all think kindly about you,' she answered, evading the question.

She was strangely loth to deceive him to-night.

'Yes, yes, I know; but I don't mean in that way. What one likes to feel, when one's away is that there is one little face that beams less gladly, one little heart that is less joysome, on account of one's absence. Has this been so with you May, little darling?' he added after a moment's pause.

He seemed to hunger after some openly-confessed love.

'Of course it has, Gordon,' she answered, it might be, just a shade pettishly. 'It has been absolutely awful since you left. I've missed you in lots of things. I've had to do everything myself. There's been no one to bother my head for me at breakfast so one to bother my gloves for me, nor put my shawl straight, nor fetch my hat, nor anything. I declare it has been positively dreadful!'

Gordon Dare laughed at her pleasantry, so that she might not see how it jarred upon him, put his arm round her waist, kissed her forehead, or rather, sniff her.

She [illegible] him, and kissed to him a g[illegible] night.

He went out to Henry Trevor, who was pacing away contentedly outside, talking to Grace.

Gordon said 'Good night' to her, shouted himself as he was just going to kiss her, declared that it was out of forgetfulness that they were both grown so old, and left Grace, who ran in laughing to tell May.

Gordon filled his pipe, and turned aside to a corner of the house, which was underneath May's window, for shelter for his light. He lit a wax match, and by the light of it he saw a small piece of paper with some writing on it.

It was May's writing.

'Some of my little woman's nonsense,' he murmured to himself. 'Can't be very important, or it wouldn't be there.'

He lighted his pipe, and, as the match was still burning, he held it close to the paper, and read something which induced him to take it, and try to read more; but the match went out, and Henry Trevor called to him, so he joined his friend.

The visitor's one did not find Dare so good a companion as usual. He was pre-occupied, and said not a word.

At last, after a long silence, Trevor turned to him, and asked him what he was thinking about.

'May,' he answered incoherently.

'The little rogue! She's as pretty as ever, isn't she?'

'Yes. By the way, who's the new curate?'

'What, Blake? Oh, he's a good enough fellow in his way. I believe he works the parish capitally, and all that. He's made an awful lot of by the womenfolk female population.'

'I suppose he's a great deal at the Vicarage. How does Grace like him?'

'I believe very much, as a curate. I judge so, from her often mentioning in her letters the good that the Rev. Ralph Blake has done in the parish. She hasn't, however, actually told me anything.'

'Ah! His name's Ralph. I was afraid so.'

'Afraid so, my dear Gordon! What on earth do you mean?'

'I mean this, Harry,'—and suddenly his entire manner changed, and his voice grew hard—'that I think the man means to step between May and me—that he wants us separated and covets her for himself. Let him beware! He shall never come between May and me. I had sooner we were both dead than that should happen! Don't ask me what I mean by what I have said; but if you think it better, warn the Rev. Ralph Blake of the cost of his undertaking. And now, good night, Harry! I won't ask you in, as I daresay you are as tired as myself. Good night!'

Such was part of the effect of a scrap of paper, fallen into wrong hands.

On it was—

RALPH,—

'To-morrow, very early, at the Sealight Pool.'

When Grace returned to the drawing-room, she found May evidently preparing to go to bed, and as May did, pretty much as she planned, Grace made no opposition; so she took her candle, silently kissed Grace, and went slowly up stairs.

Her blind was still up when she went into her room, and the moon was shining aslant through the window. She shut her door, put out the candle, and, throwing up the window, leaned out.

The scene before her was a lovely one.

The dew upon the grass glistened in the moonlight; the hedge-row beyond loomed black; the gravel drive gleamed out in bold relief, like a sinuous silver stream, cut off by the laurels near the lodge; the shrubs stood like silent guardians of the night; while the tall, dark, firs of the churchyard cast sombre, giant shadows over lawn and path, seeking to hide the beauty of the scene by their uncouth ugliness, and succeeding only in becoming gainly beauty's ungainly foils.

Beyond, the lights of the village were twinklingly disappearing; for village bed-time was at hand, and Nature's sweetest peace was fast stealing o'er her whole domain.

But May had a soul above such considerations, and, pretty as she looked, leaning her round young face out of her window, her golden hair coaxed by the moon's dalntiest silver rays, and her whole attitude expressive of earnest meditation, her thoughts were of the world worldly, and dwelt on the events of the day.

The most beautiful Madonna that Raphael ever painted was, on the reverse, but common canvas.

CHAPTER III.

The next morning, at about hal-past eight, the vicar and his son met in the breakfast-room, and waited for the two girls.

The vicar rang the bell, and the housemaid answered it.

'Where are the young ladies, Eliza?' asked he.

'Miss Grace is ill abed with a headache, sir, and wishes Miss May to give you your breakfasts; and Miss May is out, sir—leastways, I think so, for her room door is open, and she don't seem to be there.'

'Tell George to let her understand the breakfast waits for her.'

The housemaid disappeared.

'Not at all an unusual thing for her to be up and about before breakfast, as you know, Henry. She is probably somewhere in the garden, gathering some fruit or a few flowers for the table,' said the vicar, turning to his son. 'Something to surprise and please her old father with, I'doubt sure. Have you seen anything of her, Henry?'

'No; for I was tired and slept rather longer than usual, and have only just got down. I did not get out for my usual turn round.'

'Ah, here comes May at last'—looking round with a smile of welcome as a light step was heard approaching.

It was Eliza returned.

'If you please, sir, George says he can't see Miss May nowhere. Mr. Henry, he would like to speak to you, if you please, sir.'

'What is it? I'll come.'

'Don't be long, Henry, it's rather annoying to have the place turned upside down like this.' (There was nothing the vicar so much disliked as an interrupted or delayed meal.) 'Can't you let George wait until after breakfast? It can't be anything very important.'

'Well, George, good morning. What is it?' said Henry, when he got outside.

'Good morning, sir. I don't exackly know, please, sir, but I can't understand this about Miss May. I ain't seen nothing on 'er this morning. I dunno quite what to make on it; I don't think as it's all quite right.'

'How do you mean?'

'If so be as you'll come along o' me, I'll tell you.'

'Wait a moment.'

He went in, and ran up to Grace's room.

'Grace, dear, I am going out to look after May, who has strolled away somewhere; so I want you to get up and go down to father, and get him his breakfast. Can you manage this, with your head?' he asked.

She felt, with that wonderful instinct of a woman, that there was something lurking which she was not to hear at present; so she assented, and was soon down-stairs giving the vicar his breakfast, and asking in a general way about May.

Henry, meanwhile, had joined George, the gardener.

'Now tell me exactly all you have to say, and give me your reasons.'

'First, then, if you please, sir: if Miss May had been anywhere about—I mean a' soon her, as I've been here ever since six o'clock, 'cepts' my breakfast time, and then I was in the green'us. Second, last night, when I was a-waterin' the cowe, the pool in the home field were all right as usual; an' this morning, when I look there, I see lots of footmarks all round it, and the bushes trumped about. I daren't say how Miss May may have fallen in.'

'Eh! Why she never goes there!' cried Henry Trevor, starting and stopping. 'You don't mean, George?'

[illegible] were, as the gardener had deduced, [illegible] of footmarks round the pool, and the shrubs and brambles had been displaced and broken. In one place a good-sized branch had been torn off one of the willows overhanging the water, and this evidently quite recently. The water was muddy and muddy.

'You are right, indeed, George!' said Trevor. 'When did you first see this?'

'Only just now, as I come to look for Miss May, sir.'

'What an awful idea! How are we to find out whether there is anything in the water? The pool is deep, isn't it?'

'They do say as there's a hole in it some thirty or forty feet to the bottom; but I don't think as the greater part on it's anything like that.'

'I suppose we must try and drag it. What is there about the place that we can see without arousing suspicion as to what we are about? It's no use needlessly alarming anyone else. That rake of yours isn't any use, I fear; we can try it, though.'

'I've been a-preggin' of it, sir, but I couldn't feel nothing.'

'No, I thought not; but we'll try together. Here; you stand firm and hold my left hand! There; don't let me go! No; it's no use,' he added, after pushing it down into the water; 'I can't touch any bottom with it. Stay! What's this? The rake's caught in something! It doesn't feel like a weed. Ah! it is, though; now it gives!' (And the jerk nearly made both him and the gardener lose their balance.) 'Hallo! what's this on the end tooth? Heaven have mercy on us all, it's muslin! You must go and get some kind of drags and two or three men. My poor, poor father! It will almost kill him!' he thought.

He and the gardener both hurried off.

As soon as he got to the house he sent Eliza for the doctor, and then turned into the breakfast-room to tell the dread news.

The vicar and his sons were both seated at the table.

'Well, Henry, I can't see what need there can have been for you to stay out all this time! And where's May? Why, what's the matter with you my son?' the old man added afterwards, seeing Henry's white face. 'Are you not well?'

'Yes; but something has happened to May, father—an accident. But she'll be all right directly. I am just going to see about it. Will you stop here with Grace until I get back? She has had a "fall"—near the pool. She's got a little wet; but it's nothing serious. I shall be back with her directly.'

And with these words, and a significant gesture to Grace, he left the room.

'Susan,' he said, to one of the maids, 'go down to the "Dragon," and ask Mr. Dare to come up at once. Be quick, there's a good girl!'

He found the gardener had gone to the pool, with one or two other men, and was in the act of following him when the doctor arrived.

He explained, in a few words, why he had sent for him, and they ran together to the pool.

There they found the worst suspicions were confirmed.

The man had just succeeded in getting the body on to the land; a younger gardener, named Atkins, having dived into the water, had succeeded in loosening the body from the weeds which had held it down.

The doctor a young practioner, at once assumed the direction of everything necessary to be done.

'Life seems quite extinct,' he said, after a rapid examination. 'At all events, we can do nothing here. We must move Miss Trevor at once to the house. Will you, Mr. Trevor, go on and make the necessary arrangements. We shall want a hot bath got ready. And will you also send down to Mr. Evans, and ask him, from me, to come up at once.

PETTIT'S EYE-SALVE.

An Infallible Remedy for all Diseases of the Eye (acute or chronic), Granulations of the Lids, Discharges of the Lachrymal Glands, Pain, and Weakness of the Vision from any cause.

The American Eye-Salve is presented to the public with the assurance of its efficiency as a curative of most diseases of the eye, acute or chronic inflamation, whether induced by scrofulous origin or otherwise, weakness or defect of vision, diseased tone of the optic nerve, or a diseased state of the tissues constituting that organ. Also, for all persons whose vocation requires an incessant action of the eyes, the salve will act as a charm in restoring a uniform healthy action, where weakness, pain, and misery may have been long threatened with a fatal termination. It is the most simple, safe and effectual remedy ever discovered. The materials of which it is made are purely vegetable, and costly, compounded with elaborate care and exactness, safe in its application, being used externally, and, of course, avoiding the pain and danger which necessarily attends the introduction of caustic, mercurial and eye washes. Ringworm and old Chronic Sores, of scrofulous origin, or resulting from whatever cause, yield to the American Eye-Salve. IT IS USED SUCCESSFULLY FOR PILES. Its soothing effect is immediate, and a permanent cure requires but a few applications. The proprietors of "Dr. J. P. Pettit's American Eye-Salve" while making new and improved machinery for making a more perfect box for the Eye-Salve, have changed the Trade Mark on the cover so as to correspond with the Cut on the Wrapper. Circulars, advertisements, etc. We call attention to this, as it might otherwise be regarded as counterfeiting.

Not the slightest Affinity exists between the nauseious cough mixtures with which the market is flooded and that successful preparation—Northrop and Lyman's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda. It stands alone, distinct, is like itself and nothing else. It embodies the best results of advanced pharmaceutical science. It accomplishes positive decisive results, effectually relieving coughs (when the lungs are not tuberculous or hopelessly affected), colds, laryngitis, and diseases of a scrofulous origin. While it does not cure consumption, it is the most reliable means of defence against the dreaded scurge. The invigorating properties of the hypophosphites reimburse the system debilitated by the constant tear and wear of a cough, while the paroxysms rapidly diminish in violence, in consequence of the soothing, emollient action of the cod liver oil on the inflamed lung membrane. The phosphorus, lime and soda, in combination with it, are all natural constituents in the construction of the bodily edifice, which, in a state of decay, lacks a sufficiency of the elements. These the hypophosphites supply, increasing the nutritive properties of the blood, and building up and rehabilitating the tottering human structure with a degree of promptitude as astonishing as it is gratifying to the invalid. A perceptible gain in flesh as well as in strength is one of the consequences of using this standard preparation, which both time and experience have demonstrated to be fully worthy of the confidence reposed in it. Prepared by Northrop & Lyman, Toronto, and sold by all druggists.

Joy Among the Children.

Colman's Sweet Castor Oil, equally suitable for children and adults. Endorsed by over 600 doctors in Canada.

The difficulty of administrating nauseous medicines, and the desirability of having the pleasant to the taste, induced T. Copland to undertake researches which resulted in the discovery of a Sweet Castor Oil, perfectly palatable, of the same strength and medicinal qualities as the ordinary Castor Oil, and which equally safe and harmless, yet acting with more certainty, and producing neither nausea nor griping. Some children say it is "nasty, others call it syrup—they all say they like it. Compound pectoral "If children drink it, they want it," exclaims "So had to hide the bottle or they would have finished it right off;" another—"My little girl had taken it twice without any trouble, and does not know what it is, though she knows the ordinary Castor Oil, and we could never get her to take it without a fight;" you cannot—all with you success of your Sweet Castor Oil; it is unequalled thing—more to take the place of all the nauseous oils."

The extraordinary demand for this improvement on a simple household medicine has induced short-sighted individuals into the manufacture of spurious imitations, which, by their unscrupulous (which unprincipled) per- (the unwitnessing to pull on the reputation of [illegible] article) by stating that the genuine [illegible] Castor Oil, is an Emulsion, Compound, and therefore bad. [illegible] Sweet Castor Oil is the established Magnum. [illegible] & Co's labels on the above genuine [illegible] are protected by the Trade Mark [illegible] Proprietors, Messrs. J. Lyman, Toronto.

MANHOOD:

HOW LOST, HOW RESTORED!

We have recently published a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical and permanent cure (without medicine) of Nervous Debility, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediment to Marriage, etc., resulting from excesses.

☞Price in a sealed envelope, only 6 cts. or two postage stamps.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicine or the use of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

☞This lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

PETERBOROUGH, SEPT'R 2, 1880.

AN IMPUDENT ASSAILANT.

Hypocrisy is said to be the sort of homage that vice pays to virtue, and on this hypothesis only can we understand the transparent affectation of honesty and sincerity with which the uniformly mendacious and slanderous course of the editorial columns of our contemporary the Review, is veneered. The wicked partners in the press thus pay hypocritical homage to the virtues which surround the crazy quilt clerics in the pulpit. Under an article appropriately headed "shameless falsehoods"—(we would suggest that the wicked partners keep the caption "standing," as it will suit any average article in the Review)—our contemporary edifies its readers with one of its characteristic onslaughts on the EXAMINER, in which, out of the abundance of its heart, our cotem. shrieks hysterically "falsehood! falsehood!" That is about the only kind of argument of which our contemporary is capable, and people have become so accustomed to the parrot-like cry that they always look for it when they see the Review hopelessly worsted in discussion. The truly good writer prates of the "suggestio falsi," and the "suppressio veri," as learnedly as if he knew what he was writing about—he has a soul above plain English—and harrows the feelings of his readers by a grotesque agglomeration of sentences, (fearfully and wonderfully made, in which the simple words are spelled as nearly as the writer can recollect and the more difficult ones on the phonetic principle), the burden of which appears to be that in his erudite opinion, the EXAMINER was not able to answer "our article on the Dominion Finances." The article in question, which was a mere tissue of absurdities, we have, in the mind of every intelligent person effectually disposed of, and we fancy it will require a more profound process of reasoning than that followed by the Review, to convince any sane man that it is possible to pay off this year's debts with the money spent last year; which is precisely what our sage friend would contend. With brazen hardihood, the Review scribe accuses us of falsehood in making the assertion that it (the Review) had stated that the Mackenzie Government was responsible for the deficit of 1878-'79 and we willingly give the evidence upon which it arrives at that conclusion. It quotes from its former article (the italics are ours):

> But let us see, what is of infinitely more consequence to the people at large, how this reasonable adjustment of the figures makes the question of deficits stand for the last five years in the Mackenzie Government between being responsible for the first three of them, and the Macdonald-Tilley Government for only the last one of them:
> | | |
> |---|---|
> | Deficit in 1876-5 | $1,980,726 |
> | " 1876-7 | 1,459,027 |
> | " 1877-8 | 1,128,146 |
> | " 1878-9 | 2,526,269 |
> | " 1879-80 | 203,127 |

If the Macdonald-Tilley (which sounds sounds ominously for Tupper) government were only responsible for the "last one" of these alleged deficits, clearly the Mackenzie administration are charged with all the preceding deficits—an admirable example, our learned confrere will note, of the suggestio falsi, on its part. But as a matter of fact, there never existed any such deficit in the financial year 1878-79, as $3,286,999. There was no such deficit last year as $203,127. The public accounts of last year show that the deficit was actually, by the admission of Mr. Tilley's official returns, $1,693,127, and will very likely prove to be much more when the accounts are laid before Parliament. The figures, as presented by the Review lie most palpably, and our virtuous contemporary, though it knows their dishonesty, does not scruple to use them to ground a charge of falsehood against the EXAMINER. And on such puerile grounds our contemporary goes on to say: "When a public journal will descend to such palable and wilful perversion of facts as we have shown the EXAMINER to be guilty of in this single issue, it is evident that the discussion of public questions with it for the purpose of illiciting the truth is out of the question." In point of fact it is our contemporary, and not we, who would make the truth "illicit." The Review winds up as follows—we only give it as a specimen of the flexibility and elasticity of the English language:

> "But there is another and certainly no less important side to such an exhibition of utter disregard for truthfulness of statement. It is all very well to say that these statements are made in the interest of party and as such are pardonable. We deny it or if they are either pardonable or justifiable, and even if they were on these low grounds the blackest ground of the countries great upon which all public journals should at least seek to stand, demands that such misrepresentations should be observed in public discussion. We were going to say, as well as in ordinary transactions, but we very much fear that the journal which will wilfully pervert facts in the interest of its party will be very apt to pervert them when its own interest is likely to be served thereby. The journal which will knowingly misstate a fact in order to score a point for its party will scarcely hesitate to misstate its circulation when the interests of its advertisement patronage depends upon the extent of its circulation."

We can afford to pass over good-naturedly the spleen which is indicated by the admitted superiority of the circulation of the EXAMINER—we don't wonder that it proves somewhat indigestible to our contemporary—and we only advise our truly good but somewhat excitable friend, to buy an elementary work on grammar, hire a cheap boy from one of the Ward schools, and spend a few months in wrestling with his educational infirmity in the bush woods.

PETERBOROUGH, SEPT. 2, 1880.

A GOOD WORK WELL BEGUN.

For the first time since the last general elections, the National Policy has been placed squarely on its trial before the people, and the results of the voting in Toronto West and North Ontario may be taken as a fair criterion of public sentiment in regard to the Protective system, after an experience of two years. The former is a city constituency with large manufacturing interests; the other is a large agricultural county; and hence the verdict upon the N. P. as expressed by the people at the polls possesses even more than a political interest, since it is the index to what might be expected from the country at large, were a general appeal to the electorate to be made now. It is gratifying to find the tendency of public feeling in regard to the N.P. to be strongly and pronouncedly hostile to the injurious tariff robbery, mis-called the National Policy. Both the mechanics, artisans and workingmen in the city, and the farmers in the country, have recorded an emphatic verdict, protesting against the legalized confiscation of the earnings of the people involved in the present tariff. In West Toronto the contest was one full of hopelessness for the Liberal candidate. The Tory candidate was Mayor of the city; he had the support of the late member's influence, which was not lessened by the fact that he still resides in the constituency as Lieut.-Governor of the Province; he had to contend against the influence of the local office-holders of the Dominion Government and the intimidation practised by the Government Appraiser of the Customs Department, sent from Ottawa for the purpose; he had to overcome an unfair and crafty appeal to religious intolerance; and he had a Tory majority of 637 to contend against. Though he failed of election, Mr. Ryan made a noble fight, and the result points out how the cause of Liberalism has progressed since the last election, and how decided a growth of hostile feeling against the N. P. there has been since September 1878. In the last general elections the vote in West Toronto stood as follows:

J. B. Robinson	2,165
Thos Hodgins	1,528
Tory majority	637

The vote of Saturday stood:

Beatty	2,098
Ryan	1,736
Tory majority	362
Reduction of Tory majority	275
Tory vote, 1878	2,165
" " 1880	2,098
Decrease	67
Liberal vote 1878	1,528
" " 1880	1,736
Increase	208

With the tide setting so strongly against the N. P., in this this the very stronghold of Toryism and of manufacturers' influence, Mr. Ryan may rest assured that an opportunity will be afforded him in the next general elections of pushing the party vote to a majority, and of securing without doubt the seat for which he made so splendid a struggle on Saturday. The Conservatives still hold the seat, but the moral significance and the political effect of the victory is with the Liberal candidate and the Liberal party.

In North Ontario there are equally significant results. In September of 1878, this county returned the Liberal candidate, Mr. Wheler, by a majority of 54 votes, over Mr. Gibbs. Now Mr. Gibbs comes before the farmers of North Ontario not only as the representative of that tariff which Sir John and his followers say has given "protection to the farmer," but as the candidate of a strong and powerful government, with all the influence of power and patronage at his back. The farmers mark their appreciation of the taxation tariff by an emphatic majority of 257 in favor of the Liberal candidate and a liberal tariff. In the last general elections the vote, as corrected before the County Judge, stood in North Ontario as follows:

Wheeler	2,213
Gibbs	2,167
Liberal Majority	46

The vote of Saturday stood:

Wheeler.... mal	610
Gibbs	468
Liberal majority	157

What has taken place in Toronto West and North Ontario, in the change of public sentiment, and the growth of the public conviction that the injurious tariff robbery perpetrated by the N. P. must result in ruin and national bankruptcy, has been going on in every constituency in this province and in the Dominion, and if another general election were to take place to-morrow, the Tory party would be swept away with an avalanche of popular indignation more emphatic and pronounced than that of 1874.

LAST WEEK we invited the Review to give us an estimate of the probable result of five years of the N. P., with an annual deficit of from $1,700,000 to $2,000,000. The subject seems too large for it, and we will give it an easier one. Will our contemporary favor us with its computation of five per cent. of $75,000?

THE PACIFIC RAILWAY

The British Capitalist appears to be as backward as ever in coming forward to the relief of the Canadian Government in the matter of the Pacific Railway construction. The most authentic intelligence points to the probability that a syndicate with Sir Hugh Allan at its head will be contracted with the undertaking. The company request that the Government should complete the portion of the work now under contract—including the $10,000,000 job in British Columbia—that the Government hand over fifty millions of acres of land in the North-West, and shall pay them a bonus of $10,000 per mile, for the 2,000 miles to be constructed. The company are then to work and maintain the whole line. These facts are gathered from Hon. Mr. Pope's pocket-organ, the Ottawa Citizen. The upshot of the matter is that the Government are to hand to my "dear Sir Hugh" the following trifle:

Work completed and under contract-2	$5,000,000
$10,000 per mile for 2000 miles	20,000,000
50,000,000 acres land, say $2 per acre	100,000,000
	$125,000,000

That is to say, Sir Hugh Allan will acquire sole possession of the Pacific Railway, which Sir Charles Tupper estimated to cost $72,000,000, and receive $125,000,000 of public money and public domain for doing so. The work completed comprises the difficult and expensive portions of the railway, and the Company receive $10,000 a mile for the prairie sections which Sir Charles Tupper estimated to cost $12,500 a mile. Sir John Macdonald claimed last session that the Government could build the railway from the proceeds of the lands in eleven years, and have a handsome surplus over and above the expenditure necessary. Now he proceeds to make Sir Hugh Allan and his friends a present of $56,000,000 in cash, and the railway, besides fifty millions of acres of land! In 1872, Sir George Cartier and Sir John Macdonald agreed with Sir Hugh that "whatever sum (for election bribery funds) you or your friends may advance shall be recouped to you." That stipulation appears now to be about to be carried out, and Sir Hugh will no doubt be handsomely recompensed out of his millions of the people's money, for the paltry $360,000 spent in maintaining Sir John in power in 1872. Thus the whirligig of time brings in its revenges.

THE GRAND JUNCTION BONUS.

As will be seen by a report which appears elsewhere in this issue, the judgment of the Courts at Toronto in the matter of the disputed bonus between the Grand Junction Railway Company and the County of Peterborough, has been adverse to the County, the Court ordering the issuance of the debentures, and their being placed in the hands of trustees for the railway. This result is somewhat disappointing, as justice was evidently on the side of the contention of the County, no matter what the law may be. The case will by the resolution of the Council at the January session, be carried to Appeal in the Supreme Court, when we hope for better luck. If, however, the Council be compelled to pay this luckless bonus, and $75,000 of the money of the ratepayers of the County be forced out of their pockets for the benefit of an enterprise which will do them more harm than good, the ratepayers will do well to remember through whose exertions it was mainly that they have thus been plundered—who, for a selfish pecuniary end, secured the passage of this by-law, under which they appear to run a fair chance of losing $75,000 of hard cash, with the possible addition of five years' interest. The same individual made a desperate effort to force the town into a similar position, but, fortunately for the ratepayers, failed to do so.

PROTECTION WANTED.

It may not be generally known, but it is the fact, that quite an extensive business is being carried on in the export of Canadian frogs from this vicinity to Rochester and other American cities. These national warblers are being captured, killed and exported by the thousand, and if the work is kept up at its present rate, their evening melody will soon cease to be heard in the land. These foreigners are allowed to make a slaughter market of our ponds and marshes, free of toll or tax, and it has been suggested that it ought to be the duty of our paternal Government, in pursuance of its policy of "Canada for the Canadians," to place an export tax on the shipment of the frogs, and thus force the pernicious Yankee to his fair contribution to the Canadian revenue.

The Collingwood Messenger says "the news that Mr. Gibbs, the Conservative candidate for North Ontario was defeated by a majority of 157 is not a matter of surprise to us, notwithstanding that we were assured by private information from the Riding that Wheeler would be the dead duck. When the Conservatives nominated W. H. Gibbs they courted defeat, as they could not have chosen a more unpopular man in many respects. He is haughty and purse-proud, and like a great many others whose ideas of their own self-importance emanate from their dollars, his "codfish aristocracy" is of the most unpopular and repelling nature. Allegiance to party is all very well, but when it comes to asking farmers to vote for men who would spurn their acquaintance with lofty contempt at another time, it is expecting too much of human nature. The day is gone when "aristocratic" politicians who have no sympathy with the majority of the people can carry doubtful constituencies. In this day people do not blindly bow the knee before a nominated figure-head, as their intelligence leaves them to think for themselves."

WE NOTE that the appeal of the Ontario Government against the iniquitous conduct of the Dominion Government in refusing to ratify the award of the Arbitration to whom the settlement of the North-West boundary of the Province was referred, is engaging the attention of the Imperial Privy Council. We have been unable to elicit even an expression of opinion on the subject from our Tory contemporary here, but fortunately we have a Local Government who have sufficient patriotism to stand up for the rights of the Province.

THE SIEGE OF CANDAHAR.

Expected Retreat of Ayoub Khan towards Herat.

General Roberts' Advance—The British Troops in Good Health.

LONDON, Aug. 30.

In the House of Commons this evening Lord Hartington announced that he had received a message from Gen. Roberts dated Khelat-i-Ghilzai, August 23rd, stating that he would start on the 24th, and by easy stages expected to be 20 miles from Candahar by the 29th, and that the troops were in good health and spirits.

A Quetta despatch says:—News from Candahar to the 26th says: When Ayoub Khan learned of Gen. Roberts' approach he abandoned the investment of Candahar, and took a position with his whole force on the Argandab river. The troops are pushing forward with marvellous rapidity.

A despatch from Calcutta says:—The more common impression is that Ayoub Khan will retreat towards Herat, and it is universally hoped that the Government will allow Gen. Roberts to follow him to Herat if necessary. The cholera at Peshawur is dying out. A telegram from Simla reports that the Khyber valley is fairly quiet.

A Bombay despatch says there was a great scare at Kurrachee, Scinde, on Friday, in consequence of reports by the natives that 15,000 Pathans had assembled on the hills and meditated an attack. Arms were distributed to the whites and reinforcements were ordered up, but the night passed quietly. The Pathan residents were disarmed on Saturday.

A despatch from Chaman, dated Sunday, says: Gen. Roberts marched from Khelat-i-Ghilzai for Candahar on the 25th. He took with him all the British garrison and handed over the fort to the Ameer's officials. He expected to reach Candahar on Monday and attack Ayoub on Tuesday. He has sent a plan for combined action with Gen. Phayre, if the latter can reach Takhtipul on Monday. This is, however, impossible, in consequence of the scarcity of food and forage and the wholesale desertion of the drivers. Takhtipul is thirty-five miles south of Candahar.

A Simla despatch says the retirement of General Stewart's force has been practically completed without injury to the health of the troops and in perfect order.

The British political officer at Candahar telegraphs on the 25th as follows:—"The country is quieting down. Ayoub's force is reduced to regulars and a few Ghazis. It is reported he wishes to retreat, but is prevented by the Cabulese troops. The siege is practically raised. A large quantity of food was brought in yesterday."

Mr. Gladstone's Tour.

A short Address to a Couple of Deputations at Glasgow.

LONDON, Aug. 30.—Mr. Gladstone has arrived in the Clyde on his tour of the coast. In reply to addresses by deputations of the Greenock and Renfrewshire Liberal Associations who paid a complimentary visit on board the Grantully Castle, Mr. Gladstone said it was evident that he had not been unmindful of the pledges given at the general election, and as they had begun so should they continue, and so should they end their career. Whether that career should prove to be brief or prolonged the Liberal party could not violate its principles to meet any political emergency. They might either triumph in them or fall defending them. Mr. Gladstone added that his present trip was not political but for the purpose of regaining his health; still he was glad to meet representatives from one of the strongholds of Liberalism, and could only express his thanks and expectation that when some of the intricate problems which the Government had inherited from the last Administration were disposed of, the Government would have an opportunity to cultivate some seeds of its own planting.

The deputation then left the ship greatly pleased with the interview. Mr. Gladstone's health has been considerably benefitted by the sea air and freedom from pressing anxiety.

Trent Valley Navigation Notes.

The Montreal Journal of Commerce, of the 20th inst. says:—

"The Trent Valley Canal scheme is looming into importance. It is reported that a deputation of American capitalists from Oswego, accompanied by an engineer, will shortly proceed over the route which was recently traversed by a deputation from Montreal. The route is admittedly capable of being utilized for the purpose of a canal, if suitable locks can be constructed for the anticipated traffic. The most approved scheme is one that will permit barges of sufficient size being used to enable them to be conveyed from Midland, on the Georgian Bay, to Montreal, that their contents may there be elevated into sea-going vessels."

The Trenton Courier referring to a proposed excursion of commercial men from Oswego over the waters of the Trent Valley says:

"The time for the said excursion to take place will be shortly announced. The route of the excursion will be from Hastings through Rice Lake, calling at Idyl Wild, passing the Indian Village of Hiawatha up the Otonabee to Peterborough, thence by stage to Bridgenorth, thence by steamer through Chemong, Buckhorn, Pigeon, and Sturgeon Lakes, passing through the locks at Bobcaygeon to Fenelon Falls, thence by steamer through Cameron and Balsam Lakes to Coboconk the summit water of the Trent navigation. Thence by rail to Woodville. Here the party may go on to Midland or return home by Port Hope and G. T. Railroads. The cost of travel by carriage, rail and steamboat is $5.50, or from Trenton round to Trenton $6.50, and the time two days and a half."

Dummer Council.

The Council met at Warsaw on the 14th ult. Present, all the members except Mr. Wasson. Minutes of last meeting read and confirmed. The Reeve reported that Asphodel had appropriated $40 on boundary on condition of Dummer giving a like amount. On motion of Mr. Kelly, seconded by Mr. Hannon, the Clerk was instructed to notify the Clerk of Asphodel that the Council was of opinion that it was unfair for Dummer to be called on to put as much on boundary as Asphodel; Council was willing to expend on boundary in proportion of County valuation of the townships; and, if the Asphodel Council agreed to this, Dummer would meet the present appropriation of $40 with $37, and appoint Thos. Webster and Robt. Wigmore to expend the same. Petition of Elijah T. Hubble and four others for formation of a new School Section was received and filed, and Clerk instructed to notify the trustees concerned. Mr. Drain was appointed a Commissioner to arrange with Winfield Leeson about a road. On motion of Mr. Kelly seconded by Mr. Hannon, D. Drain was appointed a Commissioner to expend fines received to the amount of $25 on the road. On motion of Mr. Kelly seconded by Mr. Hannon; the fine of $2 imposed on Chas. H. Grant was ordered to be spent on the road in that division. On motion Mr. William Kidd's offer to collect the taxes of 1880 for $96 was accepted on condition of his furnishing good security; Clerk to have by-law for appointment drawn up for next meeting. Orders granted: To Jas. W. Taylor as Collector $50, and extra for collecting tax in No. 3, Asphodel, $10, amounting to $60. To James Henderson for fixing two scrapers $3 55. To W. Darling, part salary as Clerk, $30. By-laws passed: One to close the White Lake road across lots 25 and 27 in 6th con., and one to provide for the levy and collection of taxes for 1880. Amounts levied:—County, including equivalent for schools, $1,668.53; township, $776.79; S. S. No. 1, $729.15; No. 2, $373.25; No. 3 $284.59; No. 4, $241.90; No. 5, $225.12; Union, No. 6, Dummer part, $159.23; Asphodel part, $186.19; No. 9, $160.75; No. 11, including Building Fund, $171.09; Separate School, $27.03. Rates:—County 3½ mills; Township, 1½ mills; S. S. No. 1, 5½ mills; No. 2, 5½ mills; No. 3, 5½ mills; No. 4, 3 mills; No. 5, 6½ mills; Union, No. 6, 5½ mills; No. 9, 7½ mills; No. 11, 11½ mills; Separate School 2 4-5 mills. Council adjourned to meet at Old Town Hall, on 20th of September next.

Grand Junction Railway.

Decision Against the County of Peterboro'.

At the sitting of the Queen's Bench on Monday, before Chief Justice Hagarty, Justices Armour and Cameron, judgment was given on the rule nisi compelling the county of Peterborough to issue debentures to the value of $75,000, said debentures to be delivered over to trustees on behalf of the Grand Junction Railway. Objection to this is raised on several grounds, but the decision of the Court is that the rule be made absolute for the issue of a mandamus compelling the county to issue debentures to the amount required.

Mr. McPhillips, of Cameron & Appelbe appeared on behalf of the railway; the county was not represented.

Chief Justice Hagarty regretted the absence of counsel, who should be present at judgments in important cases. Counsel had stated that the Company were willing to take debentures at twenty years, which he considered was a very fair proposition. But if the county refused this proposition, then a mandamus must issue. Some trouble had been given about the back interest alleged to be due, but the railway is willing to take the debentures payable in twenty years from the present time, which he thought the county should accept. Mr. Justice Cameron upheld the appointment of trustees, and said the debentures could not pass out of the hands of trustees.

Mr. Justice Armour said the by-law passed sufficiently provided for the appointment of trustees. As regards interest he did not understand that the railway was entitled to back interest. The debentures must be placed with the interest and coupons attached in the hands of the trustees, and when they became due then the question as to the railway being entitled to back interest could come up. The case was going to be taken to the Court of Appeal, and he did not wish to state fully any view of the case he might entertain. He wished to hear other opinion as to the true construction of the said by-law in respect to this back interest claimed, whether the by-law can be viewed as an ordinary contract, or that the intention was that the accrued interest should go to the railway.

Chief Justice Hagarty expressed a strong hope that the legislature would complete their interference in this matter, if not, it would be the cause of much mischief.

The rule was made absolute, the writ damus not to issue until the expiration of three months.

THE LATE CAPT. SHERWOOD.

The Verdict of the Jury on the Cause of His Death Letter from Rev. J. Shaw.

WHITBY, Aug. 27.—In the inquest on the body of Capt. Sherwood this evening a little more evidence was taken and the jury retired at 8.45. They brought in the following verdict at 1 p.m.:—

"That on the 14th day of August, Capt. Sherwood came to his death from an overdose of sulphate of morphine, administered by mistake instead of quinine. The jury further say that the administration of the said was purely a mistake, and was made by one Archibald Denoon, and that no blame can be attributed to any other person."

LETTER FROM REV. J. SHAW.

The following letter appeared in the last issue of the Christian Guardian:—

"DEAR BRO.,—Under the depressing circumstances in which we have been placed as a family, by the double calamity that has fallen upon us, it is due to myself as well as to a sympathizing public that I should say a few words through the columns of the Christian Guardian.

More than one hundred letters and telegrams, laden with Christian sympathy, have already been received, and still they continue to come. If the friends sending them could only realize the comfort they have given us, they would feel amply rewarded for their trouble. We thank them from our hearts for their kind remembrance in these hours of sore trial.

If God had not been our refuge we should have utterly failed. As to the spiritual safety of our dear departed daughter, we have not the shadow of a doubt. On this point we have the most direct and positive testimony.

We have the same pleasing hope in reference to our much-beloved son-in-law, Captain Sherwood. On the day before his death he expressed to a friend his confidence in God and his faith in Christ as his Saviour from sin, and he was bearing his bereavement as a man and a Christian.

The newspaper reports in the main are correct, but there are two errors to which I would call special attention.

1st. Mr. Sherwood was not injured by coming in contact with any portion of the steamer in her fall; and as she lay in her burial robes, she looked even more beautiful than in life.

2nd. Captain Sherwood had been in the habit of taking quinine, and it was procured at his own request, and given to him by his own sister, Miss Sherwood, and was not "prescribed" by Dr. J. M. Shaw, as reported. The mistake was made by the druggist's clerk, who gave morphine instead of quinine, and the mistake was not discovered till it was too late to save him.

In answer to many enquiries, I may add that Mrs. Shaw remains in much the same condition. We hope that in answer to prayer her life may be spared.

Yours in affliction,

Whitby, Aug. 23, 1880. J. SHAW.

Montreal Musings.

How pleased I am when I drop in the Mechanics Institute to hover over my old friend the EXAMINER and get a distant glimpse of the doings in Peterborough. Your Lacrosse Club is playing well this season. Last Saturday our clubs were all excitement over the match—Shamrock vs Montreal. It was a great surprise to many the easy way in which the Montrealers won; the play was short but sharp—I think the best competed match we have ever seen in this city. The Shamrock backers lost heavily; they were so sure of winning that they were putting up five to one; they had the city billed with the announcement "the mystery will be solved"—it was solved to their disgust. Some of citizens are very anxious to make our exhibition a grand success; they formed themselves into a committee, for a great deal of talking, to have their names published to make the world believe they are the benefactors and saviours of our city and will allow no one but their own little clique to do the business and the talking; consequently there is not so much forthcoming from said committee as was anticipated. Every day a new scheme crops up in the way of concerts but only to get a grant from the fat cow; they have appropriated $250 to one of our music publishers, for a grand concert—he finds he cannot succeed, so he joins the Oddfellows who are to have successful concert under the immediate patronage of the Governor General, receiving nothing from the committee. Last evening I walked through our east end Victor square to find the walks hard and clean, square well lit, a good supply of benches, several policemen walking around. What a contrast to our west end English speaking "Dominion Square" opposite our magnificent Windsor Hotel—walks loose, gravelly and disagreeably dusty, little black-guards insulting our respectable girls, and not a policeman to be seen, nor is there a single bench to sit on—a most disagreeable state of affairs, but what can we do? Our aldermen are so busy selling us and our rights for 40 years to the City Passenger Railway Company. Of course the C. P. R. is working, and they know how to buy hungry lawyers. The feelings of the citizens is decidedly against renting the road for such a term of years. Just think our good old Institut Canadien, the only free French Library in Canada—its officers will be remembered as the heroic defenders of Guibord during that famous trial—and themselves heavily in debt. They offer their library to the city on splendid terms, 11,000 volumes, many rare French works not to be found, in any other library this side of the Atlantic, $500 payment equally all by the old world society, able residency, the value put down at $20,000 offset for $27,000 just the amount of debt on their building. It will be a lasting disgrace to our councillors if they do not accept this offer; the building is not 100 yards from the city hall, and would be a good investment for our Firemen and Bobbies. Strange as it may seem there is a fund being raised for a certain young determined liberal, who will oppose Mr. White in Cardwell, he is an active and pushing commercial man with all the confidence of a famed hero, very popular in this city and an eloquent speaker. Well as Sir George Cartier used to say, "we shall see what we shall see.

August 1880. MONTREAL.

Ebenezer Church.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER:—

SIR,—I wish to notice two or three points in Mr. Clark's letter in your issue of last week.

1st, that the trustees of said church did covenant with the people to build it on Union principles may be easily established. They did no such thing and therefore it cannot be established.

2nd. Some of these gentlemen recognise this fact, and have always been willing to implement their part of the agreement by opening the church to all evangelical denominations. With the trustees there has been no two opinions on that point—all have been willing to do so, not as a right, but as there is only one Protestant Church at the Point, the B. C's. wish to be neighbourly and cultivate a friendly feeling with all.

3rd. Mr. Clark has not given you the exact words used by the then incumbent who, when asked by one of the speakers, "Is not this a Union Church?" said, "That's all right, brother, go on," which the gentleman claimed was all right, and had been settled long before.

I am not alone in my opinion, but could get more than Mr. Clark has any idea of to endorse them, without any trouble.

I am yours,

MUNRO & ALEXANDER.

"A TIME FOR EVERYTHING."

"What fine weather for the crops we have been having," has been the most frequent remark made by our customers during the past week. And they are right. Nothing like a good spell of hot weather to ensure a good harvest. In the meantime at the front, and other circuit things, the indications are that there will be a full average, and in many cases more than an average yield. We recognize the fact that just now and in consequence have no time to attend to their business; has that is just now on hand. We shall therefore defer talking to them about our NEW FALL STOCK, until the hurry and heat of harvest is over.

FARMERS ARE AWFUL BUSY,

COMMON SENSE SUGGESTS that it is no earthly use prodding a householder fresh from the sweltering harvest field, with the words about GREY PLANNELS, and EXTRA WIDE LINENS, HEAVY BLANKETS or FULL-CLOTH. Not a bit of use—wouldn't pay any attention to such suggestions under the circumstances. We shall just casually remind them that when they are ready to purchase, we will be quite ready to sell them. Our

and are on our shelves, ready for inspection. This much we have already stated, but we shall not begin to urge people to buy them, until they have done purchasing Summer Goods. Hence we will not advertise just yet

Firemen's Holiday.—The Firemen's annual excursion to Idyl-Wild, on Thursday last, was a complete success, some three hundred passengers going down with the "boys" to the Island. Dancing was indulged in to the music of Prof. Martin's quadrille band on the way to, at and on the return from, the Island.

Horticultural.—The Annual Exhibition of the Peterborough Horticultural Society will be held in Bradburn's Hall, on Thursday next, 9th of September. The Prize List will be ready for distribution in a few days and can be had on application at Messrs. Ormond & Walsh's Drug Store. 32-1in

Repairing the Wharf.—The sidewalk on the east side of George street, between Hunter and Simcoe streets, to the disgraceful condition of which we referred last week, is being repaired. The Street Inspector has also had the planking removed on the iron bridge, and made a number of other improvements, for which the citizens interested are duly grateful.

Surprised.—On Monday evening the Fire Brigade Band serenaded Mr. J. R. Stratton and Mrs. Stratton, at their residence, Aylmer street, on their return from their wedding trip. The compliment was acknowledged by the newly married couple with the customary hospitalities.

Mill Accident.—Last Thursday one of the men at the Nassau Mill received somewhat serious injury while working at a lath machine, a splinter of wood being forced into the hand between the first and second fingers. Dr. Kincaid was brought into requisition and the splinter, which was of formidable dimensions, removed. The only wonder is that lockjaw did not ensue upon the injury.

A Golden Opportunity should never be neglected—therefore those requiring cheap, comfortable and durable wear for their feet should not fail to examine Mr. W. J. The Brewery Pic-Nic.—The annual excursion of the employees of Mr. Calcutt's brewery, to Idyl-Wild, took place on Wednesday last, and was a very successful and agreeable affair. The brewers and their friends enjoyed a first-class holiday at the Island. The first prize for barley was awarded to Mr. John B. Fewler, of Smith, and the second to Mr. McCann, of Otonabee. The samples shown were of superior quality.

Good News.—No more Chills and Ague a this section. Our Druggists are selling an article called "AGUE CONQUEROR." It is about the only satisfactory preparation said for the cure of Fever and Ague, Dumb Chills, Intermittent or Bilious Fevers. The Proprietor of the AGUE CONQUEROR has used but little energy to make this medicine known, and yet its sale is immense in Ague Districts. It purifies the blood, Liver, and other Secretory Organs so effectually that the Chills do not return even where persons have had them for years. Entirely vegetable preparation. Price, 50 cents and $1.00 per Bottle. Two doses will stop the chill. 32-12ins

Helping a Paper Along.—There are men who take an editor's paper "just to help him along." They don't care for the paper; don't read anything but city papers; but they take the home paper, just because the editor is "a pretty good kind of a fellow." The trouble is that these generous individuals hardly ever pay for their paper, and at last the dejected editor finds that they are just helping him along towards the poor house, and that he would need helping a long time before they would do him any good. Then only he drops them from his list, and writes "D. B." in red ink opposite their names and the amount of three or four years "helping along," after which they go about abusing him for an ungrateful fellow, and predict his speedy ruin.

No Quorum.—Monday evening last was the regular meeting night of the Council, and accordingly an uneasy body of Councillors were to be seen flitting round the neighborhood of Chamberlain's restaurant, apparently full of apprehension lest a quorum should be got together and business proceeded with. There appeared, however, to be little danger of this, as the Council Hall was closed and locked, and Mr. Beavis, who had been advised by the Mayor that there was to be no meeting, declined to open the doors or light up. It seems that the Finance Committee had summoned their report, and hence did not want to meet the Council, but as there was other business transacted there was no reason why it should not have been disposed of. A meeting will be held in a few days. The councillors present were Messrs Deane, McNaughton, Smith, Yelland, Douglas, Robertson and Taylor.

Serious Accident.—On Friday morning, at half past nine o'clock, a very serious, and very nearly fatal, accident occurred at the factory of Mr. F. Hamilton, on George street. A man named John Hart, was engaged assorting sawlog at a small sawing wheel, when, probably from an inadvertent pressure on the wheel, it burst, the centrifugal force sending fragments of the wheel with terrible velocity upon the face of the man bending over it. At above was struck, and the cranium opened and preserved to the sharp across the pond, where Dr. Kincaid was speedily in attendance. Examination showed that the os frontis, the external table of the forehead, was badly crushed, and that the upper jaw bone was broken, a piece as large as a penny being removed by the doctor. The wounded man promptly showed that there was still much life remaining, though it was at first feared that the skull had been affected. Over the others of the injury round. His wounds were sewed and bandaged, and, accompanied by his wife and two young children, he was conveyed to his home. While in the first condition of exhaustion, and suffering for a time from pain, and was frequently unconscious, which is the greatest possible relief and present.

THE NORTH-WEST.

Special Enlargement of the Short Horse Section—Specialty of "Peterborough Roadsters"—A Tall Timber Story—Location of the Hackney—The Prospects, etc.

HAMPTON BRYDGES'S, August 25th.

DEAR CALCUTT.—I have been going to write to you for some time, but hearn been too busy to accept the appointment of Minister of Transportation and Supplies for all west of Winnipeg. I was at Moff's this morning on my way here from Lumsden's camp to Saverton's. On the arrival of Marcus Smith I will drive to Winnipeg—my last trip this season. I have driven some dozen already, in five days and a half, and the roads are getting dry and good now. I have been up the Assiniboine by steamer twice now, so with my two trips last year I know this country pretty well. I have been north of here about 15 miles, to the big bend of the Shell River, and go to Fort Pelly on my return from Winnipeg. Next to Moff's one of the prettiest places in this part of the North-West. They are so happy as clams, and more than pleased. Marvin thinks I was about right when I said to go west of the Bird Tail. The land is about as perfect as you can get it, and I would strongly advise anyone to come either now or before the snow is all gone in the spring, for by end of May, next year, all the choice lots will will be taken up, and the settlers anxious to get an extra location, say on a stream or lake, with lots of wood, will have to poke on further west. The railway will likely be 15 miles south of Moff's, as he is O.K. He was hoeing his potatoes. He has been five weeks planted—as large as your fist, and he swears that his turnips were up the day after he planted them. This last may be so, but I saw the potatoes. I think this as fine a section as there is—take it from Shell Lake to the Shell River, north to the woods and south to the Assiniboine. Denmark has put up 20 tons of pea-vine and hay, cutting it with a mower, and says he is more than satisfied with his prospects. Tell T.—W to quit his lazy, good-for-nothing life down there, and take a turn on the prairies. You can drive now from Winnipeg to here and never camp out. Mills are being shoved up all over the country, and five years will see this with a larger and better population than Manitoba. Next year I will be on the Big Saskatchewan. At Elliee there are two storehouses full of goods, and about an acre of machinery for Prince Albert, Battleford, Duck Lake and Edmonton, and for the latter two steamers elsewhere. How's that for my pet piece—for "God's own country," as they call it there? I am going to spend most of the winter at Elliee, and am having 100 tons of hay put up there for my horses and mules, of which I have about 60, but I will try and take a run down about February or March. Steamboating on the Assiniboine this year has been a boom. The boats could not begin to do the business although they are running yet. Rates from Winnipeg one and a half cents per pound. You bet it pays. Tell B—— m if he comes up he must make up his mind to farm, for there is no chance of any steamboating paying unless the company is in same, as the parties already in are able to shut off a weak man, and next year two new boats will be ready for existing companies. Getting a good point and "keeping store" is his best hold, and sure money. I must close, as here comes Secretan.

Faithfully yours,
R. LETOCQUEE TUPPER.

RAILWAY NOTES.

Traffic receipts for week ending August 21st, 1880, were: —Passengers and mails, $6,281.74; freight, $8,174.53; total for week, $7,767.76. For corresponding week in 1879.—Passengers and mails, $4,289.14; freight, $4,071.59; total for week, $8,360.64; increase, $6,071.28. Aggregate from 1st of January, 1880, $262,170.28. Increase over 1879, $68,186.28.

The Port Hope Guide says some sixty hands are now at work on the new Midland Railway elevator. There are forty-two stone abutments being built, excavations for which have been made down to the solid rock. The abutments are about 4 feet 6 inches square at the base, tapering up to three feet, the top being capped by heavy cut stone. The whole masonry is of the most permanent character, laid with Portland cement. Mr. Richard Trick has charge of the masonry. About one-half of the masonry work of the foundation is now done. The stones for the huge caps are brought from near Washaushene. The elevator when completed will be nearly one hundred feet high, and sixty feet square. The elevator will be driven by a fifty horse-power engine, and with the complete arrangement of tracks and machinery will do as much work as the Northern Railway elevator at Toronto. A large amount of the timber for the framework has already arrived; the greater part of it will be on hand next week. As many hands as are now at work on the foundation will be employed until it is completed. The design is to work during the winter, so as that the largest vessels can come up to the elevator. It looks like business down there now."

POLICE COURT NOTES.

On Thursday last Joseph Ford was fined $1 and costs for being drunk on the public streets.

Jos. Barrie, for the like dereliction from the paths of duty, was fined a similar dollar.

A warrant for the arrest of Joseph Watson, a "Romanay," was issued as he did not show up to answer a charge of furious driving.

On Friday, Peter Mellroy, who had gone to bed on the sidewalk the evening before, was brought before the Cadi by Chief Johnston. He was allowed to go, the conviction being held against him, as he appeared to be penitent and promised never to do so any more.

John O'Brien paid the Clerk $2, having been drunk and disorderly on the streets on Thursday.

On Saturday, James Ward, a Grand Junction vagrant, paid in answer to the charge of being drunk and litkewise disorderly, that he had by some mysterious agency been relieved of the custody of some $25 since the day previous. On the strength of this presumable contribution to the Inland Revenue, the Magistrate inflicted a nominal fine, with the understanding that if the culprit came before him again the sentence of the Court would be enforced.

Thos. Rogers and Martyn Huston were fined $1 and costs for larking about the gate of the Court House on the proceeding evening.

On Monday, John Sullivan, another victim to the curse of Canada, was fined $2.

John Armour, Wm. Armour and John Hayes, three youths between the ages of 11 and 15 years, were charged with stealing fruit from the orchard of Mrs. Alexander Smith, on the 27th of August. The evidence showed that the boys had broken Mrs. Smith's fence, and had apples with them when they returned to the Queen's highway. Owing to the enormity of the offence the Magistrate concluded to remand the trio to gaol for a week, at the expiration of which period he will put them out of misery by pronouncing sentence.

EDITOR'S TABLE.

ANDREWS BAZAAR for September is, if possible, better than ever. Its illustrations and explanations of the coming Fall styles are excellent. Another feature of this paper is that perplexing questions about making over old dresses receive attention. The articles on "Home Dressmaking" alone will be worth many times the single dollar, the subscription price of this journal. Mothers will find in this number valuable suggestions about children's garments. In "Fashion Chit-Chat" will be found many points of interest. "Nathalie Rey," by Caitlin, is by far the best serial yet published in the Bazaar, and, will be read with deep interest by all. In a pungent editorial the subject of divorce is ably commented on. The supplement contains announcements which show, to say the least, a spirit of journalistic enterprise on the part of the Publisher. We would advise our lady readers who are unacquainted with Andrews' Bazaar to send 10 cents for the September number to W. R. Andrews, Publisher, Tribune Building, New York.

LITTELL'S LIVING AGE.—The numbers of the Living Age for the weeks ending August 21st and 28th respectively, contain the following articles: Recent and Future Arctic Voyages, and Thomas Chatterton, Quarterly; On the Summit of Gennargentu, Contemporary; A New Study of Tennyson, Cornhill; The Strange Story of Kitty Cashman, Temple Bar; Climbing Plants, Popular Science Review; Country Life in Portugal, Blackwood; Street Nicknames, Saturday Review; About Cats, Queen Victoria, and her Critics, and the Scotch, "Harry Martin's Wife," and instalments of "South Life in Queensland," and Jos. Part's "Adam and Eve;" and the usual amount of poetry. For fifty-two numbers of sixty-four large pages each for more than 3,300 pages a year, the subscription price ($8) is low; while for $10.50 publishers offer to send any one of the Eclectics, $4 monthlies or weeklies with The Living Age for a year, including the extra numbers of the latter, both postpaid. Littell & Co., Boston, are the publishers.

PERSONAL.

We had the pleasure of a call on Monday from L. D. Walters, of Rochester, N.Y. He and Mr. John Chambers, of the same place, formerly of Peterborough, left same afternoon to spend a few weeks among our back lakes.

Trent Valley Navigation.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER.

SIR,—Noticing in Saturday's Review that we were likely to have a deputation from Oswego pass over our Trent Valley route, I would suggest that such man as Mr. Kinghorn, of Kingston, be left at home, for what use is it to bring men who are prejudiced, and also have a direct interest in not having this superior route built? Regarding the suggestions that the Montreal deputation made—that it is useless except there are nine feet of water on the mitre sills—I wish to show you the fallacy of their arguments. In the first place, although this route is put down at five feet level, we have had as far seven feet of water on the sills, and there is no question but we could depend on having that amount of water every year if proper reservoirs are made on our back lakes, and Mr. T. D. Belcher, the present Dominion Superintendent, be appointed to take charge of the whole of the waters, not as it is at present, every alternate section under the control of the Dominion and Local Governments. I would suggest, not only from my own experience, but also the experience of the Mississippi boatmen, that instead of spending millions of dollars in deepening our water route, the present locks be lengthened to 200 or 250 feet, and all new locks built wider, looking to future increase of trade. This would be materially cheaper than a nine foot level, and I maintain will answer better.

This summer a large firm of steamboat owners on the Mississippi have had barges made, drawing only, when loaded, four feet of water, which barges will carry a quarter of million bushels, and a steam tug will tow six or eight of these barges at a time.

The risk of grounding is reduced to a minimum with such shallow draft barges. The reduction made by these barges on the freight is already beginning to tell on the grain shipments, as there has been an increase of several million bushels up to this date on that route over the year 1879.

In the Scientific American of August 28th an illustration is given of a new steamboat of the following dimensions: Length 252 feet, beam 39 feet, depth of hold 6 feet. This is a stern wheel boat, and only draws 24 inches of water, and will carry one thousand tons of freight, equal to 100 cars or five train loads. Now, supposing our Trent Valley Canal had locks sufficiently large to pass boats of this description through, we might safely average the speed at eight miles an hour, making 180 hours for the trip between Chicago and Montreal. This would reduce the price of freight materially, and by having barges of the same size, without machinery or cabins, they would carry 2,000 tons, towed by steam tugs it would be reduced still lower. Experience has taught them on the Mississippi to use shallow draught barges. Why should not we profit by that experience? Why should we spend money to deepen a route, that is already sufficient for all necessary purposes, allowing that the locks remain as now are? We can now carry 15,000 bushels on a barge, and a tug [illegible] dollars a day of twenty-four hours to run, will take twelve of them at a tow—equal to 180,000 bush., at an average speed of six miles an hour, making seven days for the trip, and allowing $60 for incidental expenses, would cost but one cent per bushel actual towing from Chicago to Montreal. Now there is no doubt that this is the easiest and cheapest route from the west. We have everything in our favor. The prevailing winds are from the west, the current in the rivers is with us, and once you enter the head of the Trent Valley route there is no storm that a canoe cannot live through, consequently the insurance must be very low, and I think the remarks of the Canal Commissioner for New York State is applicable to Canada. He stated that it was a necessity to have the Erie Canal kept up and improved, for if it never carried a pound of freight it was the means of controlling the price of freight and keeping down the great railway monopolies. I think it advisable to have a deputation from Chicago, Minneapolis, and Duluth brought over this route, for if our Government can't, and their way to [illegible] I say let us do it ourselves.

LACROSSE—BELLEVILLE V. PETERBOROUGH.

The return match between the Peterborough Lacrosse Club and the Belleville Club, which has so long been looked forward to with interest, will be played on Friday afternoon on the Ashburnham Cricket Ground, commencing at 2 p.m. The Belleville Club will arrive here by the noon train, and arrangements for their accommodation here have been made at the Ontario House, where they will be the guests of the Peterborough Club. Both Clubs have strong teams, and the match is expected to be the closest and most exciting of the season. The admittance at the gate will be only ten cents, and we hope to see a large attendance of the public, who may depend upon a good afternoon's sport.

Back Again.—Mr. W. H. Moore, of the late firm of Moore & Stevens, who has been on a visit to Europe, returned to town yesterday, looking as if the air of the old country agreed with him.

Municipal Visitation.—The Council of the Township of Alnwick, accompanied by some 150 excursionists, arrived in town on Saturday by the steamer Golden-Eye. After a couple of hours spent in viewing the sights the excursionists left for home at an early hour.

Our Bands.—Some of our institutions, such as the Rowing Club, Cricket Club, Lacrosse Club, and the Band, are suffering in public estimation abroad from the tendency of our little friend, the Daily Evening, to "blow" about their performances, and to sneer at those with whom they have been brought into friendly competition. Modesty is always a distinctive mark of true merit, which is a virtue which we believe attaches to all these institutions, and it is not a little annoying to them to find their exploits so loudly trumpeted, by an enthusiastic but indiscreet admirer, as to be a cause of annoyance to their neighbors. The Lindsay Warder referring to one of these paragraphs in which the business of that town are alluded to as "the natives," puts a little ott of temper and says:— "The Peterborough band has a good reputation, as [illegible] they deserve it, but [illegible] natives" have heard better. The Mud Lake Indian band [illegible] music, they are a little [illegible] and don't blow about it. Our band plays well, and when among strangers they are not taken for circus teamsters, either. We are informed that there are six players belonging to the 45th Battalion band who can make better music than the same number of the best players in Peterborough's crack band. It would be interesting to know what kind of music the F. B. band played on the return trip from Midland." We believe the only occasion on which the Lindsay band was brought into competition with the Peterborough band was a few years ago at a Central Exhibition, in which the Lindsay musicians received third prize. The reputation of the Fire Brigade band is too well established to require any advertitious aid in the way of "puffing." We understand the Mud Lake Indian musicians are somewhat annoyed at the Warder, and want to have a competition trial with the Lindsay people. If the latter survive the contest, the Peterborough band will give them a chance to distinguish themselves.

MAY'S LOVERS.

CHAPTER III—Continued.

Henry ran back to the house.

He set Elias to work to make the necessary arrangements; despatched a messenger post-haste to Mr. Evans, and went on into the breakfast-room.

'My dear father,' he began, at once, 'the accident I spoke of is more serious than I thought at first. The doctor is coming here with May directly, and—my dear father, you must bear up, and we shall know better presently. Grace, will you go and help Elias get a room ready; out don't'—he was going to say, 'don't may to see the body'—'don't give way.'

Grace glanced into his face for a moment, and read there the confirmation of her worst fears.

'And Gordon?' she asked in a whisper.

'I've sent for him,' he answered, in the same tone.

He turned to his father.

But the blow had stricken the old vicar down.

'Father,' said Henry, 'you must not give way thus. She'll be better directly.'

'Will she? I hope so—I hope so,' in an absent way. 'In the meantime, my son, I think I'll go to my study. I hope so. My poor, darling little May! You think so? Fallen into the pool. Always giddy. Yes, Henry, I'll go to my study. Give me your arm, my son—give me your arm.'

The father and son passed out of the room together, and across the hall.

Henry heard the sound of approaching footsteps, and tried to hurry his father into the room, dreading the possible effects upon the vicar if he were to see his daughter just now.

'I feel strangely unlike myself, Henry; but I shall be better directly, when I'm alone. I'll call you if I want you. Thank you, my son, and now my only child.'

And he went into the room.

The sound of shuffling feet grew nearer and nearer, and Henry breathed a sigh of relief when the door closed behind the vicar.

He was hurrying back to meet the men, when the study door opened.

'Henry! Henry! I should like to see May as soon as I can.'

'Yes, father.'

And as the study door closed for the second time, the gardeners entered the house, bearing their grim burden.

'One moment,' said Henry.

And he ran up-stairs to get Grace out of the way.

He just succeeded in time in drawing her almost forcibly into his room.

'Now, Grace, my dear, loving cousin,' he said to her, 'you who are always so brave must now be so, indeed.'

'Tell me the worst, Henry. Is May——'

But she could not bring the words out.

The young man understood her.

'At present, Grace, I don't know; but I fear the very worst.'

'Ah, Henry!' with a deep sigh. 'Poor—poor, old uncle! Whatever will he do?'

A knock came to the door.

It was Susan.

'Oh, if you please, Mr. Henry, I've been to the 'Dragon'; and, if you please, sir Mr. Dare ain't there, and ain't been there since early this morning. But I left word as he should come up here directly he come back.'

'Very well. You can go down-stairs.'

The girl went, crying bitterly.

'And how did it happen, Henry?'

'I can't, at all, tell. George told me, when he called me out, that he was afraid something was wrong, and——' He stopped and a terrible thought flashed upon him. 'Where on earth can Gordon be? How awful!'

'What do you mean, Henry? Why do you stop and then speak of Gordon? What do you mean? What is awful? Tell me. Is anything wrong with him?'

And she clung eagerly to him.

'No, Grace, dear; not that I know. But what makes you ask?'

At this moment the door of May's room opened, and the young doctor asked Henry to go inside for a minute.

Grace forced herself to be calm, and went down to the study.

She knocked, went in, and stayed with her uncle a long and anxious time of despairing suspense.

* * * * * *

The worst anticipations were realised. Death had snatched May, the young and beautiful, as a delicate victim.

The curate had called during the day, and was overwhelmed with grief at the calamity. He had not stayed long, for Henry Trevor told him he could be of no service; and his grief urged him to be alone.

Gordon Dare had not returned, and nothing had been heard of him. Where could he be? Henry Trevor wished for his return, and Grace prayed for it and him.

With gentle and loving caution, Grace and Henry had together broken the news to the vicar. Half expected as it had been, and lovingly as the blow was delivered, it was heavier than the poor old man could bear. Dazed and stupified, he could scarcely at first grasp the terrible reality of the news, but sat absently gazing out of the window across the fair garden, where he had so often watched her, crying like a woman. At last he had been got to bed, and had fallen asleep. They had left him after some time, and had gone to their rooms. The servants were all in bed, and the quiet of night had fallen upon the Vicarage, and that sweetest type of peace—sleep—upon the inmates.

The small flame of the night-light in the vicar's room cast a dimmed light on the heavy, old-fashioned furniture. Weird shadows were thrown on the walls and ceiling—grim, ghostly watchers of the sleeper's uneasy slumbers; great, shadowy gaunt, threatening evil and sorrow. The vicar turned from side to side, moaning in his sleep. Presently the moaning ceased. The sleeper ceased to toss as much, and the faint glimmer of the night-light showed a smile playing over the old man's features.

Soon after, he woke. He had been dreaming of May, and now resolved to go to her.

The vicar lifted the bed-clothes away, and tried to find a light. He was not successful.

'Never mind,' he re-assured to himself; 'there's plenty of moonlight.'

He opened his room door. It was all dark. The stillness was awful, only broken by the ticking of the hall clock. The old man groped his way with trembling, outstretched hand and faltering step along the wall, until he came to the door of May's room.

The door was locked, but the key was there. Gently he passed into the presence of his dead darling.

He peered anxiously through the darkness, and called, gently, 'May—May, my child! It's I, May—your old father!'

He took two or three steps towards the bed, went up to it, touched her, and turned back the sheet.

'Ah!' he muttered; 'I can't see her. I'll let in the moonlight.' And he turned to the window, and pulled down the blind, saying, 'Don't be frightened, my child; I'm only letting in a little moonlight that you may see me.'

A flood of silver light poured in through the window upon the bed, and on his yet ghastly burden.

She lay on in her sleep. The rich ringlets clustered round the beautiful face—beautiful still with all its pallor, white as the sheet which lay against it. As the old vicar turned from the window, gazing hopelessly at the dead, slowly the truth began to destroy the strange hallucination which had taken possession of him.

Pregently he spoke again—'May—May?'—but the tone was changed. It was hushed, doubting and awe struck.

He moved slowly, very slowly, to the bedside. He stood there, without attempting to touch her. He stooped over her, and whispered close to her, 'May, my darling child!'

Then he tried to take her hand. The icy touch convinced him.

'Dead—dead, my darling! So young, so fair, so loving, so innocent! Would that I had gone home first!'

He turned to go away, but lingered for a moment for a last look at all that was left to him of his heart's pride. As he looked, the arm he had shaken in his paroxysm, and retained on his knees, fell back into its former position.

The vicar, seeing but dimly and indistinctly through his tears, was deceived by this action and thought that May had come to life, and was beckoning to him to go to her.

He rushed back, and, screaming out in a paroxysm of delirium, 'May, my precious one! I know it—I know it!' fell insensible across the body.

And thus his son found him.

CHAPTER IV.

The little old-fashioned assize town of Berytoe was full of bustle. The assizes were on; the grim drama of Justice was to be enacted that day; the prisoners sat gloomily awaiting their summons to the dock; and among them, arranged upon the most terrible of all charges, was Gordon Dare.

He sat manacled in one of the gloomiest cells in the prison, waiting for the warder to fetch him. He knew that he was to be tried that morning for the murder of his sweetheart, and was growing feverishly impatient.

He was pale, haggard, and looked years older than on the bright June evening of his welcome to the Vicarage. Long confinement and acute mental suffering at the awfulness of his situation, had worn him down. Was he guilty?

Opinion was very divided. There had been an inquest, and the facts which had come out had told with crushing effect against him. He was the last person seen with May; his conversation at the Vicarage, his declaration afterwards to Henry Trevor, and his subsequent behaviour, had induced nearly everyone to concur in the verdict of the coroner's jury, to the effect that he had been guilty of the girl's death.

Nearly everyone? Long and fervent had been Grace's prayers for his delivery from suspicion. She had not for a moment doubted of his innocence, and her faith had partly won over Henry Trevor to her side. Reports had at last began to gain ground that circumstances had come to light calculated to astonish everybody.

At last the impatient crowd in the court are about to be satisfied. The judge has taken his seat, the jury have been empanelled, the formalities have been gone through, and Lockyer, the great Q.C., is on his legs, opening the case for the prosecution.

He details the evidence he is going to produce: Gordon Dare's return the day before he was expected; the events which had occurred during his absence—the chief being May's engagement to the curate; their being together when Gordon returned; their conversation upon parting; the disposition of the prisoner; the walk home with Trevor; the exclamation; the finding of the piece of paper making the appointment with the curate for the fatal morning among the prisoner's things; his being seen near the pool hurrying away, the footmarks on the banks of the pool coinciding with the size of the prisoner's boots; his mysterious disappearance; his return and arrest; his calm behaviour, and exclamation that he expected it.

'I shall prove to you that the prisoner was seen on the morning of Miss Trevor's death talking to her excitedly. What passed between them on that morning may never be known but that there was a motive in the prisoner's case which has led to the commission of crimes as great, there can be no reasonable doubt. We know of no motive more powerful than jealousy. Whether he actually committed this crime is for you to judge, gentlemen.'

Witnesses were called; and after Henry Trevor, the gardeners, and others had been examined and cross-examined, the Rev. Ralph Blake stepped into the box. He was pale and careworn in looks, but spoke firmly and collectedly.

He told of his first coming to the parish; of his failing in love with the deceased; of his proposal, and her acceptance of him. He declared that May had said to him she was afraid of Dare, this being why his engagement was not made public. He gave his version of the prisoner's conduct on his arrival, and swore that he had said, 'A girl deserved to be killed who had done what May had!' At this the whole court was astonished. The learned Serjeant made a hurried note, and looked keenly at the curate.

He swore that he knew nothing of the paper addressed to him. Described how, on the following morning, he had been called to an early visit to an old woman, and had had to go by a path leading near the hedge of the Vicarage field. Had seen the prisoner and the deceased talking excitedly together by the pool; they apparently were quarrelling; how he had been prevented from going to interfere by the urgency of his visit, and how upon his return both were gone.

This was his evidence, and before his cross-examination the adjournment came for luncheon; and Serjeant Hawke expressed himself to his junior thus:—'Look here, Grasp; it's either the sailor or the parson. I believe it's the latter, and that he's doing his utmost to hang the other.'

The prisoner, looking more haggard than ever, was placed again in the dock, and the curate presented himself for cross-examination.

The learned Serjeant Hawke rose up, giving his gown a hitch over the shoulder, as was his way when he meant to do his very best, and in the blandest and most persuasive tone began—'There are just one or two points I want to clear up, Mr. Blake. I won't detain you longer than necessary. How long were you engaged to Miss Trevor?'

'Only on the day before her death.'

'You did not mention it, I believe, to her father?'

'No.'

'And why not?'

'Because Miss Trevor preferred my not doing so.'

'Did she give you any reason?'

'As I have said, she was afraid of the prisoner.'

'Did it strike you as at all peculiar that the young lady should remain openly engaged to one gentleman and secretly to another?'

'It did; but I attributed it to Miss Trevor's caprice.'

'You showed her what your position would be?'

'Yes, I did.'

'And what did she say to that?'

'Nothing.'

'What, sir!' thundered the learned Serjeant. 'Do you dare to villify the dead by saying that she acquiesced in the prostitution of your honor?'

'To the best of my knowledge and belief she said nothing. I can't remember anything.'

'To the best of your knowledge, and belief, and honor,' repeated the Serjeant with a world of scorn in his tone. 'Will you swear you mentioned it?'

'Yes.'

'And swear you can't remember her reply?'

'Yes.'

'The prisoner said that a girl who had acted as Miss Trevor had acted, deserved to be killed. Was this also to the best of your knowledge and belief?'

'Yes, that is my impression.'

'Oh, your 'impression,' is it? Tell the jury the very words.'

'I don't remember.'

'I thought that might be possible. Let us have them, then, to the best of your knowledge and belief?' And the Serjeant looked at the jury.

'They were to that effect.'

'Oh, 'to that effect.' And that is, you mean your yourself so understood them?'

'Yes.'

'Well, was the term 'killed' used?'

'I think so.'

'Be careful, sir! Will you swear it was?'

'No, I can't.'

'Will you swear the expression used was more than an ordinary one about being unfit to live, or some such?'

'No, I will not.'

'Was he referring to the deceased directly when he said it?'

'No.'

'Then to what was he referring?'

'He had been relating an anecdote of a young lady who had been flirting while she was engaged.'

'Is that what you mean by saying 'who had been doing what Miss Trevor had been doing?'

'Yes.'

'Do you call the engagement of Miss Trevor to yourself heartless flirting?'

'Oh, no; I don't mean that. I mean that he——'

'Never mind. Be content to answer my questions. Upon the night of Gordon Dare's return to the Vicarage, a conversation ensued upon an anecdote he told relative to a case of flirting. Then he said that a lady who would behave as that one had was not fit to live. Is not that it?'

'It may have been,' said the curate, who was fast getting confused as to what really had occurred.

'Then, sir, was it consistent with your character as a clergyman to distort what was then said in the way you did, in order to mislead the jury?'

'I don't know. I did not wish to prejudice the prisoner.'

'You don't know, sir! Then let me tell you that every gentleman on the jury does. Now, sir, what is the cause of your spite against the prisoner?'

And so the cross-examination went on, until the curate's evidence had been torn to shreds, and not a particle was of value to the prosecution.

NO RISK.

Thomas' Eclectric Oil! Worth Ten Times its Weight in Gold. Do you know anything of it? If not, it is time you did.

Pain cannot stay where it is used. It is the cheapest medicine ever made. One dose cures common SORE THROAT. One bottle has cured BRONCHITIS. Fifty cents' worth has cured an OLD STANDING COUGH. One or two bottles cures bad cases of PILES OR KIDNEY TROUBLES. Six to eight applications cure ANY CASE of EXCORIATED NIPPLES OR INFLAMED BREAST. One bottle has cured LAME BACK of eight years standing. Daniel Plank, of Brookfield, Tioga County, Pa., says: "I went thirty miles for a bottle of your Oil, which affected a WONDERFUL CURE OF A CROOKED LEG, by six applications."—Another who had been ASTHMA for years, says:—"I have half a bottle left, and $100 would not buy it if I could get no more."——Rufus Robinson, of Nunda, N Y., writes: "One small bottle of your ECLECTRIC OIL restored the voice where the person had not spoken above a whisper in FIVE YEARS."—Rev. J. Mallory, of Wyoming, N. Y., writes: Your ECLECTRIC OIL cured me of Bronchitis in one week."

It is composed of SIX OF THE BEST OILS THAT ARE KNOWN. It is as good for internal as for external use, and is believed to be immeasurably superior to anything ever made. Will save you much suffering and many dollars of expense.

BEWARE OF IMITATORS.—Ask for Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. See that the signature of S. N. Thomas is on the wrapper, and the names of Northrop & Lyman are blown in the bottle, and Take no other. Sold by all medicine dealers. Price 25 cents. NORTHROP & LYMAN, Toronto, Ont., Proprietors for the Dominion.

NOTE—Eclectric—Selected and Electrised.

PEOPLE TORMENTED by the many disagreeable sensations produced by dyspepsia, or are thin, nervous and weak, should use the standard tonic—Northrop & Lyman's Quinine Wine. They will find it agreeable and beneficial. It enriches the blood by aiding digestion and assimilation; soothes and invigorates the nervous system, and imparts a healthful appetite. When used as a remedy for bilious and intermittent fever, it produces the happiest results, if taken between the attacks. Convalescence is hastened, and ultimately decay of the physique and constitution is arrested by it. The spirituous constituent, sherry wine, is of the best quality, and the aromatics combined with it renders its flavor additionally pleasant. They who use it gain flesh as well as strength, and it exerts a cheering influence upon the mind; it promotes a healthy secretion and flow of bile, sound repose and regularity in the action of the bowels. If judiciously used it may be taken without apprehension of any ill result by persons of the most delicate constitution. A fair trial of all that is needed to prove the genuineness of its claims to public confidence, and to the truth of the general verdict in its behalf. No article of its class commends itself so strongly to nervous invalids who require building up—none is so well adapted to fortify the system against the dangers which threaten the debilitated. It should not be mistaken for a mere stimulant of appetite, which many so-called tonics simply are. It so regulates the stomach that it is enabled to perform its various functions with regularity and vigor, and its action is not only thorough but prompt. Ask for the 'Quinine Wine of Northrop and & Lyman." Sold by all druggists.

Joy Among the Children.

COPLAND'S SWEET CASTOR CR, equally suitable for children and adults. Endorsed by over 600 doctors in Canada.

The difficulty of administrating nauseous medicines, and the desirability of having the pleasant to the taste, induced T. Copland to undertake researches which resulted in the discovery of a Sweet Castor Oil, perfectly palatable, of the same strength and medical qualities as the ordinary Castor Oil, and while equally safe and harmless, yet acting with more certainty, and producing neither nausea nor griping. Some children say it is honey; others call it syrup—they all say they like it. One parent says—"My children drink it like water," another—"We had to hide the bottle or they would have finished it right off;" another—"My little girl has taken it twice without any trouble, and does not know what it is, though she hates the ordinary Castor Oil, and we could never get her to take it without a fight;" yet another—"I wish you success of your Sweet Castor Oil; it is a splendid thing—more to take the place of all the common oil."

The extraordinary demand for this improvement on a staple household medicine has brought fraudulent imitations into the market, but the public can guard themselves against substitutes (which Unprincipled parties are attempting to sell on the reputation of this article) by seeing that the wrapper of COPLAND'S Sweet Castor Oil, 25 cts bottle, bears the name of T. COPLAND, Chemist, Toronto, and that the name is blown in the bottle. Manufactured only by T. Copland & Co's laboratory, in the above-mentioned locality, and now manufactured from the original recipe. Northrop & Lyman, Wholesale agents.

MANHOOD:

HOW LOST, HOW RESTORED!

We have recently published a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical and permanent cure (without medicine) of Nervous Debility, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediment to Marriage, etc., resulting from excesses.

☞Price in a sealed envelope, only 6 cts., or two postage stamps.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicines or the use of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and rationally.

☞This lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

The Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, SEPT'R 16, 1880.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

SIR A. T. GALT, Sir John Macdonald, and Hon. J. H. Pope sail to-day for home from Liverpool.

A FALL SESSION of the Dominion Parliament is to be called on the return of the Ministers from England, to ratify the bargain arranged with the new Pacific Railway Company.

IT IS SAID the Government have passed an order-in-council authorizing the payment of $25,000 to Mr. Sandford Arnott Fleming for services as chief Engineer of the Intercolonial Railway. Is this a FREE TRADE in England is showing that it feels the effects of the general revival of trade. The receipts of revenue from April 1st to August 24th, were £20,371,000, against £20,260,496 in the corresponding period of the preceding financial year. The expenditure was £32,545,078, against £34,345,484 last year.

A TELEGRAM from London states that the matters of detail in connection with the bargain between the Dominion Government and the company who are to get the Pacific Railway $65,000,000 of Dominion money, and 50,000,000 acres of Dominion lands, "are referred to New York." What has become of that bugbear of Sir John and the Mail, "the Americans?"

AS WE anticipated, the election in Selkirk on Friday last resulted in the return of Cags, Scott the Government candidate, the vote standing 686 for Scott, to 566 for Mr. Smith. Scott had in his favor the influence of the local Government and of the Dominion Government Land Office and their agents, which gave him a majority in the city of Winnipeg of 165. The country portion of the constituency gave Mr. Smith a very considerable majority, showing that where the vote was taken on its merits, the Liberal candidate had the best of it.

IT IS STATED that one of the results of the Civil Service Commission at Ottawa will be the appointment of Hon. Wm. McDougall as Civil Service Commissioner, he to retain his seat in the House. Mr. McDougall, apparently in anticipation of this stroke of good luck, has already taken up his residence at the capital. This and fat salaries for the Commissioners, and their officials, outside their other fat salaries as deputy-Ministers, etc., will probably be the most important achievement of the Commission.

THE HAMILTON Times refers to a rumor that the Department of Marine have not made a proper investigation into the cause of the loss of the Wanderer, because those interested in the vessel are powerful friends of the Government. We know as a matter of fact, that many persons who affect to speak from personal observation, assert strongly that the vessel was rotten and unseaworthy, and in that case the owners would be held responsible for the loss and damages which ensued. Clearly the Marine Department ought to relieve itself from reproach by ordering a strict and searching investigation.

IN HIS RECENT speech at Emerson after a personal inspection of the Canada Pacific Railway west of Winnipeg Sir Richard Cartwright says:—

"Upon second personal inspection of the Canada Pacific railway, I found the work to be of the finished and thorough character. The sleepers and rails are laid on the sod, without the slightest pretence of ballasting or safety, (Loud cries of hear, hear.) Now in the face of these facts I am reminded of the solemn assurances of Sir Charles Tupper who pretended that within less than eighteen months after the union of Parliament before the last, he would have 200 miles of railway completed west of Winnipeg, and this, sir, could have been easily constructed. Notwithstanding his solemn pretensions that before the 1st of August, 1880, he would have 200 miles constructed, we find he has not actually succeeded in overcoming the enormous and extraordinary distance of seven and a half miles, to the west of the Winnipeg branch!

THE FRENCH Canadian press, according to the Ottawa Citizen, are putting in a claim for Hon. Mr. Langevin to be made a C. B. as a representative of the French Canadian race, and the Ottawa organ of Mr. Pope thinks the Imperial Government ought to give him a C. M. G. intimating that "with the exception of Sir "Narcisse Belleau, of Quebec—a very "respectable gentleman—no French Canadian public man has thus been honored." The Citizen, by way of implication, says the impression among those who complain of this lack of titular promotion is that the Governor-General is to blame, whereas it must be well aware that it is Mr. Langevin's colleagues who are in fault, and that Sir John Macdonald could easily procure the coveted ribbon for him if he desired. It forgets too that at the time knighthoods were conferred on Sir Geo. Cartier and others, Mr. Langevin refused a C. B. at the hands of his colleagues as not being up to his merits, alleging that as Mr. McDougall had the C.B., he could not stoop to anything so common. As to Lower Canada not getting a fair share of the honors it forgets that Hon. Mr. Falloon was created a C.M.G., and Hon. Mr. Dorion a knight. We fancy it will be found a poor recommendation in Mr. Langevin's favor that he is canvassing for the honor through his claqueurs in the press; but there is no reason in the world why he should not receive the honor at the hands of Sir John. These ribbons and honors are held in poor enough esteem in Canada, and Hon. Mr. Langevin is not a whit worse than some former recipients.

THE HORTICULTURAL SHOW.

Successful Exhibition—Good Attendance of Visitors—The Prize List.

The Annual Exhibition of the Peterborough Horticultural Society took place in Bradburn's Hall on Thursday last, and was in every respect a complete and gratifying success. The entries in all classes were very full, and of superior quality, while a good many extra articles "not for competition," enhanced the attractiveness of the ladies' table. The show in fruit, flowers and vegetables was unusually excellent, and the exhibition throughout was vastly superior to that held in connection with the Central Exhibition last year, thus showing a growing interest in the Society, as well as the effects of those competitions in encouraging the objects of the Society. Much of the success of the Exhibition is due to the zeal and energy of the President of the Society, Mr. Roper, and the other officers. Nine o'clock in the morning was the time appointed for closing the reception of entries, but it was found impossible to carry out this idea, and entries had to be taken during the day. It would tend to avoid confusion, and contribute to the success of the Show and the comfort of those upon whom the work of classifying, arranging and judging devolves, if in the future exhibitors were to send in their contributions promptly, so that all arrangements may be completed before the public are admitted.

THE FLOWERS

were naturally the most attractive part of the exhibit, and were very tastefully arranged, showing to very good advantage. We have seen more extensive but rarely more excellent exhibits. A collection of foliage plants shown by Rev. V. Clementi offered some of the most exquisite combinations of shade and color we have ever seen. Mr. A Watts had a splendid collection of phlox drummondi, Japan pinks, and gorgeous coxcombs. Mr. Smithson's stocks, petunias and balsams deservedly had a first prize, and he showed as well a choice lot of pinks, verbenas, zinnias, asters and pansies. Mr. F. Mason had also a very fine selection of plants and flowers, which did credit to the high reputation his conservatories have acquired. Miss A. Mills had a pretty collection of phlox drummondi, asters, zinnias, petunias, verbenas, and pinks. Mrs. Cooney showed also in all these varieties a choice assortment, and in addition some elegant dahlias, which took first prize by common consent. Her collection of cut annuals was varied, most tastefully arranged, and presented a beautiful appearance. Mr. W. W. Johnston exhibited table and hand bouquets which were very much admired, and Mrs. W. Nesbit a handsome floral design. A night-blooming jasmine, shown by Mr. G M. Roper was very fine, and Miss Jennie Kingan's table bouquet was a model of exquisite taste. The same young lady showed a beautiful hand bouquet. Dr. Burritt had a pretty hand bouquet on exhibition. Mr. James Edwards showed a choice collection of cut flowers and a floral basket, which was much admired. Mr. J. Walsh showed a fine display of phlox drummondi, perennial phlox and asters. Miss E. Clementi, exhibited table and hand bouquets (a class in which the judges had a difficult task in assigning prizes, owing to the general superiority of the exhibits), and a very beautiful collection of cut flowers in which she took first prize. Rev. V. Clementi had a large and superior exhibit of flowers, among which his collection of foliage plants, zinnias, verbenas and coxcombs took the first prize without difficulty. Mrs. Henry had a charming array of window plants and a beautiful hanging basket. She had also a pretty lot of begonias. Mr. J. H. Roper had a choice contribution, comprising floral baskets, hanging basket, a most beautiful fuschia, and an elegant collection of window plants. He had also a vase of plants very attractively and tastefully arranged. Mr. J. Stevenson exhibited a handsome array of asters, zinnias, petunias and phlox drumsondi. Mrs. C. Ormond's collection of asters and cut flowers attracted much attention, and she had also fine zinnias, petunias, verbenas and phlox drummondi. Mrs. E. Green took first prize for specimen plant, a magnificent oleander in luxurious bloom. Hon R. Hamilton had some very fine phlox drummondi and zinnias. We omitted to mention Rev. V. Clementi's collections of double portulacas and antirrhinums. Mr. John McClelland took first prize on a splendid lot of begonias, and showed fine amaryllis, verbenas and phlox drummondi; also taking first prize on hand bouquet. The display throughout was very superior, and all the exhibitors deserve much credit.

FRUITS AND VEGETABLES.

This class was also very fully represented, the largest exhibitors being Mr. Watts, Miss A. Mills, Mr. James Best, William Leech, Chas. Payne, J. J. Lundy, G. M. Roger, Dr. Burritt, Jas. Edwards, Mrs. Geo. Stethem, Geo. Edmison, Jas. Wallace and Rev. V. Clementi. Mr. G. M. Roger had 35 entries and took 16 first prizes and 3 seconds. Mr. Watts had an exceptionally fine lot of onions taking 3 1st prizes. Miss A. Mills showed some very fine crab apples. Mr. James Best's collection of grapes were a most superb lot of fruit and ahead of all competitors. In apples and pears Mr. W. Leech had a tempting assortment, taking 4 1st prizes. Mr. Chas. Payne led in English potato onions and peppers, and took a second on fine egg fruit. Mr. J. J. Lundy took first in water melons and exhibited some very good corn and parsnips. Dr. Burritt had some magnificent long red carrots, and took second on fine display of winter apples. James Edwards had some choice apples and pears, and came in ahead in yellow corn, a very fine exhibit. Mrs. Geo. Stethem's yellow plums and egg plums made the visitor's mouth water, and took first prize; she also took first prize on a magnificent collection of melons. Mr. J. Wallis had a splendid contribution containing 94 entries; his citrons, squash, pumpkins, tomatoes, and potatoes were especially noticeable. Rev. V. Clementi had some monster squash, and some unusually fine melons. Mr. Geo. Edmison took first prize on blue plums, a tempting display, and first on magnificent turnip root beets. Mr. G. L. Mitchell showed short horn and intermediate carrots, splendid roots, taking first prize in both varieties. Mr. A. C. Dunlop's first prize parsnips were a very fine lot. Hon. R. Hamilton showed a choice assortment of crab apples, winter cabbage, onions, beets, tomatoes and grapes.

POULTRY.

It was decided not to make any exhibition of poultry, the only representatives of the feathered race being a singing canary exhibited by Jennie Taylor, a pinnacle country shown by Mary Taylor, and a fine cage of young canarins shown by Mr. J. H. Roper.

FINE ARTS.

In this line there was a fair display, one of the principal objects of interest being a splendid collection of photographs shown by Mr. Jas. Little, showing superior execution and artistic skill, and the finishing touch of a master hand. An exhibit Rev. V. Clementi was a very fine crayon sketch, exhibiting painting, in water colors, in landscape and flowers, of which the culinary skills and a very handsomely executed drawing in pen and ink, entitled "Sunset," by Miss M. G. Edwards, were much admired and were very creditable

NARROW ESCAPE FROM DROWNING.—The esteemed pastor of the Norwood Presbyterian Church, Rev. Mr. Fotheringham, had a narrow escape from meeting a watery grave during his recent holiday tour to the back lakes. The Rev. gentleman and his niece, Miss Maggie Macgregor, were in a canoe together fishing, and were in the act of hauling in a large muskinonge, caught by the young lady, when the boat unfortunately capsized, and the occupants thrown into the water. Mr. Fotheringham, seeing the danger and helplessness of the young lady, at once seized her, and struggled hard to reach the canoe—which was now bottom upward,—and after being repeatedly thrown times

PETERBOROUGH, SEPT. 16, 1880.

THE CANADIAN PACIFIC R. R.

It is impossible to arrive at any definite conclusion as to the advantage or otherwise of the Pacific Railway arrangements effected by the Canadian Ministers in England, till the scheme is set before the public on its merits, and all the details have been fully exposed to consideration and criticism; but the country will certainly experience a sense of relief at the fact that this gigantic undertaking has been apparently removed from the shoulders of the people, and the country left free to pursue more utilitarian and profitable enterprises. So far as can be ascertained, the facts are probably about as we have indicated, viz., that the Government hand over to the Pacific Railway Company 50,000,000 acres of land and possession of the railway in perpetuity, with a cash bonus of $25,000,000, besides the work already undertaken, representing about $37,000,000 more. Upon the $87,000,000 the Dominion will still, however, have to pay an annual tax for interest of $3,350,000 a year, so that even this bargain does not wholly relieve the people from a very serious burden on account of an enterprise which may now be said to have passed out of their hands, to say nothing of the embarrassment which may be experienced by placing those portions of the fertile lands of the North-West which are most eligible for settlement in the hands of a great railway corporation. The land again, onerous as it must be under any circumstances, containing the proper safeguards for the due fulfillment of the contract by the new company; if the money payment be made pro rata with the procedure of the work, and not handed over to create a capital for the company to work on; if the road is to be completed and equipped in a proper manner, and the Government are empowered to enforce their conditions; if the Company give to the Government, by lien upon the railways and lands or otherwise, security that they shall work the railway in a manner and at rates that will consult the requirements and conveniences of the public, and above all, if the sale of lands by the Company be regulated by agreement with the Government so that they may not be held for speculation, but will be offered to settlers at a reasonable rate —then the public will be very glad indeed to wash their hands of further responsibility for an enterprise which, as it was being constructed and managed by the present Government, bade fair to involve the country in ruin and bankruptcy. These matters, however, can only be determined upon when the scheme in all its details is laid before the country.

There are one or two things, however, which we cannot help remarking in connection with this new departure in the Canada Pacific Policy. One is, why were the Government so anxious to unnecessarily enter into an expenditure of ten millions of dollars in British Columbia in April, when they contemplated handing over all the work on the C.P.R. to a company, in August? Were those ten millions thrown in as a sort of bonus to "my dear Allan," who has been waiting to be "rescued" for $262,000 since September 1873? Why was Sir Charles so eagerly anxious to engage the country to the construction of this, the least needed and the most expensive portion of the whole railway, in anticipation of the transfer of the whole road, including these ten millions, to the new Pacific Railway Company?

Was Sir John Macdonald serious, was he sober, was he sane, when in last session of Parliament, he defended this grant of ten millions, (as it now appears to the Pacific Railway Company) on the ground that out of the sale of lands in the North-West the Government could in eleven years build the whole Pacific Railway, and have a large surplus to the good, without the cost of a cent to the people? If he were in earnest, why now fling away all these millions of dollars and millions of acres of land, for the benefit of private speculators? If he were not in earnest, and we know that he was not, with what pride must the 120 puppets, who swallowed all he said as gospel, and voted accordingly, now regard themselves!

THE CANADIAN CANAL SCHEME EXPOSED.

From returns published in the Albany Argus we find some figures which are likely to prove interesting to those who have faith in the Trent Valley project, and possibly to those who have not. We find that up to Aug. 20th one canal boat had made nine round trips from Buffalo to New York and back, and that it was at that time on its down trip and would eventually complete its tenth if not its eleventh trip for the season. The total number of miles comprised in these 10 trips was 9,060. The haulage on the Erie Canal is almost precisely equal to that on the proposed Trent Valley navigation, and the distance between Buffalo and New York is three times greater than between Georgian Bay and Montreal, so that each round trip would in actual figures, on the Erie, represent three on the Trent navigation. The difference would actually be far greater in favor of the Trent route, because all that portion of its outside haulage could be compassed at rapid speed, while the navigation on the Erie is a continuous canal navigation, and must be accomplished at slow rate. Taking, however, this calculation of three barges over the Trent to one over the Erie, we find that each season a single barge would forward to Montreal in twenty-seven passages from Waubashene 864,000 bushels of grain, and each tow of fifteen barges in a season 4,860,000 bush. These figures give us an idea of the actual practical carrying capacity of the Trent Valley navigation, as proposed, by five foot locks, and offer the strongest possible confutation of the arguments of those, both interested and otherwise, who claim that the Trent route must have ten foot locks. Other figures, which we take from the Argus, show that the tolls collected in a single week on the New York canals, at a rate which takes grain from Chicago to New York for eight cents a bushel, was from August 23 to August 31 inclusive, $465,443, as against $462,719 for the corresponding week of last year; and looking at these figures we are reminded of the fact that the interest on the sum required to build the Trent Valley route is only $120,000 per year for thirty years. Another feature of the report, which is of special interest to us in view of the proposed Trent Valley navigation route, is this, that in the week's business alluded to was over 9,000 tons of return traffic, showing that if barges were plying between the Georgian Bay and Montreal, instead of returning unladen for new cargoes, they would offer to the merchants and manufacturers of Montreal the cheaper means of forwarding goods westward, and would be and accordingly, not only to the advantage of the canal, but of all consumers along and in proximity to the route, who would secure reduced prices corresponding to reduced cost of carriage, for everything they have to buy from the east. These facts are worth consideration at the hands of those who are interested in urging on the Government the advisability of constructing this so-called canal.

A GREAT AND GOOD ACT.

By an article in the first section of the weekly Review, which appeared on Saturday, it appears that a war of lawyers has been going on between our two downtown contemporaries. We only advert to the affray, because our truly good friend of the Review has incontinently, and without any reason that we can see, mixed the name of the EXAMINER up in the squabble. It is an old saying that "when rogues fall out honest men get their own," but the proverb seems in this case to be somewhat reversed, inasmuch as the falling out of our two Tory contemporaries is made the excuse by the Review for endeavoring to drag the EXAMINER into a squabble with which it has nothing to do, and with which it does not wish to have anything to do. When Mr. John Cargagie chooses to bring an action for criminal libel against the EXAMINER, we shall be found ready to fully prove every statement for which these columns are responsible, for we make it a point not to bandy wild assertions, but to speak whereof we know, and when we do so we are ready to let the galled jade winces, and are entirely indifferent to its manifestations of annoyance. It is open to any man to institute criminal or other proceedings for libel against any newspaper, but when a man adopts the extreme course, the presumption is that he has been grievously injured and that nothing but the fullest course of the law will satisfy his wounded honor. By the article which appears in the section of the Review referred to, however, it appears that a man who claimed that he has been criminally traduced, accepts what he is pleased to call an apology, but which, if directed to us, we should consider an insult, as a sufficient salve for a very sore spot. That in accepting this degrading alternative, he parades in his paper a certificate of character from his lawyer, for which the presumption is he paid the usual tariff, will not tend to elevate him in public opinion.

OUR TOWN RATE.

The people of this town are justly to be congratulated on the very low rate of the taxation for the present year, as compared with that imposed in other towns, an idea of which may be gathered from the figures given in last week's EXAMINER. In one of our Tory contemporaries down town, however, we find the following statement: "If the Council of 1881 will "commence just where the present Coun- "cil will leave off, a rate as low as 9 or 10 "mills would be sufficient for all purposes." The official figures recently published, exhibiting the expenditures which are altogether beyond control of the Council, or at least cannot be materially affected by any action of the Council, show that the following rates are required to be levied in each year:

	Mills.
Administration of Justice	1.3
Interest on Town Debentures	1.5
Public Schools	3.4
Collegiate Institute	1.9
	8.5

If the Council of the present year retain the expenditure under its control within the 3.5 mills on the dollar, and can show the books to be balanced without a deficit at the end of the year, the ratepayers will be pleasantly disappointed, and if our contemporary knows how to do it, we hope it will advise the Council of 1881 how the town can be run on nothing a year.

NEW YORK BUTTER MARKET.—In reporting the market prices for butter, the New York Tribune, of May, 20th, said, Choice packages to the retail trade reach, 19 to 20 cents, but light covered goods are hard to dispose of, and several lots were thought well sold at 5 to 10 cents. This short logic of dollars and cents is rapidly convincing dairymen that they should use the Perfected Butter Color made by Wells, Richardson & Co., Burlington, Vt. It gives the perfect June color the year round and only costs a cent to use it under cool light colored goods to match.

RETURNS IN BRITAIN.

What Liberal Rule has Accomplished.

Ireland Ignites. Agitation Paralized —Social Disease in Lagislation—The Summer Lands in Quiescence Body in need of Prostration.

The following late telegrams are of the first importance:—

Under the influence of the splendid harvest Ireland is becoming quieter. The Irish are largely disposed to confide in Messrs. Gladstone and Forster. The efforts of the agitators are frustrated. The Irish undoubtedly expect substantial legislation next year. The pressure calm is believe unless this hope is falsified. The Government mean to settle the land question, and should the House of Lords interfere a severe constitutional contest is expected.

General Roberts' splendid success in his march into open has relieved England from the terrible dread of a Mahomedan uprising in India. The French press consider that the achievement makes Roberts out the foremost British General of modern times. The credit of the bold conception is due to Gen. Bessart, the late commander in Cabul. The first detailed account of Burrows' defeat is published. Previous conjectures were wrong. There was no sudden panic. The native troops fought bravely for six hours, and the battle was lost through Burrows' sheer incompetency. Many reckoning awaits both Generals Primrose and Burrows. In the battle, and in the investment of Candahar, many hundred lives were lost in vain attempts to recover positions which they left in the hands of the enemy. General Phayre completes the ignoble triumvirate whose military reputations are entombed in Southern Afghanistan. He took two months to make a four days' march. No decision has been made as to the disposal of Candahar. It is believed that England will surrender the city, but expects to urge the retention of the Pishean Valley and Khojak Pass, so as to seize Candahar the moment the Russians approach Herat.

The prorogation of Parliament has disgraced the legislators from an atmosphere of physical heat and moral irritation, and general vexation of spirit. The Government steered through the troubled waters to a successful consummation. Military victory and diplomatic pre-eminence abroad, prosperity and legislative triumph at home, signalled by far the tiniest and heaviest of Lord Beaconsfield's pre-arranged tableaux. The indiscretion of the House of Lords, under the guidances of Lord Redesdale, and its subsequent submission over the Burials, Game, and Employers' Liability Bills, turned the popular feeling against the Upper Chamber. Mr. Forster has given the coup for further agitation. The experience of the session shows the practical vigour of the Radical party and the decadence of the Whigs. It is improbable that the Liberals will much longer tolerate the obstruction of the House of Lords. Reform in the Upper is likely to precede reform in the Lower Chamber. The Sovereign's veto has now virtually passed away, but it is still in fact exercised by the Conservative Peers. No Government resigns on account of an adverse vote of the Peers; Constitutional etiquette requires that the Government in such case shall pass on, and treat the Peers with indifference. But Beaconsfield has only to say "Reject his Bill," "Emasculate that," and he is obeyed, and Government legislation is obstructed. The Berlin and Paris papers continue their polemics on Mr. Forster's utterances, the former holding that English parliamentary government is decaying, and the latter urging France to follow Mr. Forster's guidance, and abolish the Senate. Earl Granville's apology for Mr. Forster is not considered of much consequence. Liberal orators during the recess will agitate the reform of the Upper House. Two things are deemed necessary—that the vote of a clear majority of all the members of the House of Commons may override a decision of the House of Lords, and that the number of Peers in the Cabinet shall be reduced.

Nihilism in England.

Attempt to blow up a Train with a Russian Prince on Board—Miraculous escape of the Passengers.

LONDON, Sept. 13.

A most diabolical attempt was made to-day to wreck the down express on the North Western railway. This train, which comes from Edinburgh and Glasgow, it appears, was supposed to carry among its passengers the Russian Grand Duke Constantine, Admiral Popoff, of the Russian Navy, and some other Russian officials who had been visiting Greenock for the purpose of examining certain new vessels now in course of construction there. The Nihilist refugees in England, it is believed, had concocted the plan of blowing up the train and destroying these officials, as well as the other passengers, for the purpose of demonstrating that even in England the life of a Russian Prince and his aides were not safe from their vengeance. By a most providential interposition, this well laid plot failed of accomplishment, although the escape was a very narrow one. Near the station of Bushy, a village not far from London, pasture-layers working on the track discovered, at a spot over two hundred yards from the village, some fish-plates which had been tampered with. The foreman of the plate-layers made an examination, which resulted in the discovery that 4 lbs. of dynamite had been placed under the plates. The plates which joined two of the rails had been removed and the dynamite placed underneath. The dynamite was connected to an india-rubber tube containing gunpowder. The locomotive in its passage cut this tube in half, but at a point where, by an almost miraculous accident, the percussion caps which were intended to fire the dynamite had been mispiaced. They failed to explode, and the train passed in safety over what was designed to blow it and its passengers into eternity. This train had passed only a few minutes when the discovery was made. Intelligence of the affair was at once sent to London, and the most skilled detectives of Scotland Yard with their foreign auxiliaries are now seeking to discover those who devised and tried to execute this horrible plot. Happily the chances of their detection are good. A careful record is kept of all refugees from Russia, and suspicion already attaches to a lady and gentleman who have been often seen near Bushy, and to some companions of theirs who frequently met them at a house near that place.

It was about two hours after the train had passed Bushy, before the dynamite was discovered concealed in the fish-plates of the rail. The railway officials are in great consternation, and a number of porters and police have been scheduled along the line of the road near the scene of the discovery.

A Colonization Scheme.

A PROPOSAL FOR THE PREVENTION OF FRENCH-CANADIAN EMIGRATION SET OUT FOOT BY THE ARCHBISHOP OF QUEBEC.

QUEBEC, Sept. 13.—A pastoral letter from his Grace the Archbishop was read in the Basilica yesterday on the subject of colonization. After deploring the continued emigration from this Province to the United States and the evil thereon attendant, his Grace made a strong appeal to the generosity, the charity, and the patriotism of his people in order to induce them to take the necessary steps towards the establishment of the movement. He calls upon parents to provide for their children at home, and in order to help them and to proclaim the establishment of a colonization society in the archdiocese. He further ordains the establishment of lateral branches of the society in every parish and mission, to which each person is expected to contribute ten cents per annum, and he requests all the parish priests and superiors of communities and colleges to lend their aid in making a return once a year of the funds collected to the council, which shall consist of his Grace, as president, and two laymen and two clergymen to be appointed by him. The latter is to be read in all the churches and parish chapels of the diocese where a public collection will take on the first Sunday after its reception.

Suicide Among a Travelling Salesman.

St. John's, N. F., Sept. 13.—After the Anchor Line steamer "Caspian" anchored on Monday, an officer from the "Trongate" got a boat, many others were made to note the body but without success. When the fleet had been moored it was discovered the bottom had been pierced by the horns of cows swimming and scrambling for life in the water. The boat rapidly filled and a rush was made for the sinking steamer. In a short time the boats with all the ship's company were moving away from the steamer and heading in the supposed direction of the barges. It was only by frequent applications of the oars and boat-hooks that the drowning steers were prevented from working ruin to the shipwrecked cargoes. It was a matter of speculation on board the steamer's boats as to the possibility of the barges being afloat; however, after a hearty hour's rowing, doubts gave way to certainty, and the boats were beneath the bows of the "Trongate." After the boats had left a detonation was heard probably caused by the burning of the steamer's boilers. In the officers' opinion if they had remained five minutes longer by the steamer they would all have been swallowed up in the vortex around the sinking steamer, or blown into atoms by the boiler explosion.

Selkirk Election.

Hon. Donald A. Smith has issued a card to the electors in which he states as follows:—

I reluctantly yielded to the solicitations of the many friends, irrespective of party politics, who, assured me of re-election, to permit myself to be again put forward as a candidate for the representation of your county, but that only on the understanding that I should not be required to be present during the contest, and although remaining here and addressing some meetings, I declined making a personal canvass of the constituency. Under these circumstances, while I am extremely sorry that the result of the polling has been disappointing to my friends, to me, as it affects myself, is no cause for regret. To the very large number of friends who so cordially and disinterestedly supported and voted for me, I am sincerely grateful. Towards those who honestly and straightforwardly opposed me on public grounds, I entertain the best good will, while for a number of the electors who, as I am informed by the committee appointed in my favor, volunteered their support, but must have cast their votes on the other side, my feeling is that of disappointment.

Proposed Railway Amalgamation.

The Globe says: The Grand Trunk Company is negotiating for a lease of the Toronto, Grey and Bruce road, and there is reason to believe that a scheme is under consideration by which it may also obtain possession of the Toronto and Nipissing line. Mr. Gooderham, who holds the charter for the Toronto and Ottawa Railway, and is seeking a lease for the Quebec and Occidental, controls the Toronto and Nipissing. The policy of the Grand Trunk Company is to prevent the construction of the Toronto and Ottawa, and to keep down the volume of freight which might pass over the Quebec and Occidental should it remain an independent line and obtain independent connections with the West. It is said that Mr. Gooderham is acting in the interest of the Grand Trunk, in which case it is more than likely that he will hand over to that company not only the lease of the Quebec and Occidental and the charter of the Toronto and Ottawa, but also the control of the Toronto and Nipissing. He is not the man to conduct important negotiations with no other object than to get a comparatively small honor given for his services; it is probable the effort that he is working in order to get rid of the Toronto and Nipissing, which is not sufficiently great to stand by itself. A rich and ambitious business man seldom cares to follow several occupations in a small way—he wishes to be a magnate in some field, or not be in it at all. Therefore, if Mr. Gooderham as a Grand Trunk agent the price for his services probably includes the acceptance of his terms for the transfer of the Toronto and Nipissing. If he is not now a Grand Trunk agent—and we believe he is not—he will be in a strong position to bargain with Mr. Hickson after obtaining a lease for the Quebec and Occidental. In order to prevent the completion of the Toronto and Ottawa, which, in connection with the line from Ottawa to Quebec and the projected line from Ottawa to the Province line, would submit the Grand Trunk to keen competition. Mr. Hickson would probably be willing to take the Toronto and Nipissing at Mr. Gooderham's terms. Believe what one may concerning Mr. Gooderham's position, it is at least very probable that the Grand Trunk may soon be in possession of the Toronto and Nipissing as well as the Toronto, Grey, and Bruce line.

ONE OF THE POPES.

The Cold Shoulder among his Constituents.

Hon. J. C. Pope, Minister of Marine, has returned from a visit to his Prince Edward Island constituents. He is understood to feel disappointed at the cold reception he received from many of those who formerly were among his warmest admirers. Being envious at least of the appearances of being well received, he went into the neighboring constituency to his own, namely Prince County, which is represented by a stirling Liberal, Mr. Yeo, and a Conservative, Mr. Hackett. There he is credited with having got up a banquet in his own honour, and invited all his numerous relatives to do him tribute. There were also a few representatives present of the small Conservative element of Prince County, which is maintained in existence by the respectability of its principal Conservatives. The banquet was given in Summerside, instead of Charlottetown; and in order to attract a crowd, free invitations to the dinner were scattered broadcast. The Conservative member for the county, Mr. Hackett, it is learned, declined to have anything to do with the matter, and as Minister of Marine must have felt deeply chagrined when the whole affair fizzled in his hands. Mr. Hackett doubtless thinks that he will have enough to do to save his own political raft from sinking, without associating himself with the sinking cause of James Lindsay Pope. Not only did Mr. Hackett decline to attend the banquet, but the other Conservative members for the Island, it is stated, absented themselves. Mr. Pope's return to Ottawa's a sad, dejected man, firmly convinced of the instability of all temporal affairs, and the probability is that he will at once take steps to provide the sole remaining Pope who has not a permanent office with one, and a vacancy in the Department of Marine may be early expected.

Politics in Lower Canada.

QUEBEC, Sept. 13.—Hon. F. Langelier visited the electors at Portneuf at St. Raymond yesterday, and addressed them at length on the affairs of the last two local sessions, and upon the part taken by him in politics as Cabir representative. He was received with the most lively enthusiasm. The electors of the county also invited Mr. Langelier to address them on Federal affairs, and state that they find themselves all but ruined by the effects of protection. They reserve no better prices for their produce while they are obliged to pay much more for all kinds of manufactured goods. An L'electeur well puts it, "The candidate who desires to be elected for Portneuf in the next election will not need to speak in favour of protection, or he will receive from the electors more maledictions than votes."

In St. Roch's yesterday afternoon Hon. W. Laurier addressed an Jacques Cartier meeting about 8,000 of his electors of Quebec East. The meeting was very large, composed of influential and representative electors, who applauded the eloquent remarks of the hon. gentleman to the echo. Mr. Laurier passed a glowing eulogy on Mr. Richardson, and also on the new chief, Mr. Blake, who he said was a man in whom he believed that he can with and an equal in Australia and England, a supporter in Europe. His speech was

The Philosophy of Wearing a Good Hat.

From Homer's time to Tennyson's
The Hat has been a theme
Of poets, sages satirists
But Homer did not dream—
How time with art and science
Could so preserve and find
For man such ease and comfort,
With true elegance combined.
The clumsy, hard, unhealthy thing
Our grand-sires used to wear,
Has given place to ease and grace
Allied with texture rare;
'Tis vain, however well we dress,
Or how the garments sit,
If in the grossamer we mount
There's neither style nor fit.
A post would not spoil six verse
By "halting line" which jars,
The painter does not o'er his work
A shadow throw which mars;
The sculptor does not deck his art
With aught that's out of place;
Then why should any Hatter dare
To spoil his patrons face!
And yet how often do we see
Outrageous taste displayed
When the selection's left to those
Who study not the trade.
Our reputation's known, 'tis true,
We've labored hard to gain it,
And our ambition's summit is,
To study and retain it.

Having during the past few weeks added largely to his former well-assorted stock, has now much pleasure in soliciting the inspection of intending purchasers of FINE BOOTS AND SHOES, believing he can offer inducements, both in Material and Price not to be approached by any other dealer in town.

Since starting in business my aim has been to cultivate a trade in the Finer and Better Classes of work, with what success I leave the public to judge. The dealer who devotes his whole time and attention to any one line can supply his customers to much better advantage, and to carry out this theory, I have resolved in future to devote my exclusive attention to the manufacture and sale of Fine Work only, believing it to be more satisfactory to all.

In all Fine Lines my stock is now very complete, being well assorted, and of this season's purchase, and I can confidently ask for a continuance of the liberal patronage which has been so liberally bestowed on me since starting in business.

Selling for Cash.—On one point in business all are agreed, namely, those who give unlimited credit cannot sell as cheap as those who sell only for cash. In order to sell at cash prices and to cultivate a cash trade I have resolved, from this date, to give credit only to those who have promptly met their accounts in the past.

Peterborough in Port Hope.—The contract for the tin roof on the new round house of the Midland Railway at Port Hope has been given to Mr. Adam Hall, of this town.

Some Potato.—Mr. Richard Warne, of Smith, a few days ago left at the EXAMINER office a specimen of the Early Rose potato, grown on his farm, which turned the scale at one pound and a half, and never blushed.

Hose Hooks.—A choice and extensive stock just received. Get your bill-heads printed with the rate of interest to be charged upon over-due accounts stated thereupon. Orders by mail promptly filled at low rates. THE EXAMINER Printing Office.

Get Shod.—Those who desire to secure stylish, durable and substantial foot-wear can get the best and most fashionable goods at S. White's, George street, near Simcoe. Mr. White is selling out a handsome stock for what it will bring. 32-tf

Sidewalks By-Law.—We understand a communication has been sent to the Town Clerk, to be placed before the Council, asking permission to erect a shed over, and to place a sign upon, the sidewalk on George street, similar to those in front of the Review office.

Accidents.—George Stanton smashed his thumb while working at an iron planer at William Hamilton's foundry a few days ago. Dr. King attended to him. George Munro, another employee of Mr. Hamilton, injured his foot on Friday, by getting it under a wheel which was being moved.

More Men Hired.—Last week Mr. T. Cavanagh returned from Collingwood, where he had left 46 men hired at low wages in Ontario, for a lumber firm there, and on Tuesday he left for Ottawa, for another batch of 30 men to work at the Longford mills. These visits are proving a boon to the poor people of Ontario, who have been starving since the advent of the N. P.

Come to British Columbia.—Last week Peterborough lost an old and esteemed citizen in the removal to British Columbia, of Mr. R. Thompson, photographer, who has gone to Victoria to pay his vacation there. Mr. Thompson took with him one of the best collections of instruments and appliances to be found on the continent, and his skill in the art will ensure him success in his new home.

A Golden Opportunity should never be neglected—therefore those requiring cheap, comfortable and durable wear for their feet should not fail to examine Mr. W. J. Larmour's stock, previous to the closing of his great clearing sale of imported and ready-made work. Remember the stock is all new and this season's goods, and is being offered at prices much below the present ruling wholesale figures. 32-tf

Gemmia Monument.—The Lindsay Warder says:—"The executors of the late Michael Crouch, of Eastmore, purchased from the firm of J. & R. Wallenden, of Whitby, a large Scotch granite monument, to be erected during the fall in the family plot in Eastmore Cemetery. The sale was effected by Mr. David Walker, their agent, while in Peterborough on Saturday last. The price paid for the monument was in the neighborhood of $300.

Industrial Exhibition.—The Auburn Woollen Company, had a fine display of their goods at the Industrial Exhibition at Toronto, and came off with honors. They took a silver medal for the best exhibition of coatings, a silver medal for the best medium finish Spring and Fall tweeds, and a bronze medal for second best fine wool tweeds. This is a very creditable exhibit of the excellence of the manufactures of this enterprising company, and shows the absurdity of the Review's separation that they paint and ink their cloth.

National Policy.—Last week we referred to the fact that Mr. T. Cavanagh had hired 90 men to work in Mr. Perry's (the name being erroneously given Cooke) shanty at Sault St. Marie, at $16 a month, and referred to them very low wages as compared with what used to be paid to lumbermen. The Review says this is "one of those dishonest, unpatriotic falsehoods," and goes on to say that "these men work hard, and "as all our storekeepers know, they put their "money when earned very freely into circulation, so that it is not they alone who will be "gainers by the increase of their wages." Our very profound contemporary does not appear to be aware that these men have gone to work for an American firm, who, under our "N. P." are cutting logs on the Canada side for their mills in Michigan. We wish "our storekeepers" over all the benefit they are likely to receive from the operation.

The Art of Appropriation.—In an item in the Daily Sunday the following appears:—"Our contemporary, the EXAMINER, who appropriates our paragraphs," etc. Our contemporary appears to be laboring under the insane delusion that it is entitled to a monopoly of all that happens, in the way of news—if a horse runs down, or a man runs his thumb against a buzz saw, it is a special dispensation of Providence in favor of their attenuated quarter-sheet, which represents a weekly newspaper served up in six sections, one day each—the paragrapher is "not only witty in himself, but he is the cause that wit is in other men." As for "copying its paragraphs," we have expressed request for the insurance we were fragile to no purpose. We have no objection to anybody copying the interests of the public, who would be in complete ignorance of a no-talked occurrence which they never saw, were allowed to monopolize—and we have no baker's dozen of readers. The paragrapher would do well to consult the more experienced and expert assistance of the editor, who does an extensive telegraph business by mail, if he wants to learn something of the art of appropriation.

Chicago Alive.

All the world now looks up to Chicago as the great western metropolis of America, just as all the world looked to Rome in the days of old, to be the Eternal City. Every year it is to be found more advanced in the front rank of the world's progress, and every year the wonder of all grows greater. To any desiring to be in the front rank of business, or for any ends per taining to the world's progress, Chicago is the place to go to. For cut rates and full information, as to the ways to get there, call on or address the nearest agent of the Grand Trunk Railway System, or write to Mr. A. J. Belanger, Gen. Pass. Agent, Montreal.

RAILWAY NOTES.

The heavy rails on the Midland continues very heavy. In addition to the regular mixed trains, which carry a goods deck, an average of about six special trains pass down the road daily. Of these three are generally made up at Lindsay.

The Midland, from Port Hope to Lindsay and Peterborough, has now been laid with new steel rails, and the difference is marked. Another embankment sufficient for ten miles, is on the way and will be put down north of Lindsay as soon as is service.

A new Midland station is to be built at Lindsay early this fall. It will be a fine brick structure and will be a credit to the town and railway. Mr Geo. A. Cox, President, and Messrs. A. White, W. B. Ferguson and Tate were in town on Friday last. They inspected the proposed station grounds, plans, etc. It is proposed to straighten the track from the present station to the bridge, where now it is a very sharp and disagreeable curve. The new station will be put up east of the Wellington-street bridge, between Lindsay street and the new track. This would be a most convenient location for the present station, and the change in the track would leave ample room for the building. This improvement has long been needed, and it will be cordially appreciated.—Post.

PERSONAL.

Mr. Mayor Randall, of Port Hope, was in town yesterday.

A. McQuade, Esq., M. P. for South Victoria, was in town on Wednesday, looking well.

Capt. T. Burns, of the Norwood Register, left for home last evening, having with his company put in the necessary eight days drill.

The many friends of Mr. John Braden will be pleased to learn that he is rapidly recovering from the dangerous wound which he received last week by the severing of an artery while in the act of splitting wood.

Mr. R. W. Ollmon writes an interesting letter from Coldwater to the Port Hope Times.

Mr. W. H. Bowden, of Millbrook, has returned from his tour to Manitoba and the North-West. He is delighted with the country and has located, for a number of gentlemen in Millbrook, twenty-five thousand acres of land. He is beaumoth.

EDITOR'S TABLE.

LOVELL'S ADVANCED GEOGRAPHY.—We have received a copy of this new work, and from the slight glance made, should deem it a much needed book. It is splendidly got up, very plainly printed, and strongly bound. Price $1.50, and is authorized by the Honorable the Minister of Education for Ontario.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE for October, while in illustration as beautiful as the preceding numbers, is especially remarkable for the variety and excellence of its reading matter. The Editor's Easy Chair is full of interesting matter. The Drawer contains a humorous poem by Mrs. E. T. CORBETT, entitled "Miss Minerva's Disappointment," a strong character sketch by H. M. JOHNSTON—"Len Peck's wages," and some very quaint Scotch stories, with illustrations. The other Editorial Departments maintain the usual high standard of excellence.

The Market Series.—The work of raising and overhauling the market scales is nearly completed. The old stile when taken out, proved to be badly rotted and decayed.

The Eye and Ear.—Dr. George S. Ryerson, Lecturer on the Eye, Ear and Throat, Trinity Medical College, Toronto, and Surgeon of the Mercer Eye and Ear Infirmary, and who occupied distinguished positions in connection with the London Royal Opthalmic Hospital and the Central London Throat and Ear Hospital, will be at the Huffman House here on October 12th, and may be consulted there. Dr. Ryerson's success in treating the most difficult cases recommends him to all sufferers who may be in need of his services. 32-1

The Camp.—During the past week the officers and men of the Peterborough Rangers have been sojourning at a camp located a couple of miles down the river. As the first portion of the education of the British soldier requires him to be properly "set up," we presume it may be safely considered that the Rangers have advanced that far into the intricacies of military life with a fair degree of success. The camp broke up on Tuesday morning, when the town and Ashburnham companies marched up George street, when at the corner of Brock street they took leave of the Ashburnham company, and mustered out at the Drill Shed. The volunteers have certainly benefited by their sojourn in camp, and their much improved proficiency speaks well for the assiduous endeavors of the officers.

Speaks for Itself.—The following resolution of the Township Council of Haldimand speaks for itself:—

H. CALCOTT, Esq.:

SIR,—The members of our Council, who were able to avail themselves of the trip to Peterborough on the Golden-Eye, so kindly given by you, were delighted with the trip, and were particularly pleased with the crew of the Golden-Eye. The only thing we all regret was the unfavorable character of the weather in the morning, and the shortness of the notice. Had it been one week later and one week's notice, there would have been a crowd. By order of the Council, I transmit you a copy of a resolution passed at last meeting.

—Moved by the Reeve, seconded by Mr. Bleaker, and resolved.—That the sincere thanks of this Council be tendered to Mr. H. Calcott, of Peterborough, for his kindness in placing his steamer Golden-Eye at our disposal, in order that we might have a free trip to Peterborough and back, a trip which was very much appreciated and enjoyed, and will not soon be forgotten. We would also congratulate Mr. Calcott on having in his employ such a Captain and crew as we found on board the Golden-Eye, noted by us for carefulness, civility, and the utter absence of anything offensive to the most fastidious ear, and that the Clerk be instructed to transmit a copy of this resolution to Mr. Calcott."

JAMES ROBERTS, Clerk.

Port Hope.

About noon on Tuesday last a serious accident occurred on the farm of Mr. W. J. Hannah, lot one, 6th concession of Hope, by which J. Hannah, Jr., lost his leg. It seems that the machine was about to stop at noon when the young man, who was in the mow pitching down sheaves, jumped on to the platform on which the sheaves were thrown. His foot slipped and went into the thresher, and was completely torn to pieces. The young man suffered terribly. Surgical aid was called and it was fund necessary to amputate the leg below the knee.

A Toronto paper notices that there passed through that city on its way to the township of Cavan, the body of Mr. Alex. Sanderson, a former locomotive engineer on the Northern. For the past six years Mr. Sanderson has been running as engine out of Chicago on the Baltimore and Ohio railway. A few days ago his engine struck a cow and was thrown off the track. Seven loaded cars followed the engine, and ran over poor Sanderson, mangling him frightfully. He lived only forty minutes after being taken from the wreck. He was but recently married. His remains arrived at Millbrook on Sunday by special train and were interred.

A Dastardly Act.

OTTAWA, Sept. 13.—The grave of McAuley, the fireman of No. 1 station of this city, was desecrated sometime between Saturday night and this morning. The handsome monument which was erected to his memory was upset and broken in several pieces by a heavy fence rail or rail. It will be remembered that in October, 1879, McAuley left his station on leave and never returned. Some days after his body was found down the river with a bullet through the head. The occurrence created a great deal of excitement at the time, as there was little doubt of the unfortunate fellow having been murdered. His friends are greatly incensed over the desecration of his grave. There is no clue to the perpetrators.

The Midland Railway.

From the Port Hope Times.

It is satisfactory to note, as of late we have had occasion to do, the prosperity which has come to the Midland Railway, under its present vigorous management. Of course, a large share of the credit is due to the improvement of the times, which has thrown in the way of the Company an amount of traffic unusually large and made possible the carrying out of the large improvements in line and rolling stock which are now under weigh. But it keeps the executive ability of no common order to have so spiritedly seized the opportunity. First on to the improvement to the track. In addition to considerable re-ballasting, the company have replaced the old iron rails with steel ones as far as Lindsay and for several miles along the branch. This is, of course, costly work, but there is real economy in it. Then as to the accommodation of passengers. The company, as was mentioned the other day, are "devising liberal things" in regard to depots. As stated previously, the company intend to put up new stations, built in uniform style, but of course proportioned in size to the requirements of the neighborhood, at Westbankburne, Lindsay, Millbrook, Orillia, Midland, Bethany, Uxbridge, Coldwater, Victoria Harbor, Schapier, Silver Creek and Old Fort. This is an extensive programme of improvements, and it speaks well for the energy and energy of the directorate. Meanwhile the work of improving the rolling stock is going forward rapidly. One of the new locomotives, No. 12, took out on her first trip 20 empties, and she has since brought in 25 loaded cars, the largest number that has traversed the line attached to one engine, since it opened. There is now in the workshops, receiving its finishing touches, a first-class passenger coach, beautiful in appearance and admirable in convenience, which will be known as the "Orillia." Another "No. 10" is being reverarnished and refitted, and will be almost as good as new when the work on her is done. A parlor car, fifty feet long is also on the stocks. The parlor compartment will be fitted with ten revolving seats; there will be a smoking room nicely furnished, also closets, and every other desirable convenience. The windows of this car will be 40x20, and the height of it 9 ft. 6 in. The decorations will be rich and tasteful.

Death of A. T. Sanderson.

(From the Port Hope Times.)

Our usually quiet village was thrown into an excitement on Tuesday last, by a paragraph that appeared in the Toronto papers of that date, stating that William Sanderson, an engineer on the S. & O. R. R., was literally roasted to death while in the discharge of his duty. The name of Sanderson caused all the anxiety, as A. T. Sanderson (or Andy, as he was more familiarly known to his railroad friends and also by the friends of his youth) was known to be in charge of an engine on the R. & O. road. They naturally were anxious to know if it was indeed their friend who was killed, and those living nearest to his friends and relatives at once set out to enquire if it was so. Their fears were realised to such an extent that it was almost impossible to contain themselves, so shocked were they. Upon enquiring of Mr. Robert Sanderson brother of deceased, they learnt that he had received a telegram from Mr. Mitchell, an engineer on the same road, (and an old friend of Sanderson's) that Andrew Sanderson was fatally injured. The blow was indeed a heavy one, for it was scarcely three months since he and his young wife were in the village, on a visit to the home of his boyhood, both happy and enjoying good health, and being congratulated upon all sides on his and his wife's health and appearance. All agreed that Andy had done well since his departure from the old farm with its old fashioned ways, and he, too, expressed his delight at once more meeting his old time friends and acquaintances.

The particulars of his death are as follows, as told by one of his fellow-engineers, working upon the same road, and also a member of the B. L. E. There is no order that could do more for a brother than Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers have done for poor Andy Sanderson, killed upon his engine, in a foreign country and among strangers. Strangers are few and far between, outside of the Brotherhood of Engineers, who would leave their homes and firesides, and—four of them—accompany the body of a fellow workman to its last resting place some four hundred miles from home.

The cause of death was, thus related by Mr. Ayres, an engineer who accompanied the body to Millbrook:—Sanderson was running a special oyster train and left Chicago junction at or about 6 o'clock p. m. for Garret City, Indiana. When about 74 miles on his trip, while nearing Holgate station, a cow was seen walking upon the track. Sanderson at once signalled for brakes and reversed his engine, but the train could not be stopped in time to prevent the accident. His engine struck the animal, but instead of throwing it out of the way as is usually done by the pilot or cow catcher, it fell ahead of the engine, and at once it was under the front trucks of the engine which immediately left the track. The engine turned over upon its side, and from there clear over, wheels up, in the ditch, with poor Sanderson pinioned under her. His left hand was still grasping the throttle, and broken at the wrist and at the elbow, and his left foot broken at the instep, and just below the knee. The reverse lever had entered the fleshy part of his thigh and come out at the groin and held him fast to the ground, with the weight of the engine and two or three freight cars piled upon the top of it. Strange to say, while in this condition he directed the men where to dig, and however he saw a man lag from being weary he would tell them to fill his place with some one else. Everything came to a standstill. To at once get to Sanderson and to see if he was alive or dead was the first thought of those nearest to the scene of the accident, and they went to work with a will. It took a long time to dig a tunnel under the wreck to get to him, though strong and willing hands were at the work. When he was found he was in the condition described above. After being extricated he was brought to Holgate, where he lingered over seven hours. He made his will, he being quite sensible up to the hour at which he died. The body of the deceased was brought to Millbrook by Brothers Mitchell, Ayres, Dubble and Woodside, all engineers on the G. T. R., and members of the B. L. E. They were accompanied by Messrs. E. and J. Sanderson, brothers of the deceased.

The funeral on Sunday was the largest ever seen in the village, there being over 150 carriages, besides the large crowd that came in by special trains, through the kindness of Superintendent Ferguson of the Midland Railway. The Brotherhood was well represented, there being twenty or thirty members present in regalia, and their service at the grave was very impressive. Among those present were engineers from Belleville and Toronto, as well as conductors, firemen, brakesmen, switchmen and all grades of railway men. The funeral services at the house and grave were performed by the Rev. Newton Hill, Methodist minister, of Millbrook, and were appropriate and impressive. The pall-bearers were engineers from the Midland and G. T. Railways.

Angie Sheey, the little girl on whom it was attempted to graft the skin of a lamb to cover a sore left by a cancerous burn, died at the Chicago County Hospital Thursday night. She had been lying at death's door for two years, and did not possess sufficient vitality for such a surgical process. Another case is being tried with lambskin to cover a wound left by the removal of a cancer.

Henry Kemmer, an Englishman, while out gunning for snipe Friday morning, near Bergen, N. J., met accidental with the manner in which his gun discharged, placed several wads in it. Upon discharging it the gun exploded, and a prong at the bottom of the stock entered his head at the top of his nose, pierced the brain. The wounded man walked half a mile to his hotel suffering terribly. He was taken with morning fits, and at each access the brain matter oozed out.

PICNIC PULLING—SERVICES—LUMBER—COLLECTOR'S DOLL—THE COUNCIL—GONE TO THE EXHIBITION — ACCIDENT.

Lakefield, Sept. 13.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

For some time past some evil-disposed parties have been engaged pulling off pickets and otherwise destroying fences, also breaking down shade trees. The attention of the Council was called to this matter at the special meeting on Saturday evening, and they have offered a reward of five dollars for information which will lead to the conviction of any person so engaged in the past or future.

Moved by Coun. Horner, seconded by Coun. Nelson, that the following accounts be paid:—Coroner Bell, holding fire inquest, $10.00; Constable McIlmoyl attendance at inquest, $2.00.—Carried. Moved by Coun. Nelson, seconded by Coun. Garbutt,—That Couns. Horner and McWilliams be appointed a committee to make arrangements with the present holders of the village fire engines so that the said engines can be placed in a more satisfactory position, and report to this Council.—Carried. Considerable discussion again arose over the payment for the late Mrs. Frodenburg's coffin and it was again laid over until next meeting. A by-law to levy a rate for school and other purposes as follows:—School, $1,763; County, $343; Village, $600; was read a first, second and third time, passed and sealed. Moved by Coun. Horner seconded by Coun. Nelson—That this Council do now adjourn to the call of the Reeve.—Carried.

Who has lodged the richest jewels
Not on platters in the sea.

Man appraised slaves his fellows.
Oft forgets his fellows thus.
Manners, raiment, birth, responsibor
That your measured hands are men:
Men of larger, men of feeling,
Men of thought, and men of fame.
Claiming equal rights to sermons,
And to man's ennobling name.

There are feasts unwhelmed seamen.
There are Hints wood skid ships;
Turnbout freighs lackchild cauliflow.
There are cockers on the hills.
God, who scants by seeds, not stations,
Loves and prompers you and me:
For to him all vain distinctions
Are as pebbles in the sea.

Talking heads alone are builders
Of a nations wealth and fame,
Titled lutsmen is penniless,
Pad and fattened on the mass;
By the sweat of others forehands
Living only to rejoice.
While the silent mass is tortured
Vainly like its feeble voice.

Truth and justice are eternal,
Born with boyishness and light;
Wrong's strange shall never conquer,
Nay there is a sunny right.
God, whose world-wide voice is singing,
Summons love to you and me.
Links oppression with his title.
Put as pebbles in the sea.

AGRICULTURAL NOTES.

Hints for late September.

Water Furrows.—If the land is not well drained, when all else is done in the wheat field, make the necessary furrows with the plow, for carrying off the surface water during heavy rains.

Seeding to Grass.—Grass seed may be sown a few weeks after the grain. Thrifty growing timothy will frequently reward the growth of the grain if sown as early as the wheat crop, and clover seed is best sown in the spring after or with the last snow.

Turnips should be kept free from weeds and the soil loose and mellow. Proper thinning is important; a single root needs from 9 to 15 inches in the row to grow to its best.

Roots and Mangles that were sown early may be harvested this month; if left in the ground they become hollow and dry. When pulled put them in long heaps, with the tops or straw laid over them; to be afterwards covered with earth to protect them from the winter or taken to the root cellar. Care should be taken that the roots do not heat at any time either in the pit or cellar.

Sheep.—After the roots are removed from the field, the sheep should be turned in that they may pick up the small imperfect roots and the scattered leaves. This will accustom them to the change of food that must soon come. If early lambs are not desired, the rams must be kept from the ewes, or otherwise be aprooned or "breeched." It is a important matter that the ewes that are to bear lambs should be well fed, and begin the winter in good condition. A little grain fed to the ewes now will do much to insure strong lambs.

Cows that are giving milk should be fed liberally and not allowed to fall off now, as they can not be brought up again when cold weather sets in. Some kind of feed such as bran or meal should be used to help out the failing pastures. Corn fodder is excellent to sprout with this season, and a patch of it should be found on every farm. It is important that the cows have plenty of good, fresh water, especially as the herbage does not now afford the abundant juices of the spring growth.

Clover Seed.—The second crop of clover for seed can be cut with the ordinary reaper. Some prefer to attach a short frame of strips of wood covered with cloth to the cutting bar of the mowing machine, the clover being gathered upon the cloth and raked off. This makes a much lighter cutting machine. The straw and chaff are useless for hay, and need not be preserved from the weather. They may be used for litter in the barn-yard or stable.

Whitewash.—A good way of cleaning stables, sheds, etc., is to give them a coat of hot lime-wash. Make a barrel of the wash by slacking a bushel of fresh lime in a pail or other water tight barrel, filling up the barrel after the slacking is done. A ready method of a ring the wash to coarse work is to use a fountain pump, or other hand force pump. With one of these the white-wash can be thrown upon the walls, and into every corner and crevice, until every part is completely covered.

Machinery.—Harvesting and other farm machinery that is to be used on more for this season should be cleaned and stowed away. The bright parts may be kept from rusting by applying a mixture made by melting together one pound of fresh lard and a lump of rosin the size of a hen's egg, stirring as they cool. The bearings should be well wiped, and afterwards given a thin coat of castor-oil.

Sundry Matters.—Coarse herbage and weeds not in seed may be cut and placed in the barnyard as an absorbent of liquid manure. .....A number of little jobs can be done now that will aid greatly in making things comfortable, and will pay a good interest on the time invested .... We again urge all to attend the fairs, doing it with eyes open to catch any new idea that may be of use at home. There is much to be learned if the time at the fair is rightly employed. Make it a point to go and take the family, and, best of all, try for one or more prizes, and so have a mean direct interest in these instructive exhibitions of the produce of the farm.

Fall Pasture Butter.

Our butter-makers may read with benefit the subjoined selection from the Rural New Yorker:—"Some years ago I packed a 60-lb. pail of butter in June, and put it away for a year. When it was open I thought the butter as good as, if not better than, the newly-packed, and it was sold as new-packed without question. Some years before that I accented some tubs that were packed by an Ohio dairyman 10 months previously, and the quality was so excellent that the memory of the genuine remains as a bright indelible spot upon my mind. In them instances it was the packing that not only preserved the butter, but improved the flavour and developed the color. From them Ohio tubs I learned a lesson, for I could see the potent in the packing, and gained a wrinkle for my own future use. Now, for the credit of that Ohio dairyman, who was and still is a farmer of Cuyahoga county, in that choice region known as the Western Reserve, I will disembellisher his lesson we packed, and nearly my time my own method later and, was similar to his, with the exception that I used the 'Finest return butter pail,' holding 50 pounds, while he used new white-oak firkins of 100 pounds each. The butter was well made and salted to keep, with the usual proportion of one ounce of salt to the pound. The tub was not all packed at once, and on opening it, the contents were found to be in layers, with distinct strata of what had been salt, but was then briny moisture between them. The firkin was new and sweet; it had been well soaked in brine before the butter was packed. Each layer of butter was packed solidly, with no holes in it and no open seams around the outside against the sweet. As each layer was packed it was covered with brine, until another was ready, when the brine was poured on for a new packing, a little salt was scattered over the surface of the last layer and upon the sides of the firkin. These packings filled the tub in six days. When the tub was filled a piece of fine white muslin cambed in brine was spread upon the top (a similar piece was placed on the bottom previously), salt was sprinkled upon that and the head was pressed in with a lever; then the hoops were driven down, and also tight packing made the butter as solid as it could be possible to be made. The tubs were kept in a spring-house, the hoops were tightened occasionally, and when the tubs were shipped, the hoops were again driven down and nailed with the oiling, which did not go through the wood but did split the butter as iron nails do. The butter was made in September. The 10 tubs which I examined were shipped to the backwoods in Northern Michigan, in May, and were not opened until after midsummer, and the last was not used until September, and the butter brought joy to our lonely camp. Afterwards I found the maker, a Mr. W——, from the brand on the butter, who told me his story. The secret of his success is easily seen. Mr. W—— made good butter, packed it perfectly clean, air-tight package in such a manner that they were kept air-tight, and so the good butter was well preserved. What is to hinder any other farmer from doing the same?" This is a question the farmers of Peterborough county may well consider, at least those who do not turn out gilt-edged butter. The fact is that they do not provide their wives with proper appliances and do not take proper care of the cows.

General Farm Notes.

Improved Stock.—Here is a plan that might be adopted by the requisite number of our farmers. Two farmers of Halton appointed a delegate to meet in Chicago and purchased two magnificent Percheron stallions which had just been brought out from France. One is a fine brown at $1,700; the other is a dapple, at $1,200.

Look after the Boys.—A paper read by Mrs. D. F. Denman before the Caudon Grange, Ohio, contains many useful hints on the "Education of children." Speaking in reference to the education of farmer's boys she says: "We ought to teach them from childhood that agricultural pursuits are quite as noble and far more reliable than any other. It is agriculture which gives riches to a nation and the only riches of which we need not fear depreciation or diminution.

How to Interest the Boys and Keep them on the Farm.

"It has been a subject of frequent discussion," says the Rural New Yorker, "how to interest the young folks in agriculture. Doubtless much of the importance given to this subject has been gratuitous and undeserved, for the natural succession of the young man to the farms and labours of their restring fathers, does not seem to go by default, excepting in those places where there is nothing to be gained by the hardest labor but the hardest kind of a living from worn out and infertile fields. From such farms the young men naturally enough escape to the fertile west, but upon those where fair industry returns a bountiful reward and every comfort surrounds the homestead, there the young men remain and continue the work which has been begun by their fathers. But there is a method of making farm life attractive to the boys, and of interesting them so much in rural affairs as to draw them to the farm again in mature life, it may be after years of absence while engaged in prosperous business in cities. Such a method has been put in practice by that exemplary institution known as the Elmira farmers' club. This club has offered prizes for the best plot of corn planted and tended wholly by boys under 16 year of age. The competition thus entered into by a large number of farmer's boys, has created unusual enthusiasm and may prove to be the turning point in forming the courses of their future lives, when the boys of 16 attend a farmer's club as the most interested of visitors, it may be safe to set it down that those boys will be farmers, and probably good, solid, enterprising and successful ones. It is an example for the widest imitation. Boys become such men as they are made by the circumstances into which they are brought. It would be a fortunate thing for farmers, if there were more such exemplary farmers' clubs as that of Elmira.

Items to Cut Out and Keep.

A little ginger put into sausage meat improves the flavor.

In icing cakes, dip the knife frequently into cold water.

Clean oil cloth with milk and water; a brush and soap will ruin them.

Tumblers that have had milk in them should never be put in hot water.

A small piece of charcoal in the pot with boiling cabbage removes the smell.

A spoonful of tomatoes in the gravy of either roasted or fried meats is an improvement.

If your coal fire is low throw on a tablespoonful of salt, and it will help it very much.

In boiling meat for soup, use cold water to extract the juices. It the meat is wanted for itself alone, plunge into boiling water at once.

You can get a bottle or barrel of oil of any output or smell, and by sprinkling dry bran plentifully and faithfully. Never put water to much a greasy spot, or liquid of any kind.

The skin of boiled egg is the most efficacious remedy that can be applied to a boil. Peel it carefully, wet and apply it to the part affected. It will draw off the matter and relieve the soreness in a few hours.

Broil steak without salting. Salt draws the juices in cooking; it is desirable to keep these in if possible. Cook over a hot fire, turning frequently, serving on hot dishes. Place on a platter; salt and pepper to taste.

Beef having a tendency to be tough can be made very palatable by serving gently for two hours: pepper and salt, taking out about a pint of liquid when half done, and letting the rest boil into meat. Brown the meat in the meat in the pot. After taking up, make a gravy of the liquid saved.

A Case in Point.

Down East they tell a story which fairly illustrates the present position of Canada. A deep-sea-looking man, carrying a large fiscal roll over his shoulder, was asked why he hardened himself with such a load.

"Well," said he, "about two miles back I felt very tired, and picked up the biggest roll I could find so as to rest myself."

"Rest yourself!" yelled the other, "how can you rest yourself that way."

"Why," said the sailor-boy, "just think how darned light I'll feel when I throw it off!"

In the same way Canada sucked up the N. P. to make the journey easier, and just think how light she'll feel when she throws it off.—Globe.

Canadian Statesmen in England.

Sir John with Sir Charles Tupper, was lately present at a dinner given by the London Corporation of Tunbridge. The Dominion party were invited to the Haberdasher's Hall in a cab, the carpenter of which was nobly discharged by Sir A. Galt out and his official income. The dinner consisted entirely of fish; but the toasts were numerous, and were inhibited with a unanimous promise to fish-to. Sir John, of course, was inspired by the occasion and the surroundings to speak with his usual fearless grace. He said he felt quite at home in Fishmonger's Hall. Like Ephemera, in Hamlet's opinion, he might seem to be a fish-monger himself. His whole political career, he proceeded to explain, had been very fishy. His new N. P. had "an ancient and fish-like smell." Some of his best measures had been flounders. Although few of his colleagues were 3 miles worth saving, they were all of them eager for plenty, and some had the appetite of sharks. And he would, on this occasion only, and in confidence of the festive hour, here communicate that his mission in England was only a cod.

Sir John's speech was received with cheers and loud laughter, and the cheers, "He is a jolly good fellow," was sung by all present.—Grip.

Humorous.

In purchasing a house, the buyer should see that the cellar is not too deep for him.

Women's heads are like safes; you can't tell how much they have in them by the number of locks they have on.

Teacher—"Suppose that you have two sticks of candy and your big brother give you two more, how many have you got then?" Little boy (shaking his head)—"You don't know him; he ain't that kind of a boy."

A circus manager wanted a new name for his show, and a sophomoric collegian suggested "monolithic aggravation" as good, and the circus must had got three terms billed before he was informed that "monolithic" meant "one horse."

These days no one is safe from the charge of plagiarism. B. went to church last Sunday (a thing unusual), and upon being asked his opinion of the sermon, said, "Oh, his sermon was very good; but the prayer beginning with 'Our Father' I think he stole it entire. I know I have heard something that it was strangely like."

"I shall feel so lonely, dearest, when you are gone," said a young husband, as he put his wife in a railway carriage for the seaside, and, clinging to her fondly, awaited the signal of departure. "Charlie, dear," she answered reassuringly, "I have provided against all that. Mamma will come and stay with you until I return; and as she's very timid, you'll remain at home of an evening and keep each other company."

A popular Macon minister recently spent the night thirty miles below America with a backwoodsman, whose house consisted of only two rooms. In the morning a young member of the family, in response to an application for a wash-bowl, brought him an old tin pan, and, after the fact toilet was completed, handed up about seven teeth of an old rusting comb for him to arrange his hair with. During the progress of this important ceremony the following conversation between the two, took place:—"Mister, do you wash every morning?" "I do." "And comb your hair too?" "Yes." "Well, don't it look to you sometimes like you is a heap of trouble to yourself?"

NO RISK.

Thomas' Eclectric Oil Worth Ten Times its Weight in Gold. Do you know anything of it? If not, it is time you did.

Pain cannot stay where it is used. It is his cheapest medicine ever made. One dose cures common Sore Throat. One bottle has cured Bronchitis. Fifty cents' worth has cured an Old Standing Cough. One or two bottles cures bad cases of Piles or Kidney Troubles. Six to eight applications cure any case of Recognized Ringlin or Inflamed Breast. One bottle has cured Lame Back of eight years standing. Daniel Plank, of Brook field, Tioga County, Pa., says: "I was thirty miles for a bottle of your Oil, which affected a Wonderful Cure of a Crooked Limb, by six applications." Another who had had Asthma for years, says:—"I have half a bottle left, and $100 would not buy it if I could get no more."——Rufus Robinson, of Hunda, N. Y., writes: "One small bottle of your Eclectric Oil restored the voice where the physician had not spoken there a whisper in Five Years."——Rev. J. Mallory, of Wyoming, N. Y., writes: Your Eclectric Oil is a marvel of Excellence in one word."

It is composed of Six of the Best Oils that are known. It is as good for internal as for external use, and we believe it to be immeasurably superior to anything ever made. Will save you much suffering and many dollars of expense.

Beware of Imitations.—Ask for Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. See that the signature of E. N. Thomas is on the wrapper, and the names of Northrop & Lyman are blown in the bottle, and Take no other. Sold by all medicine dealers. Price 25 cents. NORTHROP & LYMAN, Toronto, Ont., Proprietors for the Dominion.

Note.—Eclectric—Selected and Electrised.

People Tormented by the many disagreeable sensations produced by dyspepsia, or are thin, nervous, should use the standard tonic—Northrop & Lyman's Quinine Wine. They will find it agreeable and beneficial. It enriches the blood by aiding digestion and assimilation; soothes and invigorates the nervous system, and imparts a healthful appetite. It has been used as a remedy for bilious and intermittent fever, it produces the happiest results, if taken between the attacks. Convalescence is hastened, and ultimately decay of the physique and constitution is arrested by it. The spirituous constituent, sherry wine, is of the best quality, and the aromatics combined with it renders its flavor additionally pleasant. They who use it gain flesh as well as strength, and it exerts a cheering influence upon the mind. It promotes a healthy secretion and flow of bile, sound repose and regularity in the action of the bowels. If judiciously used it may be taken without apprehension of any ill result by persons of the most delicate constitution. A fair trial is all that is needed to prove the genuineness of its claims to public confidence, and to the truth of the general verdict in its behalf. No article of the kind can commande itself so strongly to persons invalids who require building up—none is so well adapted to fortify the system against the danger which threatens it when debilitated. It should not be mistaken for a mere stimulant of appetite, which many so-called tonics are. It is a true tonic—gives the stomach that it is enabled to perform its various functions with regularity and vigor, and its action is not only thorough but prompt. Ask for the "Quinine Wine of Northrop and & Lyman." Sold by all druggists.

Joy Among the Children.

Cuticura's Sweet Cuticura Cure, equally suitable for children and adults. Endorsed by over 400 doctors in Canada.

The difficulty of administering nauseous medicines, and the desirability of having the pleasant to the taste, induced T. Copland to undertake researches which resulted in the discovery of a Demon Castor Oil, perfectly palatable, of the same strength and medical qualities as the ordinary Castor Oil, and which equally safe and harmless, yet one with much more certainty, and producing neither nausea nor griping. Some children say it is honey; others call it syrup—they all say they like it. One parent says—"My children drink it like water," another—"I had to coax the bottle at first or they would have finished it right off;" another—"My little girl has taken it twice without any trouble, and does not know what it is, though she hates the ordinary Castor Oil, and we could never get her to take it without a fight;" yet another—"I pitch you account of your Sweet Castor Oil; it is a splendid thing—save to take the place or all the ordinary Castor Oil."

The extraordinary demand for this improvement on a simple household medicine has brought fraudulent imitations into the market, but the public are guard themselves against these by observing that the genuine Demon Castor Oil is put up in square bottles, and that the wrapper bears the name of this article by seeing that the name, Demon Castor Oil, is on both the wrapper and directions.

The manufactured having purchased Messrs. T. Copland & Co's interest in the above patent, are now manufacturing it from the purest castor beans. December & Sprout, Toronto.

Excellent Farm For Sale.

The undersigned offer for sale that valuable farm in the Township of Smith—one mile from Selwyn—composed of East Pt. 23, in the 13th Concession, containing 200 acres, more or less, 175 acres cleared; 120 acres of the balance can be worked by machinery. On parcel No. 1 there is a good Frame House, with Frame Kitchen, Driving Sheds and Carriage House. On parcel No. 2 there is a comfortable Log House, Frame Barn, and Frame Horse Barn.

On parcel No. 3 there is a never-failing cedar log house. The farm is well watered with wells, and is best commanded itself so strongly to the wants invalids who require building up—none is so well adapted to fortify the system against the danger which threatens it when debilitated. It should not be mistaken for a mere stimulant of appetite, which many so-called tonics are. It is a true tonic—gives the stomach that it is enabled to perform its various functions with regularity and vigor, and its action is not only thorough but prompt. Ask for the "Quinine Wine of Northrop and & Lyman." Sold by all druggists.

Joy Among the Children.

Cuticura's Sweet Cuticura Cure, equally suitable for children and adults. Endorsed by over 400 doctors in Canada.

The difficulty of administering nauseous medicines, and the desirability of having the pleasant to the taste, induced T. Copland to undertake researches which resulted in the discovery of a Demon Castor Oil, perfectly palatable, of the same strength and medical qualities as the ordinary Castor Oil, and which equally safe and harmless, yet one with much more certainty, and producing neither nausea nor griping. Some children say it is honey; others call it syrup—they all say they like it. One parent says—"My children drink it like water," another—"I had to coax the bottle at first or they would have finished it right off;" another—"My little girl has taken it twice without any trouble, and does not know what it is, though she hates the ordinary Castor Oil, and we could never get her to take it without a fight;" yet another—"I pitch you account of your Sweet Castor Oil; it is a splendid thing—save to take the place or all the ordinary Castor Oil."

The extraordinary demand for this improvement on a simple household medicine has brought fraudulent imitations into the market, but the public are guard themselves against these by observing that the genuine Demon Castor Oil is put up in square bottles, and that the wrapper bears the name of this article by seeing that the name, Demon Castor Oil, is on both the wrapper and directions.

The manufactured having purchased Messrs. T. Copland & Co's interest in the above patent, are now manufacturing it from the purest castor beans. December & Sprout, Toronto.

PETERBOROUGH, SEPT. 23, 1880.

ABSURD EXPENDITURE.

The excitement which was originated throughout the country, by the Trent affair, and was renewed and aggravated by the Fenian fiasco, led the Government to the adoption of a militia system which has cost the country no less than ten millions of dollars in as many years, and which if continued on its present basis will cost the country $800,000 a year for all time. That money has been to a very large extent thrown away, inasmuch as it affords no return whatever for the outlay, and as it is mainly expended upon a comparatively few salaried officials. We believe any industrious man who is fortunate enough to find employment, no matter how humble, is of more actual consequence and of more practical use to the country than a whole brigade of Adjutants-General or Brigade Majors, for the workingman creates new wealth for his country by his earnings, while the other is simply a drone who lives upon the labors of his fellows. We do not see that there exists any necessity whatever in Canada for maintaining even the semblance of a standing army. We have no foes to fear, nor is there the remotest prospect of our becoming embroiled with any foreign enemy; if an emergency should arise of this nature, our people would be found quite as ready and quite as prepared to respond to the call of duty, and to defend the sanctity of their firesides, without as with this annual expenditure of $800,000. It is a constant cry on behalf of the Government that they are unable to take up and prosecute useful public enterprises, demanded in the interest of trade and commerce, and necessary to our progress and development, because the "finances of the country will not permit it." Our rulers say they would like to build the Trent Valley Canal, but they are unable, from the want of the necessary means. The money thrown away in useless military display, and in fattening officials who ought to be turned out to earn an honest living, in four years would build the Trent Valley works. Let the members of Parliament who are interested in this enterprise make the demand next session that the expenditure under the head of "military" be dropped from the public accounts for the next ten years at least, and the means so afforded of constructing an enterprise that will be of practical use and benefit to the country. It might be a little hard on the Deputy Adjutants-General, the Brigade-Majors, the Paymasters, &c., but they could be provided with employment on the Trent route, which would enable them to earn as honest if not as easy a living as they are now doing at the expense of the country.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

IT NOW APPEARS that the arrangements concerning the Pacific Railway with the company referred to in reports, are so far from satisfactory, that it is not likely that Parliament will be called together before the usual time in February next.

THE work of compulsorily superannuating efficient public servants, in the Lower Provinces, to make room for Government proteges, continues vigorously, notwithstanding the denunciations of the Liberal press.

IN THE case of the man Brown, arrested and held in gaol at Chatham for implication in the butchery at Buffalo of the girl McRae, there would seem to have been a strange miscarriage of justice. The case was kept dallying in the American Courts until the time had expired in which Brown could be held by our Courts, and he has consequently been set at liberty.

FOLLOWING the example of the stove manufacturers, the nail-makers have formed a ring to keep up the prices at the expense of the consumers. There are but three of them in the Dominion and they meet monthly to regulate the trade, each putting up $1,000, which he forfeits if he breaks the rates as to prices for sale.

THE census of the fallen City of Vimy Ridge have risen in value to $2,000 each. This is owing to the fact that each shareholder who has been sold out, or has had to compromise in order to settle with the officers appointed by law, loses his rights as a shareholder, so that the interest on the assets of stock is confined to the few who were able to meet the demands upon them without forfeiting their rights. Among these are the lately released convicts, to whom the colleges of the Bank was due, and to whom the thousands of widows and orphans, begged by their casualty, will look in vain for relief. There seems to be a peculiar irony of fortune in this triumph of the unjust.

THE REPORT of Messrs Reid and Pell, the agricultural delegates who came across the ocean to report upon this country as a field for emigration, draws attention to the superiority of the agricultural machinery here, over that in use in Great Britain. They calculate that wheat can be laid down at Liverpool with a sufficient profit for the producer at 42 shillings per quarter. Their report is generally favorable to Canada, but not so much so as we were led to expect by their expressions while here.

THE EDINBURG Scotsman pays Sir John Macdonald the doubtful compliment of saying that in his lectures to the Manchester tradesmen on the errors of their ways in foolishly following free trade, Sir John stated, "a good many things of unquestionable inaccuracy." Had the Scotsman know Sir John as well as he is known at home, it would have understood that unquestionable inaccuracy, and masterly inactivity, are the leading characteristics upon which he prides himself.

IT is understood that the Canadian Banks are about to reduce the rate of interest on deposits to 3 per cent. Some of the Banks have already taken this step without diminishing business, and it is likely to become general. $6,000,000 of capital is coming over from Paris for investment in Canada, and it is also stated that there are £200,000,000 of British capital looking this way for the same end, and the probability is that the rate of interest to depositors will not only be decreased, but that borrowers will also get the advantage of lower rates.

WE ARE PLACED in receipt of a circular from Ireland headed "an injustice that needs attention," by which it is shewn that to send by money order $10 to the United States costs only 10 cents as against 20 cents to Great Britain and other sums in proportion. The circular says: 'By the above table it will be seen the disadvantage those who hail from the Old Country are placed in, as regards the use of the Money Order system. The great need that exists for the convenience of remitting small amounts from Canada to the United Kingdom, and vice versa, must be known to most people. Is it therefore unreasonable to ask for such an alteration in the charges, that they shall, at the least, be equitable to all who make Canada their home?' We commend these facts to the consideration of our paternal Government at Ottawa.

The Canadian Pacific.

Another Grand Finale.

LONDON OFFICE OF THE GLOBE, 40 Chancery Lane, W. C. Thursday, Sept. 16

The Times says:—We are authorized by the Canadian Ministers to state that a contract has been made by the Dominion Government with certain capitalists in London, Paris, and America for the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway, such contract with all its details to be subject to the approval of the Canadian Parliament, which will meet in February next. The other letters which we have received upon this subject it is now unnecessary to publish, as it is to be inferred from the above announcement that any idea of an appeal to the public for capital to carry out the undertaking—which it has been thought was contemplated—has for the present at least been abandoned. Wiser counsels have no doubt prevailed. It has probably been thought better from every point of view to proceed more slowly with the construction of the line, by which money will be saved in the end, while all the desired objects, if somewhat delayed, will be perhaps more surely and solidly achieved.

Comparison of Expenditure.

Peterborough and Stratford are so near alike in population and assessment that a comparison of the expenditure of the two towns may prove profitable. The estimates of the town of Stratford were given in detail last week and we need do no more than call attention to the principal items, which we place in parallel columns:

The total amount of taxes levied by Peterborough for 1880 is $3?,300, being a reduction of $6,563 from the previous year. The total amount to be raised by Stratford is $63,511. The rate levied in Peterborough is 12 mills, the lowest of any town in the province; in Stratford the rate is 20 mills.—Beacon.

The Pacific Railway Commission.

Mr. Charles Mackenzie Testifies Regarding the Steel Rail Contract.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 15.—Chas. Mackenzie, merchant, of Sarnia, was examined before the Railway Commission yesterday. He swore that he had no interest in the steel rail contract, and that he was a silent partner in the firm of Cooper Fairman & Co., of Montreal, from which he withdrew last any reflection might be cast on the leader of the late Government. His capital of $15,000 he took out in three notes, at $5,000 each. He received no other payment or promise of any kind in connection with the contract. He had furnished supplies to other Government contractors in the ordinary business way. He had 2,000 acres of land in Manitoba, purchased within six or eight months. Charles Whitehead and Joseph Whitehead have also been examined. The evidence of the latter is particularly interesting.

A POSITIVE FACT.—It is now established beyond controversy that Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry is the most perfect cure for all forms of bowel complaints, including cholera morbus, dysentery, colic, cholera infantum, cramps, cholera of the stomach and bowels, piles, etc. Beware of opium poisoning drugs, the only check for a time and produces inflammation. Wild Strawberry is certain in its effects.—36-2ins

Killed by a Bear.

The Terrible Death of a Little Boy in the County of Bruce.

WALKERTON, Sept. 15.—Last evening near Riverside, in the township of Greenock about twelve miles from here, two women and their children, who had gone into the woods to pick acorns, were attacked by a bear. The women took up the younger children in their arms and got away, but a boy about 5 years of age, son of a farmer named Charles Symons, was seized by the ferocious brute. Assistance arrived in about half an hour, the cries of the child calling for his father guiding the neighbors to the spot. The brute made off on their approach, and the child was found still alive but dreadfully mangled. His entrails were torn out, the ribs were broken from the back, and the flesh eaten off in large quantities. The poor little fellow died shortly afterwards.

Newspaper Orders.

We call the special attention of postmasters and subscribers to the following synopsis of the newspaper laws:

1. A postmaster is required to give notice by letter (returning a paper does not answer the law) when a subscriber does not take his paper out of the office, and state the reasons for its not being taken. Any neglect to do so makes the postmaster responsible to the publishers for payment.

2. Any person who takes a paper from the post-office, whether directed to his name or another, or whether he has subscribed or not, is responsible for the pay.

3 If any person orders his paper discontinued, he must pay all arrearages, or the publisher may continue to send it on till payment is made, and collect the whole amount, whether it be taken from the office or not. There can be no legal discontinuance until the payment is made.

4. If a subscriber orders his paper to be stopped at a certain time, and the publisher continues to send, the subscriber is bound to pay for it if he takes it out of the post-office. The law proceeds upon the grounds that a man must pay for what he uses.

5. The courts have decided that refusing to take a newspaper and periodicals from the post-office, or removing and leaving them uncalled for, is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.

Sound Advice about Funerals.

(From a Sermon by Rev. J. C. White, of Omemee.)

In the preparation and arrangements for the burial, let as little time and money be expended as possible for showy surroundings. The less of these things the better. Have only enough show for proper respect, for public decorum and social respect. We are getting to mingle adversity and prosperity together, and are getting to be unable to distinguish moral difference. We are now hardly able to distinguish between a funeral and a wedding. At funerals the tendency is toward extravagance and pride, and, as a consequence, toward vice and the meanest folly. Funerals are degenerating into the most selfish, expensive, showy and meaningless services. As the vulgar expression is, they are simply ceremonies to give the dead "a good send-off." The coffin is covered with tinsel and finery totally out of place, considering the surroundings of the deceased when alive. A man will spend fifty dollars for carriage hire at the funeral of his wife, when he never spent a dollar on riding for her when alive. At a great deal of sacrifice a husband will buy a profusion of costly flowers for the decoration of his wife's coffin and grave when he never bought a pot plant for the brightening of her chamber during years of sickness and suffering. If possible, the funeral should be on a day other than Sabbath, so as not to interfere with the pastor's regular duties at stated service. A vigorous protest against the too frequent and very often disgusting habit of public leave-taking of the body was made. The preacher held that the leave-taking of our beloved dead should always be in private, and not before a crowd of idle, curious, unsympathising spectators. The practice of kissing the dead just before the coffin-lid was closed down was neither decorous nor proper, particularly in the presence of strangers. Sometimes there was more kissing after death than before. The glass cover should not be removed for the gratification of anybody. May, more, the reverend gentleman suggested that the face of the dead should never be exposed to strangers. All the funeral ceremonies should be simple but strikingly symbolical. A simple piece of crape on the door or worn on the person was sufficient to denote death in the family.

Curious Calculations.

The Tory organs endeavor to account for Mr. Wheeler's increased majority in North Ontario by falsely alleging that the Catholic townships of Mara and Rama polled a larger vote for him than they did in 1878, and that these were obtained by the device of putting a "no-religionist" (Mr. Ryan) in the field in West Toronto. The fact is that, in these two townships, Mr. Wheeler had the same number of votes as in 1878, while Mr. Gibbs had 27 more.

While visiting a brewery in Halifax the other day, Sir Samuel Tilley, the shining apostle of temperance, in the course of a little speech, "trusted that that the business would so continue to increase that the proprietors would find themselves cramped for room, and be obliged in consequence to extend their quarters." This is said to have shocked the temperance people of Ottawa terribly. Why? Don't they know the "mixer and muddler" of the Dominion finances better than to expect consistency from him.—Stratford Beacon.

"And the Leaves were for the Healing of the Nations."

This is fully exemplified in the demonstration that so common a pasture weed as smart-weed, or water-pepper, possesses medicinal properties which, when combined with essence of Jamaica Ginger and other efficacious vegetable extracts, as in Dr. Pierce's Compound Extract of Smart-weed. It constitutes a most potent remedy for bowel affections as diarrhœa, dysentery, flux, &c. It is also an efficacious medicine for colds, and to break up fevers and inflammatory attacks, and for the alleviation of pain. Every family should keep a supply of it. 50 cents by druggists.

Is it any wonder that people should add the syllable "bug" to Sir Samuel Tilley's "Hon" when we see him passed as a local preacher in the Methodist denomination? At Ottawa he was content to take his piety by telephone—it was more convenient and there was no offertory plate.—Free Press

One of the sights of the city of Hamilton is the factory in which the celebrated "Myrtle Navy" tobacco is made. Some people may suppose that putting up plugs of tobacco must be a very simple matter, but a walk among the complicated and complicated machinery of this establishment would speedily undeceive them. There are hydraulic presses, stamp presses, twin fixtures, all of enormous strength, besides a steam engine and many other pieces of machinery.

South Monaghan.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER

DEAR SIR,—In your edition of Sept. 9th I observed a communication under the head of South Monaghan, at which I was much surprised, knowing the character of your journal for truth and veracity. With a very poor show of wanting to give the news of the township, your correspondent deals a stab of the meanest possible character to a worthy member of our community, and although I do not want to appear as the champion of the party assailed, still out of respect for accuracy I cannot leave the matter without a few remarks. Your correspondent wants to raise his silly little laugh at the expense of the "antiquated vocalist," as he calls him, and thinks himself smart, do doubt, when he gets off such big words as "vocal prodigy," &c., and the unsophisticated talk about holy song. Why Mr. Editor, the writer of this heah is, I suspect, one of the uncertain characters of our neighborhood, and as far as being a man is concerned, not fit to scrape the boots of the party he attempts to belittle, and, moreover is supposed to belong to a certain class of persons you might call Gospel thieves, earning his right to this title by giving a fair attendance on the Hill enjoying the ministrations of Mr. Manning and also the singing, but paying nothing for what he gets. Now, Mr. Editor it is one of these pilferers of good things that wants the tune of "Landlord," &c.—a tune which no doubt he has heard often and enjoyed better than any other—started at the sermons of "sweet Bill," as he would have you believe the party is called, and in a few verses of the most insane doggerel I ever read, would leave you to understand him to be the heaviest lunatic poetry-slinger of our times. Shades of Burns, Cowper, Longfellow, etc., cover us. My advice to your casual correspondent would be to let his betters alone, and not try to bring ridicule on the grey hairs of a man so much his superior, and conclude in two stanzas of poetry, not original, and slightly altered for the occasion:

(TUNE:—"Heathen Chinee.")

Which I wish to remark,

That for ways that are dark
And for tricks that are vain,
This poor poet is peculiar:
Which the same I would rise to explain.

And quite soft was the skies;
Which it might be inferred
That — was likewise.
Yes he played it that day

In a way I utterly despise.

PETERBOROUGH, SEPT. 23, 1880.

THE CANADIAN PACIFIC R. R.

The article from the London Times, in reference to the Canada Pacific Railway, which appears elsewhere, is evidently inspired by the Canadian Ministers, or those with whom they have recently made arrangements. The reference to the "growing populousness" of British Columbia, and the great expectations indicated of a return from the construction of this railway, as well as the subsequent statement that British Columbia would not "tolerate" the abandonment or postponement of the Lake Superior (erroneously called the Thunder Bay Section, which is already nearly completed) would indicate either the anxiety with which the Times regards the construction of the British Columbia section of the Railway as a work of Imperial importance, as it is not of Canadian, or the complacency with which it views the fact that the principal expenditure in that remote, rocky and unremunerative portion of the railway has already been undertaken by the Canadian Government, and will not need to be a charge upon the capitalists who are to obtain possession of our railway, our lands and our money. The prospect of the proposed western section of the line ever paying is exceedingly remote. The country from the eastern base of the Rocky Mountains to the Pacific Ocean is almost wholly barren, inaccessible, and inhospitable. The arable lands are small in extent, in remote sections, and require irrigation to be made productive. The western slope is said to be one of the finest in the world for cattle raising, which must be its principal source of wealth, but that is not a kind of production ever to be of much advantage to the railway. The only hope of the through line ever being made to pay, lies in the advantage it offers in distance to Liverpool, or even Chicago and New York, from Yokohama, for the carriage of teas, coffees and spices, articles which by their greater value and smaller bulk and weight, may be carried long distances by rail without their value being consumed by freight. But for this trade Victoria would have to combat against the established trade of San Francisco, which has not only the monopoly, but gives return traffic to the shipping, and it would have to contend with the powerful American Pacific Railways. It will take many, many years under the most favorable conditions before the British Columbia section of the railway will be able to earn enough to pay for the fuel used on the engines. As to the Lake Superior section, the indication of its possible postponement will not alarm our people much. With the road constructed from Thunder Bay westward, and our splendid connections from that point by navigation, we can accommodate all the trade that will come or go over the railway for fifty years to come. Meantime it is suggestive that those who laughed at Mr. Mackenzie's scheme for utilization of these "magnificent water stretches," as a means of saving the country the vast expense of building a portion of the railway which is at most impracticable, or at least postponing it till the ability of the country is equal to the task, are now apparently compelled to fall back upon the policy which they affected to despise. If the company are to be relieved of the responsibility of building this section of the road, and to have all that portion of it already built, and the heavier expense in British Columbia, takes off their hands, leaving them only the prairie section costing only $13,000 per mile to construct, it will be interesting to know how much money and how much land the mysterious company are to receive as a bonus. The information will be awaited with anxiety.

A PERNICIOUS SCHEME.

It appears that the advocates of the Grand Junction Railway, not satisfied with the injury which they have already done the town of Peterborough, by cutting off our eastern markets, would not only like to see the other cheek presented, but would ask us to help to smite ourselves. The town, we understand, is being canvassed for a bonus to help build the road from Peterborough to Omemee, and we are of opinion that the town will answer an emphatic "no." At least that is the answer their own interests suggest, unless some very feasible conditions are made in the by-law.

THE $4,000 BONUS.

When the bonus of $4,000 was granted to the Midland Railway Company a few years since by the Town Council, the act was viewed with general approval. The establishment here of such a station-house, and buildings to correspond, as we now have here, are sufficient proof of the wisdom of the Council and of the people of that time, and subsequent events have confirmed their good judgment. Owing to a neglect of the then Mayor to perform his duties, the by-law granting this bonus was never legally completed, and there are some men now who would do violence to the good faith of the town, and to all instincts of honor and self-respect by endeavoring to make the fulfilling of the fair pledge of the Council in 1878, the means of further demands on the Railway. If the Council of this year are squeamish about carrying out their duties, if they are afraid of rectifying an error of omission of a preceding Council, let them say so, and let them submit the matter to the people—the ratepayers—who, we are quite sure, are willing to ratify an injustice of the kind alluded to, more particularly when they see that the management of the railway is now certainly not directed to the disadvantage of Peterborough.

THE WHEAT CROP.

The crop reports collected by the Dominion Telegraph Company do not alter to any great degree what is generally known concerning the yield of Canada. In Ontario fall wheat in some of the best sections, such as Peterborough, Ontario, Northumberland, Durham, Victoria and the Ottawa Valley was much winter-killed and the yield, though greater than expected, in some quarters, owing to the well-filled heads, is still small. Spring wheat has been apparently a general failure, owing to the prevalence of rust, and much of the land on which the fall wheat had been winter killed was sowed with spring wheat the larger acreage renders the failure more severe. Speaking of this an exchange says:—

"An analysis of county reports shows that of fall wheat twelve are above the average, three average and eleven under, and of Spring wheat seven are average and six teen under the average, while none are above the average. It must be remembered too that those below the average are almost total failures in many cases. Oats and peas have yielded very abundantly and barley has been at least an average crop, somewhat above rather than below. The root and fruit crops have been very large. The Quebec crops are as regards all kinds about an average, less abundant as regards coarse grains, and more prosperous as regards wheat, of which the province, however, yields a comparatively small crop. The weevil has rendered Nova Scotia an unprofitable field for wheat growing of late, but this year larger areas were sowed, and the yield has been comparatively good. In other Maritime Provinces the reports are fair, Prince Edward Island especially having a good crop of potatoes, upon which she is about as dependent as Ireland.

Canada and the Railway.

Significance to European capitalists of the Government's appeal—The profitable and unprofitable sections—What might be prudently done.

A special cable to the Globe says that on Friday the following editorial appeared in the London Times:—Portions of the Pacific Railway have been begun at an expenditure computed to amount with surveys to five or six millions sterling. At this point, however, the purse or the courage of the Canadian Administration has failed it, and it has appealed to European capitalists a second time to accept a transfer of the risks and profits. The Prime Minister and his colleagues, who have within the past few weeks been visiting London sailed for Quebec yesterday, taking back with them the welcome news that they have succeeded in their mission. A large part of the country traversed is exceedingly rich. The continual increase in British Columbia populousness bids fair to swell the traffic returns yearly more and more. So, too, the stages not only through the fertile belt of Manitoba, but even beyond to the neighbourhood of the Rocky Mountains, may be relied upon to grow gradually self-sufficing. Hungry English towns calling out to be nourished from the virgin wheat fields of the Canadian Northwest will feed the Pacific Railway engines on their passage towards.

THE HIGH LAND BARRIER

of British Columbia. All these divisions of the line may be shown to be likely to maintain themselves. The warmest advocates of the undertaking do not venture to say so much for the 630 miles between Lake Nipissing and Thunder Bay. By common consent this is the pauper that the rest of the family will have to support. The wilds which this section has to traverse may possibly develop unexpected capacities of wealth. In the existing state of information the utmost to be said for its title to a railway is that in the through traffic between Canada and British Columbia. In summer it is lonely and desolate. What it is in winter, how yet more savage and dreary, none can say with authority, for no Englishman seems to have ventured upon an experience. The through railway is in the bond; it is an element in the basis of the treaty of political union between British Columbia and Canada. No arrangement would be tolerated by the former which would put off to an indefinite future the completion of this unpromising stage of the journey. Vigour in prosecuting the same would provoke, instead of ARRESTING SUSPICION.

IT IS A NECESSARY LINK

A very different question is, whether the Dominion would not have been wise to retain for itself this especial burden, and not endeavor to throw it upon European capitalists. If they accept it they do so solely because they believe the dose to have been sweetened to an extent which will be very costly to Canadian taxpayers; but a State is long-lived, and can afford to wait for its profits, provided that when they come they will recoup its losses. Sooner or later the hope is that the Canada Pacific Railway will yield a noble profit on the outlay, weighted though it be with the Thunder Bay section. This future net profit for momentary emancipation from engineering embarrassments. On the other hand it does not follow that this profit will fall to the shareholders who, as the financier promoters of the undertaking hope, will take the concession off their hands at a handsomely enhanced price. Individual shareholders have to exist upon the proceeds of the enterprises upon which they embark. It is little comfort to them when they are hungering for immediate dividends that the prophesies eye can see thousands of miles of railway studded with villages, farmsteads and cities, which have all paid meanly to the company for the ground they stand upon and still in form for transit to and fro. Perhaps it may be found practicable by breaking the undertaking into sections to moderate the splendid risks of a railroad of some thousands of miles, in which the traffic of the fruitful shores of Lake Winnipeg and that of the unknown wilderness on the north of Lake Superior are brought into a confusion hotch-potch. Even some prudent inventors might be willing to help to provide Manitoba farmers with a railway, who would think such means of conveyance a superfluous luxury for the red Indians and bisons, but that is a matter for the fortunate possessors of the Canadian concession to consider. They may be trusted to know how to dress with ease to suit the varying palates of their customers the game they have captured.

THE DOMINION SIGNS AWAY

Ayoob Khan's Defeat.

The Full Story of Sir Frederick Roberts Victory over Him.

The special correspondent of the London Times, writing from Candahar, Sept. 2nd, tells the full story of Ayoob's defeat as follows:—

The army reached Robat, 17 miles from Candahar, on the 26th ult., and General Roberts, justly considering that his men required repose after their great exertions of the last twenty days, halted on the 26th. He then made Candahar by two easy marches, arriving there on 31st ult. On the afternoon of the 31st a bold reconnoissance of the enemy's position was made by the whole of the cavalry brigade, accompanied by Colonel Chapman, Chief of the Staff. The fire of the enemy was drawn in all directions, and their positions accurately discovered. The cavalry retired late in the evening, covered by the 15th Sikhs, under a heavy fire. The 3rd, or Macgregor's brigade, held an advanced position for the night. The enemy's position was found to be as follows:—Their camp was pitched behind the screen of a high-banked ridge of hills, extending from near the Argandab in a north-easterly direction. The western extremity of this ridge is called Pir-Paimal. There are two passes through this ridge from Candahar, the Baba Wali and the Morcha.

The first is easy, but it was strongly held by the enemy, with several guns on its crest. The second which was more difficult was on the right of the position, and was covered by several parallel canals, derived from the Argandab, which, though very dry at present, formed a most formidable obstacle. A detached hill, in the rear of the position, and separated from the outer ridge by gardens and orchards, further strengthened the enemy's flank. Nevertheless, General Roberts decided to make this his point of attack, perceiving that if once the village of Pir-Paimal, at the foot of the hill of that name, were captured his troops would take the whole position in flank, when a determined advance must roll up the whole of Ayoob's line, and infallibly lose him his guns. Orders were accordingly given assigning this operation to Hardy, with the Cabul Brigades, while the Baba Wali and Morcha Passes should be watched and menaced by the Candahar garrison, and the guns on the Baba Wali be silenced by the heavy battery. General Gough's cavalry was to act independently on the left and cut off fugitives from the main attack.

At 9 a. m. the troops were in position, and at half-past 10 a commanding village in front of the infantry had been stormed by the 92nd, the 2nd Goorkhas, and the regiments of the 1st Brigade, after being heavily shelled by Battery C 2 of the Royal Artillery and by the screw-gun battery C 8, Royal Artillery. This brigade was then joined by the 2nd, or Baker's brigade, and the two advanced along the line of the canals until they were lost to sight round the shoulder of Pir Paimel, but the 3rd Brigade, (Macgregor's) was in reserve to afford support if necessary. It was intended that the troops should halt for some time in Pir-Paimel and reconnoitre further, but the enemy showed continued confidence, and it was found advisable by Major-General Ross, who conducted the operation, to push on. The enemy resisted stoutly, and it was here the principal loss was sustained. Two small advanced camps were then sighted and captured, together with some guns. After a brief struggle the alarm caused by this success was communicated to Ayoob's main camp further on, and a general flight ensued. Guns were captured by our troops at each step, and 32 had been taken before they drew breath at the village of Mazra, far beyond the Baba Wali Pass. Here General Ross halted his brigade at one p. m., further infantry pursuit being impossible and useless.

As soon as General Roberts saw how matters were proceeding he sent for the 3rd Bombay Cavalry and the 3rd Scinde Horse from the front of the Baba Wali Pass to Mazra, and ordered them to carry on the pursuit for 15 miles further. They met General Gough's cavalry returning, and returned with them to Candahar. The cavalry pursued the fugitives in the direction of Khakrez, and killed between 200 and 300, 70 of whom fell to the sabres of the 3rd Punjaub Cavalry in one place. They then swept round and met the Bombay Cavalry, as before mentioned.

At the enemy's main camp was found the lifeless body of poor Lieutenant Molaine. Some native soldiers, prisoners in Ayoob's camp, reported that when the Afghans were about to fly, the guard at his tent called him out and deliberately murdered him—a deed for which Ayoob will be for ever execrated. Remains of bread, which the poor fellow had been eating, his journal, his pipe, and other trifles, were found in his tent half an hour later by Euan Smith.

The 1st Brigade bivouacked for the night at the enemy's camp, in charge of the captured guns, among which were the two Horse Artillery guns lost at Khushk-i-Nakhud. The rest of the troops returned to Candahar by the Baba Wali pass, arriving at 6 p. m. When General Roberts, at the end of the action, rode up to different regiments to thank them for their conduct, he was loudly and repeatedly cheered, showing how entirely he possesses the confidence and affection of the troops. The feeling of the whole of the Cabul force is that the victory of yesterday fully repays them for their past exertions.

The action was fought throughout on a scientific plan, without accident or mistake, and was certainly creditable to the British arms. Ayoob will probably find his way, a discredited man, to Herat, and some of the other chiefs to Zemindawar, but it is not likely they will be able to induce their followers soon to repeat the experiment of braving an English force. Colonel Brownlow's loss is deplored by the whole force, as that of one of the best and bravest soldiers who ever led a British regiment.

Captain Stratton had rendered great service as the head of the Signalling Department from Charasiab up to his death. He was shot in the leg by a Ghazi as he was riding, almost unattended, to establish a heliograph station on the Baba Wali Kotal. His death was promptly avenged by a signaller of the 72nd. Early orders are expected for the return of the Bengal troops to India. General Roberts has appointed Protheroe to the charge of the city. Euan Smith proceeds to re-open the line of communications and restore order in the Atchakzye country.

The casualties yesterday were as follows: 72nd—killed 7; wounded 17. 92nd—killed, 11; wounded, 51. 60th Rifles—wounded, 1. Native Regiments—killed, 11; wounded, 72. The officers killed were Colonel Brownlow and Capt. Frome, both of the 72nd Regiment; and Captain Stratton, of the 22nd. The officers wounded were Captain Murray and Lieutenant Monro, of the 72nd; Lieutenants Menzies and Stewart, of the 92nd; Lieutenant-Colonel Battye, of the 2nd Goorkhas; and Major Slater, of the 2nd Sikhs.

The value of the exports of breadstuffs from the United States during August was $31,499,000; during August of last year, $28,759,000.

William Horn, found guilty, after the trial at Rat Portage, of the murder of William Adams, was sentenced to be hung on the 5th December, and escaped the dread sentence of the law by hanging himself by his shirt, to the bars of his cell.

Another temperance lesson is given in the death of Thomas Keelan, of Stratford, by the hand, as is charged, of his son John. The evidence in the case is by no means clear, but it is quite clear that the curse of Canada is responsible for the fatal work.

NEW YORK BUTTER MARKET.—In reporting the market prices for butter, the New York Tribune, of May, 20th, said, Choice packages to the retail trade reach 19 to 20 cents, but light covered goods are hard to dispose of, and several lots were thought well sold at 8 to 10 cents. This stern logic of dollars and cents is rapidly convincing dairymen that they should use the Perfected Butter Color made by Wells, Richardson & Co., Burlington, Vt. It gives the perfect June color the year round and dairymen that use it never send light colored goods to market. 20-6ins.

A Barefaced Robbery.

Over $7,000 Stolen from a Montreal Bank in Broad Daylight.

MONTREAL, Sept. 20.—One of the most daring and barefaced robberies that has ever taken place in this city occurred today in the Bank of Montreal. Shortly before one o'clock Mr. Paddon, who occupied the position this morning of a pay ing teller in the absence of a confrere, retired in an inner office for two or three minutes from his compartment, and left his box, containing thirty thousand dollars unlocked. The office of the bank was at the time full of people transacting business, when a respectably dressed man entered the vacant compartment by a side door, and taking up a roll of bills in his hand, came out and walked slowly out of the bank. A young clerk named McCulloch saw the man in Paddon's place, but mistook him at the time for his fellow clerk. However, on Mr. Paddon entering, he discovered his mistake, and told him some one had been at his money in his absence. On hastily making up his cash, Paddon discovered a deficiency of $7,400, in ten, twenty, and one hundred dollar bills. The alarm was immediately given, and the clerks who were disengaged rushed out after the thief. McCulloch, who noticed the scoundrel in the office, saw him quietly walking down St. James street. Unfortunately, instead of arresting him, he went in search of a policeman, and in the meantime the thief escaped and has not since been arrested.

The detectives have little hopes of finding him this side of the line, although they have not a minute description of his appearance. The strangest part of the robbery is the fact that the thief left so much behind, when he might as easily have helped himself to thirty thousand as to seven thousand dollars. The matter has caused not a little excitement and a good deal of wonder here in police and detective circles, more particularly the latter, as it was well known that a crowd of sharpers had arrived in the city since the opening of the Exhibition, and that vigilance would have to be exercised to prevent them from thieving. A reward of $1,000 is offered for the arrest of the delinquent.

An Indian Murder.

FATAL TERMINATION OF A PAGAN DANCE NEAR BRANTFORD.

BRANTFORD, Sept. 20.—Chief Wedge, one of the Cayuga tribe of Indians, states that the body of Peter Silversmith, an Indian, and a member of the Onondaga tribe, was found this morning in a fence corner, a short distance from what is known as the Long House, situated about three miles on the south side of the Grand River below Middleport. From what can be learned a number of Pagan Indians gathered at the Long House yesterday afternoon and last night. Whiskey having flowed rather freely, they organized themselves in warlike style, and a dance was commenced, which was kept up until a rather late hour this morning. Silversmith was among the number, but who murdered him is yet unknown. He was found as above stated in a fence corner, his face being bruised and cut in a fearful manner and covered with blood. A log was placed across his neck, and every evidence of a struggle was plainly visible, pointing to a deliberate murder having been committed. Chief Wedge is an officer, and he is now engaged in working up the case with the assistance of other officers from this city.

ANOTHER WAR CLOUD.

TURKEY'S DESTINY FIXED.

Prospect of a General European War—Breach of Faith as Dulcigno.

LONDON, Sept. 18.—A Ragusa despatch says: Eight thousand Albanians have occupied Dulcigno, expelling two battalions of Turkish troops. Riza Pasha, the Turkish commander, not having received instructions from the Porte to oppose them, withdrew.

VICE-Admiral Seymour yesterday sent a letter to Riza Pasha, who was to be at Scutari to-day. It is asserted that the letter requires a definitive categorical reply in regard to the surrender of Dulcigno to Montenegro.

The British gunboat Helicon came to anchor on the 16th in the roads of Antivari, and was boarded immediately by a port officer, who requested her departure. The Helicon complied, because the treaty of Berlin forbids war ships to enter the harbour of Antivari.

THE NAVAL DEMONSTRATION.

NEW YORK, SEPT. 19.

The Tribune's special says:—Turkey and her affairs are once more the leading subjects of European interest. Public attention is centred on the naval demonstration at Dulcigno, from which the slightest spark might light up the flames of war throughout the eastern world. If anything is proved by the pressure which has been brought to bear on Turkey, it is the duplicity and mendacity of the Porte. It is difficult to call the crew of selfish conspirators at Constantinople a government, but it is probably the truth. The Sultan is timid and incapable, and though he is one of the most despotic of rulers, his conduct is as vacillating and timorous as that of the Stuarts, or, still later, of the Bourbons. Like them, while never gaining a step towards objects in view, he contrives nevertheless by selecting unscrupulous Ministers to have his own unsteady way. But the result must end in

THE DESTRUCTION OF THE EMPIRE.

Turkey has now no friends in Europe. Every nation is busily making preparations for her approaching downfall. Even England, at one time pledged to the integrity and independence of the Ottoman empire, receives with satisfaction Mr. Gladstone's declaration that unless Turkey governs in accordance with European principles it ceases to exist. Turkish integrity and independence must shift for themselves. It is proved that the Albanians have all along been instigated from Constantinople.

PREPARING FOR THE DEMONSTRATION.

A Constantinople despatch says:—A telegram from Dulcigno reports that a foreign man-of-war has been taking soundings off the coast. This is supposed to be a preparation for the demonstration.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—A Constantinople despatch says: Fresh difficulties have arisen over the Montenegrin question. The Sultan insists on the powers simultaneously recognizing the new frontier line from Lake Scutari to Benosh before Dulcigno is surrendered. The British ambassador has protested against the action of the Porte in connection with the Dulcigno affair.

The Red Boot Still Leads the Trade.

W. J. LARMOUR

Having during the past few weeks added largely to his former well-assorted stock, has now much pleasure in soliciting the inspection of intending purchasers of FINE BOOTS AND SHOES, believing he can offer inducements, both in Material and Price not to be approached by any other dealer in town.

Since starting in business my aim has been to cultivate a trade in the Finer and Better Classes of work, with what success I leave the public to judge. The dealer who devotes his whole time and attention to any one line can supply his customers to much better advantage, and to carry out this theory, I have resolved in future to devote my exclusive attention to the manufacture and sale of Fine Work only, believing it to be more satisfactory to all.

In all Fine Lines my stock is now very complete, being well assorted, and of this season's purchase, and I can confidently ask for a continuance of the liberal patronage which has been so liberally bestowed on me since starting in business.

Selling for Cash.—On one point in business all are agreed, namely, those who give unlimited credit cannot sell as cheap as those who sell only for cash. In order to sell at cash prices and to cultivate a cash trade I have resolved, from this date, to give credit only to those who have promptly met their accounts in the past.

The Philosophy of Wearing a Good Hat.

From Homer's time to Tennyson's
The Hat has been a theme
Of poets, sages satirists
But Homer did not dream—
How time with art and science
Could so persevere and find
For man such ease and comfort,
With true elegance combined.
The clumsy, hard, unhealthy thing
Our grand-sires used to wear,
Has given place to ease and grace
Allied with texture rare;
'Tis vain, however well we dress,
Or how the garments sit,
If in the gossamer we mount
There's neither style nor fit.
A poet would not spoil his verse
By "halting line" which jars,
The painter does not o'er his work
A shadow throw which mars;
The sculptor does not deck his art
With aught that's out of pla e;
Then why should any Hatter dare
To spoil his patrons face?
And yet how often do we see
Outrageous taste displayed
When the selection's left to those
Who study not the trade.
Our reputation's known, 'tis true,
We've labored hard to gain it,
And our ambition's summit is,
To study and retain it.

New Hotel.—The Grand Imperator had put down new metal on Charlotte street, where it was badly needed.

The "Examiner" and Weekly Globe from now to January 1st, 1881, for $2.25, including a beautiful steel engraving of the late Hon. George Brown.

Street Sweepings.—On Friday last the Town Treasurer paid out to the orders of the Street Inspector $261.62, for labor, lumber and contract work on the streets.

The Rocky Road to Dublin.—Saturday afternoon Wm. Leahy's team of horses, frightened by the strange operations in front of the Review office, bolted from in front of the Ontario House and brought up, by the dexterity of the driver, Swiftly, Midget's yard, at the Dublin Bounds. The waggon tongue was broken, which was all the damage sustained.

The Rose Potato.—Mr. Reid White, who one would think, ought to know more about running a first-class livery business than growing the Virginia tuber, has brought us for inspection a potato, grown in his vegetable garden, which weighs exactly one pound and twelve ounces. If anybody can beat that, let them come and see us.

Some brass was thrown overboard, in taking another of its promising young citizens, Mr. F. B. Yeo, for some time, to Ireland a Mr. White, the member General Passenger and Freight Agent of the Midland R. R., having been appointed to the position of [illegible] in succession to the late lamented Matthew Walker, deceased, on 1st inst. We are glad to know that our loss is his gain, and we commend him to the favor of our Lindsay friends, where no doubt his good qualities will soon place him in as high esteem as he was held amongst us here.

A Narrow Escape.—On Monday morning last as Mr. William Miller, of Otonabee, was about fastening a rope in the ring in the end of [illegible] some distance beneath, unexpectedly, and made a desperate attempt to save him. The animal became infuriated, and [illegible] Mr. Miller got between them, otherwise he [illegible] have suffered a cruel death.—Each time the pinioned man made an effort to move the infuriated animal made another thrust, happily, into mother earth. Mr. Miller's courtesy brought the hired man, who drove the animal off, but he would not take as many as several York shillings and undergo the ordeal again.

The Opera House.—Mr. Joseph Murphy the celebrated Irish Comedian, will give his great play "The Kerry Gow," at Bradburn's Opera House to-morrow evening. The Western Spy, the oldest paper in the United States, refers to the play as follows:—

"'Kerry Gow,' as presented by Joseph Murphy's combination, is one of the brightest, prettiest, and most amusing, if not the brightest, prettiest, and most interesting, of the Irish plays of the present day. The action is excellent, the dialogue is bright and crisp as a new bank note, and the situations four varied enough to keep the an house constantly interested. It is in each party as Irish Kerry, but it is a pure Irish drama. Mr. Murphy's reputation here was made several seasons ago, but he seems to improve on more extended acquaintance. His support throughout last night was good. Miss M. Ledwidge Young as sing an especially good impression by her interpretation of the character of Norah Drew.

Another Landmark Removed.—We omitted last week to chronicle the death of Mr. Alex. Donnelly, one of the oldest and most highly respected of the old pioneers whose figures are so rapidly vanishing from our midst. The late Mr. Donnelly was born in Cavan in Ireland, and while young came to Canada, settling in the Township of Smith, where for forty years he resided, in the enjoyment of good-will and respect of all who had the pleasure of his acquaintance. Later he moved to Otonabee, where he lived in good repute for twelve years. The last eight years of his life he has spent in town, enjoying that peace and tranquility which is the due of a life spent in active and arduous industry. He leaves a family of three daughters and four sons to mourn his loss, and perpetuate his name and virtues.

Accident to the "Golden-Eye."—This popular steamer which has been the means of affording our citizens so much pleasure during the summer, through the enterprise of the proprietor, Mr H Calcutt, has met with a end mishap. It appears that owing to the repairs being executed at the Hastings dam, the water in the river has been necessarily lowered, and the steamer had to land her cargo at a by-place, west of the town. Through some misunderstanding, which will need clearing up later on, the Golden-Eye on going to Hastings on Friday with a heavy load of freight, had to take the opposite side of the river from the usual landing place, and as a consequence struck on a rock, making a break in the bottom, immediately under the engine. The vessel sunk in six feet of water, and still lies there. Mr Calcutt will be under no small expense in getting her off, in addition to the loss in trade which must ensue from the delay. It seems unfortunate that the Government could not manage to effect their repairs, without subjecting owners of steamboats to such accidents as the above, and it would be nothing more than justice that Mr. Calcutt should be reimbursed for the loss he has sustained through no fault of his own.

"Brother Small."—Our down-town contemporary publishes a paragraph in the fourth section of this week's paper under the above heading in reference to the application to the Council of publishers of the Times to build a shed over the sidewalk, in which by some strange fatality it drags in the name of the EXAMINER. Our truly good contemporary makes the quaint admission, "perhaps we have been breaking the law." We would advise our contemporary to make up his mind about it, and be easy from doing so before the law is utterly shattered. We have a business to advertise as well as the Times or the Review, but we have not chosen to violate corporation By-Laws in order to obtrude our printing office on the public attention. The Review not long ago chronicled with great unction the fine of a merchant for temporarily leaving his goods in front of his store, and a few days after it deliberately placed an unsightly structure on the sidewalk in contravention of the By-Law, and to the annoyance and obstruction of its neighbors For our part we can't see why Taker & Co. should have any greater consideration at the hands of the officers of the law than Mr. Charles Butler, or any other merchant; but it seems that our truly-good friend has a monopoly of doing as he pleases, both in and out of the corporation.

POLICE COURT NOTES.

On Thursday last S. Martin was fined $2 and costs for being drunk on the streets.

John McNally (a G. J. R. vag.) was remanded to get sober.

On Friday McNally pleaded guilty, and was discharged with a caution.

Cornelius Flynn and Timothy Mowbray were charged with selling liquor in Emelemore, on September 6th, against the law. They pleaded guilty and were fined $20 and $4.10 costs, which were paid.

Thomas Collins, of the same township, was charged with the same offence and pleading guilty, was fined $20 and $4.10 cost, which he also paid.

Patrick Cain (G.J.R.) paid $6.50 for the felicity of having been drunk on the streets, and departed, wondering where his breakfast was to come from.

Francis Burke promised to leave town next day, in consideration of which he was let go, his costness being held in forbearen.

On Friday afternoon a man named Dolan, another G. J. R. unfortunate, was brought up, but being in a partially inebriated condition was remanded till Monday to sober up.

Wm. Arnaine, who had let go a short time since, with a reprimand, after stealing fruit, was again brought up on a charge of stealing fruit from the premises of Judge Donaldson. The Magistrate after reasoning him of his former leniency, sentenced him to three years in the Provincial Reformatory.

Andrew Arnaine, a younger brother of this culprit, was let off with an hour's re-tirement, being warned that if he came up again he would be sent to join his brother in the Reformatory.

David Neil, another of the unfortunates, on making profuse promises, not to do so any more, was allowed to go.

On Monday Dolan was brought up and as he was sober and appeared to be very sorry for it he was allowed to go.

Thos. Billings and Henry Cannon pleaded "Not guilty" to the charge of disturbing Her Majesty's peace. The evidence, however, did not corroborate their plea, and they were consequently fined $4 and $2 costs, each.

D. Cushing, for obstructing the street after due warning by the officer to "move on," was fined $1 and $2 costs.

Agnes Farley was fined $2.50 and $2.50 costs for using abusive language towards Arthur McGarrity.

On Monday afternoon Thos. Bell and John Smith, two more of the Grand Junction Brigade, were let off with a caution to eat beans at their very earliest convenience.

FUNERAL SERMON.

The Late Oliver Gray.

The funeral sermon of the late Oliver Gray was preached in the Bible Christian Church on Sabbath evening, by the pastor, the Rev. R. Roberts, to a large and attentive audience, from Rev. xiv. 13. After an introduction, in which the rev. gentleman recited the mysterious and inexplicable events that form part of the Divine government, and that only a voice from Heaven could assure our hearts amid the bereavements of earth that God doeth all things well, inclining us to bow submissively to His will, the following truths were announced and unfolded:—

First. That His dear is noble that is spent in the works of faith and labors of love. Life was not given for mere personal aggrandizement, much less for personal gratification. That life is ignoble, at war with right, duty, possibilities and interests, in which there is not a recognition and acknowledgement of God's claims, and a consecration of all the powers to God's service. In a noble life there was to a large degree of discipleship to Christ, a steady resistance of all evil, and a constant performance of all duty.

Second.—He owns can die calmly who is not to the Lord—not in a creed, not in the church, but in the Lord—in the Lord's favor, accepted, forgiven, justified—in the Lord's likeness, renewed, recreated, sanctified—in the Lord's service, a laborer in the vineyard, a servant in the kingdom. When such come to die their death is peaceful, happy, triumphant.

"Oh may I triumph so,
When all my warfare's past,
And dying, feel my blessed foe
Under my feet at last."

Third.—Those who thus die are immediately and eternally blessed. This is the tenth benediction. Nine were uttered on the Mount of Beatitudes while Jesus was with men on earth, and pertained to their life here; but this came from Heaven. Rises the same author, evidences the same love, and reveals the fact that, though exalted to Heaven's highest honor, He has not forgotten humanity, but is still promoting their interest. "Blessed," for they are exempt from the physical ills of life. They rest from all the trials and duties of a probationary state. They rest on the mariner who has entered the harbor, on the laborer when the day's work is o'er, on the soldier when the battle has been fought and won. They are blessed. "For their works do follow them."—not go before to mark Heaven-bet after, as the reward of grace. Blessed with beatific visions of God, companionship with angels and saints, with happiness perfect and eternal. Notice the certainty of this—"A voice from Heaven." Many a voice from earth is delusive, false, and is never verified Not so the voice of God. "Write it. Let a bond be given." "Yea," saith the Spirit. Let the Holy Ghost, the spirit of truth, be pledged for its fulfilment. Amen.

A short sketch of Mr. Gray's life was then given. His birth in England, his conversion to God, his emigration to Canada, union with the Bible Christian Church, first in Downe and then in Smith, the genuineness of his piety, the consistency of his life, his fidelity in duty and sincerity of purpose, and his peaceful and happy death were noted, and what in his life was worthy of imitation the congregation were urged to copy.

THE GRAND JUNCTION.

For several days last week there might have been observed on the corners, and meandering along the streets, groups of men and individuals, nearly all in greater or lesser stages of intoxication. They were to be found lying on the streets, in the gutters, on lumber piles, in deserted houses, in empty barns, and other places of resort, in the early morning, and occasionally during the day one might be seen walking arm-in-arm with Constable McGhee in the direction of the temple of Justice, whose presiding deity is Mr. Hatton. They all had the same story to tell—working on the Grand Junction—work ceased—no pay—couldn't get their money—nothing to eat—great shame, etc. —but they all, nevertheless, managed to get sufficient of that which bites like an adder and stingeth like a serpent, and though they looked not upon the wine when it was red, or otherwise, they stood fondly upon the old rye, and indulged freely in the hilarious bowl. It appeared upon enquiry that they were not entitled to any of the sympathy which was so freely bestowed upon them, through their representations and those of our evening contemporary, which championed their cause. Each man received $50 on leaving the works, which was amply sufficient to keep them for a week or more till the pay lists could be made out, etc., and the payments made in full here, which was done on Friday. They lost no time in liquidating the $50 each, and only seemed to realize that when you take two hundred drinks out of ten dollars, there is nothing left to buy board with, when the money was all gone. On Thursday last they gathered in rather belligerent mobs around the Market Square and on the corners on Hunter streets, and expressed their opinions of the Company in terms more forcible than polite or complimentary. The Mayor at noon gave a fete champetre at the Market Square, P. C. McGhee acting as major dome, and the men received their fill of bread and cheese. On Friday word came that they were to be paid, and during the whole day the office of the Company on Simcoe street was besieged by an eager throng. The whole, to the number of several hundred, were paid off in full, and the major part of them, as they came, no one knew whence, vanished like their clans, no one knows whither. A few were remained around town, to eat, drink and make merry, to the extent of their earnings, till the inevitable terminal point of the spree, the Police Court, is reached, when we may hear no more of them. Doubtless some of them will stick to the authorities closer than a brother, and remain a tenant Castle McWilliams during the winter.

The Toronto World says:—"Business on the Midland Railway is booming. There were no less than one hundred and seventeen loaded cars came into Port Hope on Friday. Parties requiring cars have to serve to load them the same day or night, as great is the rush."

PERSONAL.

Mayor Randal of Port Hope was at the Colonn House last week.

Mr. D. Jameson, Grand Master of the True Blues, has resigned the position held by him for two terms, and is succeeded by Mr. Allen, of Guelph.

Mr. O. E. Bickford, arrived in town last Thursday, much to the delight of the man who had been waiting for their pay.

Mr. A. D. Braithwaite of Montreal, formerly connected with the Bank of Montreal, is in town and is apparently enjoying this world's pleasures. Mr. B's many friends here were pleased to see him and hear of his success in life.

Home Contributions.

The following figures derived from recently published financial statements in reports of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, show how some of the congregations in this neighborhood are contributing for the support of the gospel among themselves, and for its extension beyond their bounds. Some are evidently giving up to the measure of their ability, while others are satisfied to get along with giving the least they possibly can:

The Durrent Council visited Toronto and the extravagance had to pay $600 for the liquor and entertain contained by the visitors at a formal dinner. The Rochester and Suffolk Councils, to the number of 120, followed suit, and other staying in Toronto one day left suddenly for their homes in a high state of indigestion, because they found they would have to pay their own hotel and liquor bills.

Otonabee.

PRESENTATION.—On the evening of Monday, Sept. 13th, Mr. Isaac Richardson the Superintendent of the River Road Sabbath School, who was about to remove to town, on the following Wednesday was pleasantly surprised by the visit of a friendly party composed of representatives from this and the neighboring Sabbath School at Cold Springs, who presented him with the sum of $37.00, accompanied by an appropriate address. Mr. Richardson in replying; to the address expressed his sincere thanks for their kindness and for the interest they have now and in past times manifested in his well-being. He also spoke of the deep concern he had always felt and did at the present feel for the spiritual welfare of the neighborhood and especially of the Sabbath School. Before bidding Mr. Richardson adieu, the party remained for a part of the evening and spent a pleasant and profitable time.

Subjoined is the address:—

To Mr. Isaac Richardson, Superintendent of the River Road Sabbath School.

DEAR SIR,—We, the officers, teachers, and members of the River Road Sabbath School, wishing to show our gratitude, avail ourselves of the opportunity of presenting you with this slight token of our esteem and respect.

You have for several years faithfully and efficiently discharged the duties of Superintendent in our Sabbath School, and we are pleased to state that all the workings of the school have gone on harmoniously under your earnest and effectual supervision. We are, indeed, very sorry that you are now about to take your departure from among us, and although it may never again be our privilege to meet you in the capacity of superintendent of our school, we trust that you will often re-visit us, as we would ever regard your visits as ones of profit and pleasure to ourselves.

Our sister society at Cold Springs, which sustained and encouraged us in this enterprise, now join with us in tendering our heart-felt sympathy to you in your physical affliction, and we pray and trust that it may be God's will to strengthen you and spare your life that you may long be permitted to engage in Sabbath school work, and in other ways to promote the spread of the Gospel. With best wishes for your spiritual and temporal welfare,

We remain, yours, &c.,

J. F. JUNKIN,

On behalf of the Sabbath School.

PICNIC.—The picnic of the River Road S. S. of Otonabee on Friday, Sept. 10th, was in every way a success, the state of the weather was very favorable, and in fact, all that could be desired, and the committee composed of Messrs Alex. Savigney, J. Hutchings, J. F. Junkin, Alex. Stewart and C. Mitchell, so efficiently discharged their duties that nothing was left undone which would tend to make the excursion an agreeable one. The Golden-Eye left the Peterborough wharf at seven o'clock with several invited friends, and after sailing at all the landings on the Otonabee side between the locks and Campbelltown, arrived at Idyl-Wild about the time excursionists generally think of looking after the contents of the baskets. After doing justice to the viands, some betook themselves to the photographer's, but others strolled leisurely around the Island, or reclined in the shade of some spreading oak, while a few more musically inclined resorted to the piano. The time passed away so rapidly that when the boat sounded the signal for return at 4.30 p. m, all were surprised and left with perhaps a little reluctance. The employees of the boat and also those who have charge of the hotel were acknowledged by the excursionists to have done everything in their power to contribute to their comfort and enjoyment, and were sincerely thanked by them. All seemed to be in holiday spirits, and the homeward trip will long be remembered by those present by one of unalloyed enjoyment. Quite a number were present from the neighboring Sabbath School at Cold Springs, and among others the Superintendent, Mr. A. M. Millar. Mr. West from Cobourg, who was on his way to Peterborough, accidentally fell in with the excursion at Idyl Wild, and seemed to contribute much to the enjoyment of several of the young ladies. The boat got up in very good time and all retired to their several homes more than satisfied with the day's pleasure.

TOWN COUNCIL.

On Monday evening last the Mayor presided over a Council composed of Messrs. Taylor, Smith, McNaughton, Paterson, Dunsford, Maunies, Deane and Robertson.

After the reading of the minutes the Clerk read a letter from Messrs. Hatton, Hatton & Beck asking compensation for damages done to horse and buggy, the property of Rev. J. W. R. Beck, and intimating the willingness of their client to accept $25 for a quit claim, for the sake of convenience, and to save the corporation unnecessary legal expenses. The matter was referred to the Finance Committee

A petition from the Times praying office for permission to erect a shed in front of their office was received, and after discussion it was decided to refer the matter to the Street Inspector, who if he does his duty will see that the nuisance erected in front of the Review office will be removed.

John Newton applied for money to bring his wife home from the Asylum she having been committed there as a lunatic as his instance and he having no means of restoring her to her home, the petition was granted.

A statement from Mr. Belcher, the town architect, advising certain changes in connection with the new hose tower erection, was referred to the Finance Committee. The accounts $4.75 to R. Long, $18.34 to Jas. Stevenson, $9.13 to Gas Company, and F. F. Blackwood $116.50, were referred to the Finance Committee. Mr. J. P. Donnelstown appeared before the Council on behalf of the Midland Railway Company, in which he urged the claim of the company to the $4,000 granted to them some years ago. He spoke of the accounts as made out by Mr. John Carnegie, Secretary-Treasury of the Town Treas, and claimed that the company would settle for $4,000 if the compound interest were thrown over. Finally it was moved by Councillor Menzies, seconded by Councillor Dunsford,—That the matter of the by-law in regard to the $4,000 as granted the Midland R. R. to build the station, be referred to Mr. Weller for his opinion as to the legality of the same, and that nothing further be done with the by-law now before the Council till such opinion be had. The questions to be asked to Mr. Weller to be as follows:—Can this by-law be passed by the present Council without personal liability? Was the original by-law properly passed without being put to a vote of the property holders? What was the effect of legislation chap. 39, 41 Vic section 11?—Carried.

Mr. Smith presented a report to the Finance Committee recommending the payment of $6 30, to Adam Hall and $65 to Mr. C. A. Weller which was adopted. After a report from the Market committee it was resolved on motion of Councillor McNaughton, "that no more gas lamps be erected this year."

Moved by Mr. Dunsford, seconded by Mr. Paterson, that Hunter st. be graded from the bridge up, cost not to exceed $50, and work to stop when that sum is expended.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Smith, seconded by Mr. Robertson, that the Street and Bridge Committee consider the advisability of repairing the sidewalk from Pope's shop to the Town Hall.—Carried.

After some confusion it was decided that the Council should adjourn for a month, though we think it would puzzle the Clerk to say who moved and seconded the motion, or whether or not there was a quorum present.

A minister, visiting a widow bereaved, found her at tea, in apparently a less depressing state than he expected. "I'm glad to see you bearing up so well Jennet," he said. "Oh, aye," she answered. "An' ye'll just be comforted to ken that I'm a winner to mysel', an' a winner to others. I've been greetin' a' day, an' expect I'll greet mair before I get done, but I'm gaein' to begin now."

Touch Me Gently, Father Time.

Touch me gently, Father Time,
As we onward move;
Steal my roses, mar my prime,
Bleach my locks with snowy rime;
Yet, I prithee, gentle Time,
Prithee—leave me love!

Touch me gently, Father Time;
Every dollar—every dime;
Dull my faculties, spoil my rhyme,
Yet, I prithee, gentle Time,
Prithee—leave me health!

The Old Fair Story—A Song.

A mother kissed her baby,
Rocking it to rest,
And gently cherished within her arms,
It slumbered to her breast.
The old fair story,
Set round in glory,
Wherever life is found;
For oh! it's love, it's love, they say,
That makes the world go round.

A fair-faced boy and maiden
Passed through the yellow wheat,
And their hands were clasped together,
And the flowers glowed 'neath their feet,
The old fair story,
Set round in glory,
Wherever life is found;
For oh! it's love, it's love, they say,
That makes the world go round.

An old man and a wrinkled wife,
Amid the fair Spring weather;
"We've shared our sorrows and our joys,
God grant we die together."
The old fair story,
Set round in glory,
Wherever life is found;
For oh! it's love, it's love, they say,
That makes the world go round.

AGRICULTURAL NOTES.

Fall Wheat Varieties.

"We were among the first to raise Clawson wheat," says the Rural New Yorker, "and we have since successfully preferred it to any other variety until a trial of twenty-five different kinds the past season has not only shaken our faith in its superior yield, but has determined us to abandon its cultivation in favor of several other kinds. Farmers, we desire to impress upon you the importance of wheat tests upon your own farms. If, as in our own case, such trials demonstrate that certain varieties will yield from 10 to 25 per cent. more grain than those you have been raising, and which you have been blindly taking for granted were the best of all adapted to your soils, surely the trouble of such tests upon small plots would be amply returned to you in future years. Clawson bears a large, showy head; the kernel is large and plump. But those who have accurately measured the yield per acre have found that it has always been less than their estimate from the appearance of the field. This, at least, has been our experience, and that of those with whom we have conversed on the subject. To illustrate this we have burst at the pains of making the following comparison. Four average heads as nearly as could be judged by the eight were selected of both Clawson and Fultz. The spike of Clawson measured 3½ inches in length, averaging eight spikelets on a side or 16 in the head. There were in the four heads 168 kernels, weighing precisely 106 grains. The Fultz also measured 3½ inches in length, averaging 16 spikelets. There were in four heads 120 kernels, weighing 113 grains. Whereas, therefore, the single kernel of Clawson weighs heavier than the single kernel of Fultz, the 150 kernels of Clawson weigh seven grains less than the 120 kernels of Fultz. And yet any body to look at the two fields of grain would estimate the Clawson as giving the heavier yield. The reason is this: first, the spikelets of Clawson are loose and spreading, giving the head a large, heavy look. The spikelets of Fultz are not loose of spreading. They 'hug' the rachis, giving the head of wheat a narrow, light appearance. And, second, whereas in the Clawson there are more spikelets with two kernels than there are with three, in the Fultz there are more spikelets with three than with two—and occasionally four. Again, Fulzo-Clawson (a hybrid between the two produced by our contributor, Mr. Hugh L. Wiser) was among the shortest of all our wheats when ripe. The heads average 3½ inches, with an average of fifteen spikelets. Four average heads (as with Fultz and Clawson) produced 119 kernels, weighing only 97 grains; there were never more than two kernels in a spikelet. Four average heads of Lost Nation raised as a winter wheat, produced 167 kernels weighing 161 grains. This sowed again sown in the fall would be likely to increase in weight. The heads are far less showy than those of Clawson. Our plot of Shumaker was injured by the drought, being to the east of the barnyard fence upon a dry, sandy soil. Yet four average heads (15 spikelets to a head) produced 160 kernels, weighing 96 grains. Even such small heads as Dishi that, to look at, would not seem to yield half as much as Clawson, would be found by the above method of computation to yield three-quarters as much, our heads contained 130 kernels weighing 75 grains. We need not pursue this further now; suffice it to say that it is our belief that either Shumaker, Fultz or Lost Nation (sown in the fall) would out-yield the favorite Clawson on this farm, and to this list we may be able to add several others when they are threshed and weighed.

The Best Cattle to Raise.

The Guelph Mercury has been handed the following extract from a letter from Mr. Alex. Johnston, a leading butcher in Edinburgh, to Mr. James Miller, butcher, of Guelph, in which he gives his opinion on the best kinds of stock to ship from Canada to the old country market: "You state that a commission has been appointed to take evidence as to the best breeds of cattle for cross ing. Of course this is meant to benefit the farmer by enabling him to feed off my from six to twelve months earlier, and the butcher to get less bone and more beef (and fat in the right places), which is an important factor in the branding of cattle. The earliest fed and the best for sale are what we want. In the Shorthorn of the right sort when crossed with either Devon or Hereford, you have all that is wanted. But you cannot obtain this by crossing with the Galloway. I have upon the Galloway as the coarsest feeder we have and unless thoroughly well fed he has always a deal of coarse beef about him. The Shorthorns with Galloways make a good cross for farmer and feeder, but the best cross we have is Shorthorns with Aberdeen Polland (as a class) both for feeder and butcher. They surpass the Galloways as much as the Shorthorn surpasses all other breeds, and at all times command the highest price as dead meat in London. A very great trade is carried on in this class of cattle to that city from Scotland—my from 1,200 to 2,000 bullocks a week. I am not surprised that they fetch high prices, for they really deserve it. With regard to sheep the breed I would recommend is Cheviot, but I am afraid your country is not adapted to their roving habits, as they are something of the nature of the black-faced sheep and require room. But where little fat is required compared with flesh, I would my the Southdown is the best for fine mutton. Still, I think the Cheviot is worth a trial. Where you want more flesh than fat the sheep meet is one with us are those out of half-bred Cheviot ewes and entire rup, which makes a useful and profitable sheep both for farmer and butcher."

Local Notices.

"From and after the 1st of October, we wish to give the public friendly intimation, a small charge will be made for all notices in our local columns of entertainments or other meetings in connection with which there is a fee for admission. This course is pursued by newspapers in Port Hope, Peterborough, Lindsay, and many other towns about in the same position as Cobourg; and it will commend itself to all as only proper and fair. People who get up entertainments are always perfectly willing to pay for rent, and lights, and fires, and refreshments where they are required, and all other necessary expenses, and then they run off to the newspaper office to beg for a free puff. And very often, too, they rely for the all-important matter of publicity on these notices alone,—either getting no printing done or, or treating the public to what is by courtesy called a programme a half-legible, disgraceful thing, stamped in blue or purple daubs with what they call a "printograph,"—and borrowed for the occasion at that. In other towns all these entertainments are advertised; here, a dead-head "notice" is is considered to be enough. We live by our columns, to equip and keep in operation which thousands of dollars of capital are needed; and all reasonable people will admit the propriety of a charge commensurate with the service. We will, as ever, cheerfully insert notices for religious, benevolent, or literary objects, where there is no charge for admission; but when the object of the entertainment is the raising of money, the gathering of the audience by means of notices must be looked upon as one of the 'legitimate expenses.'"—Cobourg World.

More than he Bargained For.

A Carson (Nevada) City paper reports the following lively law proceedings:—Yesterday afternoon a young man came into Justice Cary's court-room, with the rim of his hat drawn down over his eyes, and remarked, "Do you know me?"

"I think," replied the Court meekly, "that you are the chap I sentenced for stealing about a year ago."

"That's just the hair-pin I am," replied the other, "and here's $30 for my fine."

"But you served your term in gaol," said the judge, "and owe no fine."

"That's all right, old boy; but I'm about to commit an assault and battery, and I guess I'll settle now. You're the man I propose to lick."

"Oh, that's it!" rejoined the Court pocketing the coin; "then you can start in, and we'll call it square."

The young man advanced to the Court and let out his left. The judge ducked his head, and, rising up, lifted the intruder in the eye with a right-hander and sent him over against the wall. In a moment the Court was climbing all over the man, and in about three minutes his face was hardly recognisable. The man begged the Court to let up, which he finally did. As the fellow was about to go out Cary went after him with, "See here, young man; I don't think the fighting you did ought to be assessed at any more than $2 50—here's $17.5 in change. I ain't charging you anything for fighting, but just for my time. Next time I won't charge you a cent."

The rough took the change and the next train for Virginia city.

Have a Smile.

'Pat,' said the fond wife to her bear of a husband, as they drove along the broad road, 'so that old farmhouse is your birthplace and home. How you must love every bit of it! That queer old window—' 'I fell out of it once.' 'That dear old moss-covered well—' 'Water's mean, and I fell down it once.' 'That romantic old fence—' 'Got licked once for tearing my breeches on it.' 'That long emerald sweep of meadow—' 'Used to have to rake it all day.' 'That tall, purpling cherry tree—' 'Covered with ivy that poisoned my arms and legs and laid me up for two weeks.' 'That broad, roome-topped chestnut, with old gold blossoms—' 'Neighbors stole all the nuts.' 'I spent my vacations over the lake, pet, and remember you grotesque church—' 'Yes, that's where I first saw you.'

Here is a short story about an English damsel: 'She had a perfect inspiration about a dress. Only one woman in London could carry it out. But was she to be trusted? Well, it must be risked, for no one else could do it. Mme. ——— promises the strictest secrecy, but being an artist cannot keep to herself her enthusiasm about this most poetic of costumes. It was an myll, a fague, a sonnie, I know not what of the most beautiful. The evening comes on which the dress is to be worn, the delightful owner struggling up the stairs and, advancing to greet her hostess, beholds her in a fac-simile of the dress she has on. Words are powerless to depict her agony of mind, increased by the observations of one or two intimates. 'Oh, your dress is exactly like Lady ——'s. How lovely it is!' Like Lady ——'s, when the idea was entirely her own. It was hard.

There are two sisters in Lonsdale famous for their wit, and there is also in that favored town, says an exchange, a gentleman, Col. "Blank," who for nearly two generations has had the reputation of having courted every bachelor in the neighborhood. One of the sisters referred to said to the other several weeks ago:

"If a million dollars were left to you, what is the first thing you would do?"

"I should fall upon my knees and pray the Lord to bump me out of Col. Blank's clutches."

This sum replaced to the colonel, who waited for revenge. Ten days day the very young woman, leaning on the railing of the piazza at Cobb Orchard, saw the colonel in the yard below.

"Come up, colonel," she said, "I want you

Joy Among the Children.

COPLAND'S SWEET CASTOR OIL, equally suitable for children and adults. Endorsed by over 600 doctors in Canada.

The difficulty of administrating nauseous medicines, and the desirability of having the pleasant to the taste, induced T. Copland to undertake researches which resulted in the discovery of a Sweet Castor Oil, perfectly palatable, of the same strength and medicinal qualities as the ordinary Castor Oil, and while equally safe and harmless, yet acting with more certainty, and producing neither nausea nor griping. Some children say it is honey; others call it syrup—they all say they like it. One parent says—"My children drink it like water;" another—"We had to hide the bottle or they would have finished it right off;" another—"My little girl has taken it twice without any trouble, and does not know what it is, though she hates the ordinary Castor Oil, and we could never get her to take it without a fight;" yet another—"I wish you success of your Sweet Castor Oil; it is a splendid thing—sure to take the place of all the nauseous oil."

The extraordinary demand for this improvement on a staple household medicine has brought fraudulent imitations into the market, but the public can guard themselves against substitution (which unprincipled parties are attempting to sell on the reputation of this article) by seeing that the name, "COPLAND'S SWEET CASTOR OIL," is on both the wrapper and direction label.

The undersigned having purchased Messrs. T. Copland & Co's interest in the above preparation, are now manufacturing it from the original recipe. Remember & LYMAN, Toronto.

PEOPLE TORMENTED by the many disagreeable sensations produced by dyspepsia, or are thin, nervous and weak, should use the wonderful tonic—Northrop & Lyman's Quinine Wine. They will feel it agreeable and beneficial. It enriches the blood by aiding digestion and assimilation; soothes and invigorates the nervous system, and imparts a healthful appetite. When used as a remedy for bilious and intermittent fever, it produces the happiest results, if taken between the attacks. Convalescence is hastened, and ultimately decay of the physique and constitution is arrested by it. The spirituous constituent, sherry wine, is of the finest quality, and the aromatics combined with it renders its flavor additionally pleasant. They who use it gain flesh as well as strength, and it exerts a cheering influence upon the mind. It promotes a healthy secretion and flow of bile, sound repose and regularity in the action of the bowels. If judiciously used it may be taken without apprehension of any ill result by persons of the most delicate constitution. A fair trial is all that is needed to prove the genuineness of its claims to public confidence, and to the truth of the general verdict in its behalf. No article of its class commends itself so strongly to nervous invalids who require building up—none is so well adapted to fortify the system against the dangers which threaten the debilitated. It should not be mistaken for a mere stimulant of appetite, which many so-called tonics simply are. It so regulates the stomach that it is enabled to perform its various functions with regularity and vigor, and its action is not only thorough but prompt. Ask for the "Quinine Wine of Northrop and & Lyman." Sold by all druggists.

MANHOOD:

HOW LOST, HOW RESTORED!

We have recently published a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical and permanent cure (without medicine) of Nervous Debility, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediment to Marriage, etc., resulting from excesses.

Price on a sealed envelope, only 6 cts., or two postage stamps.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicines or the use of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

This lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED

IS A FACT ATTESTED BY THE HIGHEST MEDICAL AUTHORITIES IN THE WORLD.

A careful observance of the laws of health, and the systematic and persistent use of Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda will accomplish this result. This preparation has all the virtues of those two most valuable specifics, in a form perfectly palatable, and accessible to the most delicate stomach, and we make the unqualified statement that Scott's Emulsion is being used with better results, and endorsed and prescribed by more physicians for Consumption—and the diseases leading to it, such as Chronic Coughs, Bronchitis, Scrofula, Anæmia, General Debility and the Wasting disorders of children, than any other remedy known to medical science. The rapidity with which patients improve on this food medicine diet, is truly marvellous.

SEE WHAT PHYSICIANS AND THE PEOPLE SAY ABOUT IT.

Messrs. SCOTT & BOWNE:

GENTS—I have frequently prescribed SCOTT'S EMULSION OF COD LIVER OIL with HYPOPHOSPHITES during the past year, and regard it as a valuable preparation in cases of [illegible] C. C. LOCKWOOD, M. D.,

Messrs. SCOTT & BOWNE:—Gentlemen—In January, 1877, my wife was brought to bed and died on the 7th of February following. Her confinement was a very severe one, and she was unable to retain any food on her stomach. I had her under the care of two physicians, but she grew worse, and I was told by them that she could not live. I then procured a bottle of your Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda, and before she had taken one bottle she was able to retain her food, and from that time she began to improve, and in a few weeks was entirely restored to health. I have since used it in my family with the most satisfactory results, and consider it a most valuable remedy.

CASH WANTED.

Subscribers in arrears should make it a point to pay up as soon as possible. There is no longer any valid reason why they should not. The season's produce is now being marketed, and out of the returns the farmer should be well able to pay the small sum required for a year's subscription to the EXAMINER. Cash is a necessity in conducting business, and we depend upon our patrons for supplying the needful. Let everyone who still owes for the EXAMINER for the past year, or more, think of this, and rest not till he forwards the amount of his indebtedness. Many hundreds of these small amounts make up a very large sum, and their collection would benefit us immensely.

THE RAILWAY MYSTERY.

We quite agree with the Toronto Telegram that whether the eagerness of the alleged Pacific Railway Company to commence their undertaking render an early session of Parliament necessary or not, there is no reason that can justify the Premier in withholding from the people the principal terms of the agreement between the Government and the Company, or Syndicate of Capitalists, or whatever it may be called, which Parliament is to be called upon to approve. It is due to the country that, in a matter of such paramount importance to their future interests, they should be thoroughly informed of every condition upon which the money they are to be asked to borrow, and the public heritage, are to be passed out of their hands—how many millions of acres of the other, are to be given to the Company—what the Company on their part undertake in return—and what security the country is to have for the fulfilment of the second part of the agreement. It is even injustice to the Government to withhold these facts, if they have actually made an advantageous bargain, because they are in the meantime exposed to unjust criticisms and to unjust suspicions—always supposing the suspicions which exist are not well founded, and the criticism well grounded. We do not believe in the advisability of resorting to a plebiscite as some journals appear to think the circumstances demand. It will be quite enough if the whole facts be exposed to the people, and become a subject of discussion between now and the next session of Parliament. If the popular opinion receives a sufficient public expression, we do not fear to trust even to the present Parliament to give it effect. Personal safety as to their seats, when that consideration is fairly presented, is a more potent influence with most party members than that mere blind partizanship which leads them to support everything they think they can excuse. We have had several good examples of this. Take the case of the Washington Treaty. Sir John went to Washington as a British "High Joint" Commissioner representing Canadian interests. He basely betrayed his country, sacrificed our just claims for indemnity for the Fenian raids, gave up the navigation of the St. Lawrence and every lever which Canada had to impel the United States to a renewal of the Reciprocity Treaty, and hid himself under the cloak of silence, till Parliament met, months afterwards, when by a coup de main he carried his treaty through the House by a party vote. Had the matter been sufficiently discussed before the people, had the public mind been aroused as it afterwards was, and the majority who ratified the Treaty outrage been fully impressed with the unpopularity of their action, they would have refused to sanction the treaty by which Canada's best rights were bartered away. So with the Pacific Scandal. The party majority in April 1872 voted down Mr. Huntington's motion for enquiry into the facts as advanced, and proved themselves during the session ready to condone by their votes any infamy of their leaders. However, the cause of public opinion was taken during the recess, and that opinion was so strongly and so pronouncedly in condemnation of the transaction which had brought disgrace upon the country that, when the House met again in November, the same majority of 75 in the House dared not vote to uphold Sir John and his colleagues in the appeal they made for support. Let the Government make the people fully acquainted with the nature of the obligations they [illegible] with the new Company, and the future of the [illegible] on both sides, and we can safely leave the rest to public opinion. If the bargain be such as to command approval, we may rely upon it that Sir John will lose no time in making it public, so as to enlist public sympathy. If, however, in view of the delay which must elapse before the House can meet, we find that the information to which the people are entitled is kept back from them—if we find that there is anything which is to be hidden even for a time by the stewards of the people from their masters—then we may know from these circumstances—and we may be doubly sure from the past antecedents of the Government—that they choose the darkness because their deeds are evil, and we can act accordingly. Let it but be understood that the bargain with the British capitalists is what is suspected in some quarters and feared in others—if it be another great stroke of political jobbery in which the public interests are to be sacrificed by Sir John Macdonald for his political ends, as they have so often been sacrificed before, then we can't promise the adherents of the Government such an agitation and such an expression of the public mind as has not been had since 1873, and as will effectually open their eyes as to the course which their constituents expect them to pursue. Sir John Macdonald will have arrived at Ottawa, probably, by the time this issue of the EXAMINER is in the hands of its readers, and ere another week we shall have the opportunity of knowing whether he proposes to take the people into his confidence, or to keep them, according to his custom in the dark.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

It is a significant fact that the Toronto Mail warns our agriculturists as follows: "Farmers had better not hold back their grain in the hope of getting better prices. * * * It is not likely, in the nature of things that last year's prices will be realized." Then let us ask, in the name of the prophet, where the N. P. comes in to afford "protection to our agricultural interests?"

It is satisfactory to find that the Quebec Premier has expressed explicitly his hostility to allowing the North Shore Railway to fall into the hands of the Grand Trunk monopoly, and that he regards the Toronto and Ottawa scheme as important, with a view to a western connection for the Quebec railways.

The Toronto Mail having taken the British House of Lords under its protecting wing, and denounced Mr. Forster for intimating that a change in the constitution of that body might have some time to be considered, that venerable institution may now breathe freely. The sympathy and support of the Mail and Sir John Macdonald must be extremely reassuring to Lord Beaconsfield and the discomfited Jingoes.

The Mail instances the prosperity of the Auburn Woolen Factory as evidence of the working of the N. P. The fact is that this factory flourished before the N. P. was ever dreamed off, and was doing quite as well when Tupper was denouncing Mr. Cartwright's 17½ per cent tariff as "the thin end of the wedge of protection" as it does now that Sir Charles has driven the wedge home to the thick end.

The Lindsay Post draws attention to the fact that three years ago a "slaughter" sale of American furniture was held in that town, which was made the occasion by the auctioneer who was then a Tory candidate for parliamentary honors, of a loud howl about the ruinous policy of Mr. Mackenzie's government. The other day a similar slaughter sale of American furniture took place in the same town, and these same jealous guardians of the interests of "home manufactures" have not even a word to say. The Post ought to know that with the Tory politician it depends altogether "whose ox is gored."

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

Mr. Wm. Warwick, the well known stationer and publisher, is dead. He met with an accident previous to the opening of the Toronto Exhibition which was probably the primary cause of his death. All readers of Sunday at Home, The Boy's own Paper, and Leisure Hour will remember the deceased by name, as he was the senior member of the firm by which they are published.

The latest "ring" formed at the expense of the consumers under the fraud-protecting influence of the N.P., is a ring of coal oil manufacturers. These gentlemen have already advanced the price of coal oil to 30 cents wholesale and 40 cents retail. What with the increased cost of stoves and coal the people will have abundant opportunity for reflecting, during the long winter evenings, upon the days when coal was admitted free, and coal oil 20 cents per gallon retail. In these practical experiences of everyday life people will soon be able to realize to their sorrow what the N P. really means.

The Pall Mall Gazette draws attention to the significant fact that, despite the exaggerated talk about the famine, "thirty millions of Irish farmers' money lie on deposit in savings and other banks, and bankers know well how much of this money is made up by the deposits of the small farmers. In round numbers, £500,000 have been subscribed, besides the money borrowed by landlords and by sanitary authorities. Had the distress been met by the poor-rate, one-sixth of this sum would have been sufficient. Loans could, if necessary, have been obtained by the unions for extraordinary expenditure, though in very few unions would the amount of increased expenditure have reached 1s 6d in the pound, and the spectacle would have been spared of a population, demoralized by free gifts, day after day neglecting their business with disappointment hanging, and weakening by their presence at the labours of the committee-rooms." We still [illegible] beg we are not informed."

The Pan-Presbyterian Council opened its proceedings at Philadelphia on Thursday last. Rev. Principal Grant, of Kingston, read a paper at the evening session.

The suits against Bradlaugh, for having illegally affirmed instead of having taken the oath, will be prosecuted by the Attorney-General in November.

The remains of the Franklin search party under Lieut. Schwatz, were picked up at Depot Island on May 1st, and brought home by a New England vessel. They had spent the whole winter in the Arctic region, having travelled 3,257 miles to King William Land, and by adopting Esquimaux habits and food successfully withstood cold in which the thermometer sank 103° below the freezing point. They have established the fact that the Franklin records have been destroyed. The expedition have brought home many relics, and the bones of Lt. Irving, of Sir John Franklin's vessel "Terror," which were identified by a medal found at his open grave.

The Lindsay Post advocates the establishment of three Agricultural Colleges, instead of one as at present. We believe that the western College having proved to be a complete success, it would be desirable to establish one for the Midland district, and probably one about Perth or Kingston. The Post would like to see a college located at Lindsay, but Peterborough, besides being the recognized centre of the Midland district, offers many more natural advantages. Besides, the choice of Lindsay might be attributed to its possession of a Cabinet Minister.

PUBLIC OPINION.

A Knotty Question.

How is the poor man, who earns a dollar a day, in Ontario, to be compensated to the extent of at least $6 a year, by larger profits to Nova Scotia miners? He never sees these miners. No money of their's ever comes to him? He produces nothing that they buy? Why, then, should he give one week's work of his 52 each year for their benefit?—Belleville Ontario.

The C. P. R. Madness.

"We can only admire the bigness of the figures. A bargain involving from seventy-five to a hundred millions dollars is a big one for four millions of poor people to enter into and on which to advance a large amount in cash. The more we look at it the more utterly ruinous does it appear. Is it not y

PETERBOROUGH, SEPT. 30, 1880.

OUR COUNTY COURT.

In another column we give an extract from an article in the Toronto Globe, and another from the Law Times, in which allusion is made to a case in which a judge had apparently allowed his judgment to be overruled by sympathy, involuntary no doubt, with the son who was practising before him. It is needless to say, as the circumstances alluded to in the article are so well known here, that the judge referred to is our respected County Judge, and the son, Mr. Jas. F. Dennistoun, of the firm of Dennistoun Bros. & Hall. The facts are correctly stated in the article from which we have quoted, and they bear on the face of them suggestions which are likely to give most unpleasant impressions. Here at home, where Judge Dennistoun's entire probity is acknowledged and respected, and where Mr. Dennistoun occupies so high a place in the public esteem, we may regard the case as on the one hand an error of judgment, and on the other an excess of zeal on behalf of a client, which has led both Judge and lawyer into a position not only liable to court unpleasant remark, but which, taken apart from the high character of the parties interested, actually invites a harsh conclusion. Had Mr. Dennistoun, in the case referred to, been acting for himself alone, no doubt a delicate consideration for the honor of his distinguished father, and the sensitive regard for propriety by which his character is always marked, would have led him to forbear urging upon his father, the judge, a technical point in order to rule out of court a brother lawyer, whose mistake, if it had been a mistake, arose entirely from a feeling regard for the family affliction of his learned friend and the learned judge; but doubtless the zeal of the counsel overruled other and natural suggestions under the circumstances. It must be admitted, however, that the facts grate harshly upon the public sense of propriety, and are calculated to create distrust of the judgements of the Judge, admisting his entire uprightness of intention, in cases where his son is engaged before him—an impression which cannot be avoided, and which must operate to the detriment of other lawyers practising in the same courts; for people will seek the lawyer, in preference to others, with whom they fancy peculiar opportunities for success lie. No action, either of the Judge or the lawyer, can avoid such an impression, which is, as we have pointed out, injurious to the profession here, and detrimental to the dignity and respect of the Bench. This feeling, not of want of confidence in the Judge, nor in the integrity of his judgment, but that his decisions are liable to be involuntarily influenced by natural emotion or sympathy, does not lose strength because it is known that the Judge has reached years when the judgement naturally loses much of its former acumen, and the intellect has not the vigor which long characterised it. Aside from these circumstances altogether we believe it will be admitted that Judge Dennistoun has fairly earned rest from active labor, by his long and arduous services on the Bench, and that it would be an act of propriety and justice to permit him to retire upon a superannuation allowance, and to spend his declining years in that ease and tranquility which is the just reward of a life of active and honest labor, and of faithful public service. We believe that in such an event both the legal fraternity and the general public would by common consent nominate Mr. Chas. A. Welter to the position of successor to the present the County Judge. He possesses judicial faculties in the highest degree, enjoys eminently the confidence of the public, is well versed in the law, and possesses a large experience which, with his other advantages of mind and training, would make him an ornament to the Bench, and establish our County Court more firmly than ever in public respect and confidence. In such a manner all possible misconstruction and cause of distrust would be effectually removed, to the public advantage and the satisfaction of both lay and legal circles.

THE POSTMASTER-GENERAL AT DUNCANVILLE.

A banquet was given on Friday last at Duncanville, in the County of Russell, ostensibly in honor of Mr. Adam Baker the local manager, who, however, must have felt highly flattered at being thrust into the background by the Ottawa wire-pullers at a gathering brought together by his own popularity—for Mr. Baker is a deservedly popular man—to make way for Hon. John O'Connor, who is by no means a popular man in the County he represents. Mr. O'Connor's speech on the occasion was on a par with all his efforts—a mass of platitudes seasoned with fulsome adulations of the leader who only retains him as a figure-head who will always be pliant so long as he is allowed to remain in office. The only portion of his remarks worthy of notice is that in which he referred to the Pacific Railway in its new aspect, wherein he made the official statement that all that it to be made known of the bargain between the Ministers and the Capitalists is that the road is to be completed by 1890—that is to say in a period of ten years. It will be recollected, in 1871 Sir John proposed to build the road in ten years, and pledged Parliament to do so by the terms of union with British Columbia, though the surveys alone covered a period of half that time. Now we have another ten years agreement the terms of which are not yet vouchsafed to us, but which probably means that the Company are to be allowed to make use of the road already built and under construction, to adopt Mr. Mackenzies plan of a water connection to Thunder Bay, and to have ten years to complete the Lake Superior section—a ten years which may be made twenty by the grace of Sir John Macdonald if he should happen to be in power to accommodate his friends the capitalists in 1890, as no doubt he expects the railway corporation to accommodate him in the meantime.

THE PACIFIC RAILWAY.

We give below the reply of Sir John Macdonald to the 'Cartier Club" at Montreal on the presentation of their address on occasion of his arrival from England. Want of space prevents comment this week, and we give it to our readers as it is in the Mail:

Sir John Macdonald said he begged to tender his grateful thanks to the young men of Canada for their address of welcome. He had not had an opportunity ahead of following the reports in the Canadian press regarding his mission as they had, but he said it was a pleasure to hear that there were patriots who had the interest of the country at heart in preference to party. There were questions which, in his opinion, should be lifted far above party strife, and that of the Pacific railway was one. He could not go so fully into the results of his mission as he could wish. They must first be submitted to the representative of our Sovereign and the Government for their acceptance. He might say, however, that he had provisionally formed a syndicate of eminent capitalists in Paris, France, Frankfort-on-the-Main, Germany; England, the United States, and Canada. They were a combination such as had never been formed before, and that would be able beyond all question to carry out the undertaking successfully. The German element was of great importances, as it would undoubtedly turn the stream of emigration from the United States into Canada. The syndicate had given security in money for the completion of the railway inside of ten years, and further security for operating it for ten years thereafter. This was equivalent to security for twenty years. They have also contracted not to build the easiest and most profitable portions of the road first, but to take the most difficult parts as well. Arrangements had also been made for putting the land into the market at once for sale. There would be a systematic immigration introduced at once. The road would not cost Canada as much as Sir Hugh Allan offered to do it for in 187.8 Mr. Mackenzie had said in the House that Sir Hugh Allan could not have built the road for the thirty millions dollars and the land grant which he was to get. What will he think when he learns it will be built for less cost now in Canada? Arrangements have been made by which the railway will proceed whether it is sanctioned at the approaching session or the next one. He could assure them that the building of the railway would not cost the old provinces of Canada one cent, as the land would pay for it. There is a fever in England among all classes for Canada. Why, one gentleman there made him an offer for sixty-four thousand acres of land at the very base of the Rocky Mountains, which he accepted. That man is Mr. Thomas Brassey, M. P., a member of the British Government. Throughout England one of the greatest obstacles he had met with was Mr. Blake's speech. It had been printed and circulated, and wherever he went it was put under his nose. Thanks, however to the strong sense of the people of England and to his (Sir John's) persuasion, all the combinations—he might say conspiracies—were ineffectual in preventing his success. The contract will now go on whether Parliament ratifies it in November or February. The syndicate is composed of men of millions of capital, who will carry the railway through triumphantly.

Our Law Courts.

The Toronto Globe in the course of a recent article has the following:

"Possibly the evils resulting from the practice which the Law Times opposes might entirely disappear in course of time if all judges were as much above suspicion as the majority are. Seeing no injustice proceed from the Bench, the public would gradually be led to believe that the judicial intellect could not be warped by emotion or by a dishonorable motive. Unfortunately a case now and then occure in which it is impossible to escape the belief that the judge has favored his near relative practising before him. An instance of this sort has lately been the subject of much comment in legal circles. A certain county judge has a son practising before him, and recently a rule was obtained to set aside a verdict which the son had obtained. That rule was returnable in the Term during which the family of the judge suffered from the death of one of its members, and at his instance the rule was not argued, but by common consent stood over for a term. Next term the son appeared before his father and contended that the rule had lapsed and that the Court had no power to hear the case. The judge decided in favour of this contention, and refused to allow the rule to be argued. The matter came up before one of the judges of the Superior Courts upon an application for a mandamus to compel the county judge to hear the case, and the latter had the mortification of being forced to take the affair up and dispose of it. Whether the humiliated judge had or had not conscientiously erred on his son's behalf, there can be no doubt that his court has suffered and will suffer in public opinion from the habitual appearance therein of his son. Other instances similar to the above have been brought to our notice, and all go to show that the public confidence in the judiciary may be weakened by the appearance of lawyers in cases heard by near relatives on the Bench.

"It is much easier to point out the evil that may be caused by the practice than to defend the proposition that a lawyer should not be allowed to argue before his father or brother. It would be a very grave interference with liberty to preclude a young man's entrance to the Court of his distinguished father. Such a rule would destroy the career of many a lawyer with an inherited disposition for a particular branch of the profession. Had it been heretofore enforced in Canada, one of two evils would have ensued—either the Bar would have been deprived of several eminent and many worthy members, or the Bench would rather have been dignified by the presence of certain guest justices. Prominent lawyers often lose much now by accepting judicial positions; their habitation to counsel would be greatly lessened if by doing so the career of a brother or son might be marred. The objection to legislation concerning the matter applies with somewhat lessened force to a professional interdict against the appearance of counsel before near relatives on the Bench. Anyone can see that to make a rule of that kind binding, by treating its observance as a point of professional honour, would inflict serious injury on individuals, and either exclude young men of special aptitude from the Bar, or the members of their families from the Bench."

Judges and their Relations at the Bar.

(Law Times.)

An incident in the Bristol County Court raises a question which we think is of the utmost moment to the Bench and the Bar. A son of the judge appeared as counsel before him, and the counsel on the other side declined to go on with the case, as we gather, on that ground alone. We think the judge was wrong in suggesting that this step could in any sense be an insult to him. It is in the highest degree inconvenient, in cases where a judge sits to try cases alone, that his son should practice before him. This view has been taken very strongly by Sir Jas. Hannen. That it has not been taken by Sir R. Phillimore has caused much soreness and adverse comment. The ground upon which we agree with the objecting counsel at Bristol is, that it is quite impossible for a judge under such circumstances to escape the criticisms of suitors who are defeated before him when opposed by his son. They may be unfair, but they will be made, and the consequences must be most prejudicial to the administration of the law. County Court judges are not just now so favourably regarded that they can allow their courts to be made the means of advancing their relations, and they should discourage solicitors in their districts from retaining the services of those intimately connected. We do not agree that their is any analogy between practising at County Courts and at assizes. To say that a barrister should never appear in a court presided over by his father may be unreasonable. But we most emphatically condemn the practice of barristers adopting a court in which to practice over which their fathers do practice or may preside alone.

HARVEST FESTIVAL.

On Thursday evening of last week the handsome church of St. Luke, Ashburnham, was filled to its utmost capacity, on the occasion of a special service of thanksgiving in connection with the bountiful harvest. The communion table was beautifully decorated with wreaths of flowers and grain, and exhibited some exquisite bouquets, as did also the pulpit. The baptismal font was surmounted by a pyramid of flowers tastefully arranged, and crowned by a magnificent red lily, while the mouldings, windows, arches, and sills, &c., throughout the church were tastefully decorated with flowers, grain and fruit, the whole presenting a scene of unusual beauty, and reflecting the very greatest credit upon the industry and good taste of the ladies of the congregation. After the usual evening service, inoluding the prayer of thanksgiving for a bountiful harvest, read by the Incumbent, Rev. Mr. Bradshaw, Rev. Mr. Baker, of Port Hope, delivered an able and impressive sermon, taking for his text the 9th Chapter of II Corinthians, 6th Verse,

"But this I say, He which soweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly, and he which soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully."

He said they should regard it as not only a duty but a privilege to gather in such a beautiful place of worship, with hearts overflowing with love and reverence and gratitude, to return thanks to God for the bountiful harvest with which the country had been blessed. It was meet that at this time they should come into His temple with thanksgiving, and enter His gates with praise—that they come with an united feeling of gratitude that our land was blessed with an abundant harvest, and that peace and plenty were established within our borders. In old times, libations were poured out in honor of false gods, for abundant harvests. Now in His church we were offering fruits and flowers with grateful prayers and songs of thanksgiving for the great goodness of God, which had made our hearts rejoice in His abundance. There was a special joy in harvest and seed time, and we should sanctify our hearts to his service, and thus prepare ourselves for the great harvest of the Revelation. He described the harvest offerings under the Judaic system, showing Christ to be the typical wave-sheaf, and the sacrifice to be but the emblem of the great sacrifice and atonement, and its acceptance by God. Without that acceptance the world would go forth as chaff to the burning, but because He rose, the first-fruits of them that slept, through His sacrifice His people are redeemed. Christ is described as the Rose of Sharon and the Lily of the Valley. He teaches us from the flowers,—"Consider the lilies how they grow; they toil not neither do they spin; yet I say unto you Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like unto one of these." Everything that we see that is beautiful in nature around us, is but the faint shadow of His perfection, of the beauty and glory of the great wave-sheaf, the first in excellence, the best and choicest gift, the all perfect sacrifice offered up to God for us. Just as the dew goes up to the skies to return in fertilizing showers, so good deeds go up to Heaven to bring down on us God's blessing. We should at this season reflect from whence come the blessings of plenty with which we are endowed. Men are apt to take them as a matter of course—to regard them as the fruits of their own labours. We are reminded by these services, and by such appeals to the senses as surround us in this church that we owe all to him. We may till the land and sow the seed but the harvest is grown and watered by God's Almighty Hand. We are too much prone to attribute to ourselves that which is the bounty of God. In the early church the Christians, in their persecuted worshipping places in the catacombs of Rome, brought fruits and flowers to accompany their offerings of prayerful thanksgiving to God for his bounty. Nothing was more beautiful than to see this, the acknowledgment that all the good we have is sent from Heaven. Then let us give thanks to the Lord for all his bounties. In sowing and reaping we have watched the growth of our fields and gardens as a source of care and pleasure and anxiety. But that should not be looked upon as a source of gain only, but a source as well of knowledge and instruction. We should reflect that the harvest of our every day sowing is a harvest for eternity. Everyday our sayings and doings are influencing ourselves and others for good or evil. If we sow to the flesh, to indolence, extravagance, or drunkenness, we shall reap misery here and hereafter. If we sow sobriety, honesty and integrity, we reap confidence and respect. If we sow deceit and hypocrisy we shall reap distrust, contempt and dislike. Life is our seedtime for eternity, and our time and our life are not our own, but God's, and should be employed to His honor and His service, and our own eternal gain in the Harvest that lies beyond. Every word or deed must bear traces of goodness or must come from evil. As we sow so shall we reap—"He that; soweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly; he that soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully." He impressed upon them the duty of giving liberally to the church, to aid the work of God, and instanced from St. Paul's reference to the Macedonians the blessings that flowed from bountiful giving to the cause of Christ. We should recollect that our gifts are not our own, but God's—that we are only tenants here at His will, and His gifts given to us to use for His glory and power, as well as for our happiness. We should give liberally, and it would be better for us in that great day when the harvest of time shall be gathered by the Judge of all the earth, and the chaff to separated from the wheat.

A collection was then taken up, and liberally responded to, the amount being over $30. The excellent choir of the church sang an anthem in a very impressive manner, after which the congregation were dismissed by Rev. Mr. Bradshaw with the benediction.

The imports at New York during August were the largest ever landed there in a single month, reaching $46,994,000, against $36,466,000 during August, 1879. The exports for August reached $36,849,000, over five millions more than during the same month of 1879.

The plan on which Parnell and his colleagues are carrying on their agitation for the remedy of Irish grievances is bad enough, consisting as it does of advice to the peasants to refuse the payment of their rents, and thus starve the landlord out. At a meeting at New Ross yesterday attended by 20,000 people, Parnell found fault with with the Liberal Government and repeated his doctrine that the landlords must be done away with. In the meantime some Galway men, adopted a practical method of carrying out this doctrine have murdered Lord Mountmorris who was unpopular with his tenants.

NEW YORK BUTTER MARKET.—In reporting the market prices for butter, the New York Tribune, of May, 20th, said, Choice packages to the retail trade reach, 19 to 20 cents, but light covered goods are hard to dispose of, and several lots were thought well sold at 8 to 10 cents. This stern logic of dollars and cents is rapidly convincing dairymen that they should use the Perfected Butter Color made by Wells, Richardson & Co., Burlington, Vt. It gives the perfect June color the year round and dairymen that use it never send light colored goods to market. 36-4ins.

Few people have any idea of the care with which tobacco has to be attended after it is grown. It will imbibe odors of almost any kind if placed near the source of them. A pig sty, for instance, near the place where the planter stores his crops will impart a disagreeable flavor which no care afterwards will divest it of. Among the many precautions taken to obtain a faultless leaf for the "Myrtle Navy" brand, is to ascertain carefully the methods which every farmer adopts with his crops in the sections of Virginia where the "Myrtle Navy" leaf is grown.

The Red Boot Still Leads the Trade.

W. J. LARMOUR

Having during the past few weeks added largely to his former well-assorted stock, has now much pleasure in soliciting the inspection of intending purchasers of FINE BOOTS AND SHOES, believing he can offer inducements, both in Material and Price not to be approached by any other dealer in town.

Since starting in business my aim has been to cultivate a trade in the Finer and Better Classes of work, with what success I leave the public to judge. The dealer who devotes his whole time and attention to any one line can supply his customers to much better advantage, and to carry out this theory, I have resolved in future to devote my exclusive attention to the manufacture and sale of Fine Work only, believing it to be more satisfactory to all.

In all Fine Lines my stock is now very complete, being well assorted, and of this season's purchase, and I can confidently ask for a continuance of the liberal patronage which has been so liberally bestowed on me since starting in business.

Selling for Cash.—On one point in business all are agreed, namely, those who give unlimited credit cannot sell as cheap as those who sell only for cash. In order to sell at cash prices and to cultivate a cash trade I have resolved, from this date, to give credit only to those who have promptly met their accounts in the past.

The Philosophy of Wearing a Good Hat.

From Homer's time to Tennyson's
The Hat has been a theme
Of poets, sages satirists
But Homer did not dream—
How time with art and science
Could so persevere and find
For man such ease and comfort,
With true elegance combined.
The clumsy, hard, unhealthy thing
Our grand-sires used to wear,
Has given place to ease and grace
Allied with texture rare;
'Tis vain, however well we dress,
Or how the garments sit,
If in the gossamer we mount
There's neither style nor fit.
A poet would not spoil his verse
By "halting line" which jars,
The painter does not o'er his work
A shadow throw which mars;
The sculptor does not deck his art
With aught that's out of place;
Then why should any Hatter dare
To spoil his patrons face?
And yet how often do we see
Outrageous taste displayed
When the selection's left to those
Who study not the trade.
Our reputation's known, 'tis true,
We've labored hard to gain it,
And our ambition's summit is,
To study and retain it.

A Great Chicago Enterprise.

The Laboratory for the manufacture of Electric Bitters is one of Chicago's greatest enterprises, giving employment to a large number of hands. The curative sale already attended for this wonderful remedy is astonishing. Wherever once introduced and becomes known, it is almost impossible to supply the demand, because of their true merit—curing where all others fail—and at a reasonable price (fifty cents).—Block. 40-12t.

Good News.—No more Chills and Ague in this section. Our Druggists are selling an article called "AGUE CURE-ALL." It is about the only satisfactory preventative and cure for the cure of Fever and Ague, Dumb Ague, Intermittent and Bilious Fevers. The Proprietor of the AGUE CURE-ALL has used but little energy to make them known, and yet his sale is immense in Ague Districts. It purifies the blood, Liver, and other Secretory Organs so effectually that the Chills do not return even where persons have had them for years. Entirely vegetable preparation. Price, 50 cents and $1.00 per bottle. Two doses will stop the chill. 39-13t.

Fire.—On Friday afternoon a fire broke out in the shed attached to the residence of Mr. Michael Shea, at the foot of Ledgate's Hill, on the eastern boundary of Ashburnham. The fire soon communicated with the house, which was totally destroyed. The contents were safely got out by the exertions of the neighbors.

A Golden Opportunity should never be neglected—therefore those requiring cheap, comfortable and durable wear for their feet should not fail to examine Mr. W. J. Larmour's stock, previous to the closing of his present clearing sale of imported and ready-made work. Remember the stock is all new and this season's goods, and is being offered at prices much below the present ruling wholesale figures. 23-tf

Fall Shows.—Next week the Fall Show season opens. The first being at Lakefield. (Smith, Ennismore and Lakefield) on the 7th and 8th; the second being the Otonabee show at Keene on the 8th October; the next, that of the West Riding, at Peterboro' on the 12th and 13th; that of the East Riding taking place at Warsaw on the 14th and 15th. The South Monaghan Show will be held at Centreville on the 19th of October.

Men for the Shanties.—On Tuesday Mr. T. Cavanagh passed through town, having brought from Ottawa 50 men for the lumbering establishment at Parry Sound in charge of the Ontario Bank. Last week he brought up sixty men from the same place for Mr. T. G. Haslitt, and previously, as already mentioned, he had taken 160 men to Perry & Co., Michigan, and brought 60 for the Longford Mills. Mr. Cavanagh has thus relieved Otawa of 270 citizens in three weeks. The men were all engaged at wages varying from $15 to $15 a month.

As Others See Us.—The following is from a correspondent of the Oswego Times who recently visited this section:—"Peterborough is a pretty and thriving town of about nine thousand inhabitants and is reached by rail from Millbrook station. It is well supplied with churches of the various denominations; has excellent schools, good hotel accommodations, first-class stores, embracing every variety of business, surrounded by a most excellent farming country for many miles around. Peterborough has one of the most beautiful and picturesque cemeteries upon which the eye could rest. It is situated upon, and nearly surrounded by Little Lake, from which it derives its name. There are many fine specimens of the monumental art and gilded inscriptions which mark the place and record the name of the sleeping dust beneath."

Tuberculosis.—We have on view, among other evidences of the stupendous efforts of the Irish famine, a Peerless potato grown on the farm of Mr. David Gorman, 5th Concession of Doure, which weighs two pounds exactly. It is a smooth, well-formed tuber, and we have seen three of same kind grown on the same farm weighed at about six pounds. We were just about to tell Mr. Gorman to "go up head," when Mr. Duncan Macdonald, of town, brought in another monster potato which weighed two pounds and 3½ ounces. If this kind of thing keeps on, we contemplate the erection of a derrick to enable us to hoist the possible potato to its resting place on the upper shelf where we keep these articles on exhibition. Since writing the above Mr. E. Burnham, of Otonabee, has added to our collection an Early Rose potato weighing 2 lb. 3 oz. Next!

Their Own Fault.—The Port Hope Guide of last week says:

"The Peterborough papers say that the contract for the galvanized iron roof of the Midland Railway round-houses was let to Mr. Adam Hall of that town. Tenders were asked for from the townships here as well, and when they were opened it was found that Foster & Gamble were the lowest tenderers, by considerable, but they declined to do the work. The next lowest were asked if they would do the work for the price tendered for by the lowest Port Hope firm, which they did. So if the work has gone to Peterborough, it is not the fault of the Midland Railway authorities, but of the business men here themselves."

The Port Hope people have no right to complain if in a fair competition its merchants and manufacturers find themselves out-bid by the superior enterprise and push of the Peterborough people. Mr. Hall deserves credit for his enterprise, and this fact affords the people of Port Hope and this district that the same class of work can be done in Peterborough at a price, which the Port Hope iron men are afraid to undertake. It is another and satisfactory proof that Peterborough is the cheapest market to buy in as well as the best to sell in.

The Town Clock.—We have received a number of communications urging the illumination of the Town Clock. One facetious individual suggests that if the clock were illuminated on that score of the "hays," who are in the habit of remaining out over-late in the evenings can see what time of night it is, they would reach home much earlier than their present custom. It would certainly be a boon to the town in many ways, and among others it would show the exact spot beneath, where Mr. L. Fisher has a first-class store, fully equipped with a first-class stock of everything in the grocery line, new and fresh, warranted pure and unadulterated and at the very bottom prices. He is also constantly buying all kinds of farm produce, and has always on hand a full assortment of eggs, butter, lard, pork, potatoes, apples, onions, beans, etc., etc. Those who understand the import of the old maxim, that "a penny saved is a penny gained," will realize the importance of making their purchases from Mr. Fisher. Give him a trial and be convinced that you can save money by buying your groceries from him. The Town Clock indicates the way to his store, which is directly beneath that useful monument. 39-1in.

Illinois Meltheat Worth.

This is an age of great works and wonderful inventions. Steam, electricity, water, air, all are made to serve man, but unquestionably the greatest benefactor of mankind is the man who makes two blades of grass grow where but one grew before, and thereby increases the wealth and prosperity of the country in which he lives. Such a man is Henry Rumsey, of Illinois, who has introduced the Illinois Meltheat, which yields from 40 to 60 bushels per acre more than any other wheat. Mr. Rumsey has imported a large quantity of this seed, and has it for sale in small quantities at $2 per bushel. Circulars containing full description of this valuable wheat, and testimonials from those who have tested it, will be sent free to any one applying to Henry Rumsey, Jacksonville, Illinois. Mr. Rumsey has also imported a large quantity of Early Rose Potatoes, which he has for sale at $1 per bushel. Also Timothy, Clover, Orchard Grass, Blue Grass, Millet, Hungarian, Rape, Cow Peas, Sorghum, Corn, &c. Parties wishing to purchase will please send their orders early, as the demand is unprecedented. We can confidently recommend the Illinois Meltheat to our readers, as it has been tested in this section and found to be all that is claimed for it. Send for circulars containing full description of this valuable wheat, and testimonials from those who have tested it. Also for circulars containing full description of Early Rose Potatoes,

An Enlightening Encounter.

The following lines appeared many years ago in a Kingston (Canada) paper. Its fun, being founded by a conversation between some of the Governor's Council, shortly after the arrival here. The late Mr. Andrew Mercer was the author, and the verses are characterized by considerable poetic fancy, and by a strong admiration for the constitutional principle in an unmixed a trait of his countryman.—Ed.]

Farewell ye scenes that once gave delight,
That to my fancy lovely visions paint,
Long years were ye closed on this dismal night,
And no returning day dispersing night.
Shall ere again restore you to my view.

Ye woods, ye glens, and sunny brows of Jod,
How pure you are when dash'd in summer dress!
The mountain cone when wintry snows hath fled,
And in your robes of beauty still are clad
To be admired—are only to be seen.

But never more my willing feet shall pass
Along the margin of the winding stream,
O sunny scenes, ye shall nought to me be more,
Then on thy page I vainly may trace
Each object dear to me—a pleasing dream.

There shall I see Damien towering high,
With its dark pines that crown the morning fog,
Where the eagle builds her lofty dwelling place,
The towering whig of Mercer's Rockiest dye,
And Frontenac with all its stately pile.

Through the green woods the clad'ning scent
Surrounds,
All living beings partake the general joy;
But chief the Lark, while high in air he bounds,
Pours forth his lay, and sweet harmonious sounds;
Here nature pleasure gives without alloy.

The summer sun shall gild St. Mary's pile,
In light and shade in unison above,
The autumn moon still on it night shall smile,
And spread her silver light o'er arch and aisle,
And all the scene improvised splendor glow.

Remembrance, lingering in this calm retreat
Pale Cynthia's moonlight loneliness to marvel,
And hear the curlew bill that bills so sweet—
The murmuring waters to her ear shall greet
As o'er their rocky course they wend their way.

Can Jed worth's scene—far o'er the ocean deep
By fancy destined in distant lands to roam—
Forget her—no, not e'en when half'd to sleep,
Imagination still will visits keep,
And waft their spirits to their distant home.

E'en weary age, with memory unimpaired,
On Fancy's wing to haunts of youth will fly,
And on the walk that skirts the green churchyard,
With social companions who his pastimes shared,
There o'er again their early sports will ply.

Tis with the past that age delights to dwell
And tell the tale of days when he was young;
Tis in the former bid, that powerful spell
That youth attracts, which time alone can quell
When disappointments curb hope's flattering tongue.

Happy are they whose youth has passed away
Unstain'd with actions that bring fell remorse,
Their closing life, like cloating winter's day,
Earth's prospects falsifier grow, but one bright ray
Points forward to life's new and happier course.

Now fare thee well, my good old native Town,
No place on earth can be so dear to me:
May thy prosperity my wishes crown,
And thy inhabitants never on thee frown,
While I bid a long farewell to thee.

PETERBOROUGH, SEPT'R 30, 1880.

DISTRICT NEWS.

South Ontario.

VERY SUCCESSFUL.—Messrs. Miller & Beattie, of Pickering, won $269 in prizes with their sheep at the Toronto Fair; they also made sales to the value of $1,675. Not so bad for one flock.

ACCIDENT.—On Wednesday afternoon Mr. Wm. McGachin, of Greenwood, was returning from the field with a sulky rake, when the horse became unmanageable and broke the tongue short off. He is doing well under medical treatment.

A NARROW ESCAPE.—As Dr. Carson, C. Nourse, Esq., and their wives, were returning from Toronto in a carriage on Friday evening, they came within an ace of being killed by the lightning express at the crossing, Scarboro'. They had cleared the track all but the rim of one of the wheels, which was struck by the train which was running very fast. The wheel was a total wreck and the axle bent. Besides being considerably frightened at their narrow escape no further injury was done.—Gazette.

Cobourg.

FIRE IN HAMILTON TOWNSHIP.—On Friday afternoon last, fire was discovered in Mr. Robert Graham's barn, near Camborne, and in a short time the barn and its contents, consisting of $400 worth of grain and other property, were entirely consumed. The barn was new this year; and Mr. Graham's loss is a serious one. The origin of the fire is not known.

BURGLARY IN HALDIMAND.—On the night of Tuesday of last week, some miscreant entered the store of Mr. Thos. H. McAuley, at Centreton, and stole a considerable quantity of dry goods and other property. The thief seemed to be an old hand at such business, as he practised the art of an adept upon a watch-dog, which would, otherwise, have given a good account of itself in defending the store. We hope Mr. McAuley may see his visitor again—in another capacity.—World.

Belleville.

CORPORATION MOVEMENT.—The Belleville City Council has appointed two tax collectors instead of one as heretofore. They also abolished the system of giving a discount on on taxes paid by a certain date, and adding a percentage to those paid later. The rate of commission to the collectors was fixed at 2½ per cent.

Hastings.

THE DAM.—It is evident from the thorough manner in which the repairs, now being effected on the dam and locks, &c., under the supervision of T. D. Belcher, Esq., Gov't Engineer of the Trent works, that something more than the present navigation of these waters is in view, and this supposition is strengthened by the feet of a gang of men being engaged in deepening the channel from the coffer dam to the wharf. Other indications also point to an early commencement of work on the Trent Valley Canal, if not by the Government, by a private company, who are not only able but willing to undertake its construction if a charter can be obtained.—Star.

Millbrook.

NARROW ESCAPE.—It is with regret we have to announce another accident to one of our citizens. Yesterday afternoon Mr. G. W. H. Anderson was driving out to Mount Pleasant, to bring Mrs. Anderson and their niece home from that place, when within a mile of Cavanville, Mr. A. took a man up for a ride; on goin down a small hill, a bolt came out of the shafts, the buggy running against the horse; the horse gave a sudden plunge, that threw both occupants of the buggy violently out, Mr. A. striking side-face on a stone, bruising and cutting him badly. As yet it is not known whether the jaw is broken or not. He was brought home, and Dr. Turner was called in and is doing all he can for the sufferer.—Messenger, 22nd.

Campbellford.

SUICIDE OF MR. PLEMPTON.—The few additional particulars relating to Horace Plumpton, who committed suicide last week, are as follows. Deceased was a resident of Warkworth, where he had spent the last few years of his life retired from business. Formerly he was a farmer. He was a married man, and has brought up a large family. The last seen of the unfortunate man was at Mapperburg, about noon on Sunday. Before he committed the act of self-destruction, deceased left his hat, a handkerchief, and a stick on the end of the bridge. On the stick were cut his initials, H. P., newly made, and evidently done by himself during the last few moments of his life. His body was found under a pile of rubbish back of the saw-mill. Nothing was on his person when picked up. Deceased was a member of the M. E. church at Norham, and had attained the age of 70 years. An inquest was held on the body, and on Tuesday, all that was earthly of the old man who went down with gray hairs in sorrow to the grave, was interred in the burial plot at Warkworth.—Herald.

Renfrew.

EDUCATIONAL FRAUD.—We understand the [illegible] to enter an [illegible] the late third-class teachers' examination at this town. From all we have heard there is good enough encouragement. It would be much better if the County Council would appoint examiners from different counties, as has been more than once advocated in in these columns.

RESCUED FROM A WELL.—Tuesday afternoon, about five o'clock, two little children of Mr. James Shannon, of the Dominion House, were playing near a well in the rear of Mr. Primeau's store, on Kent street, over which Mr. Shannon resides. They were a boy of four and a girl of about five years. The boards covering the well have been in an insecure condition for some time and as the children were playing thereon one of the planks gave way and the little girl was precipitated into the well. The depth is about thirty feet and there was about fifteen feet of water in it at the time. Fortunately the board accompanied the little girl in her fall, and by clinging to it she was enabled to keep afloat until assistance had arrived. As soon as the little boy realized the position of his sister he hastened to tell his mother. Mr. Primeau was then informed of the circumstance, and without a moment's delay he removed some of his clothes and pluckily descended into the well by clinging to the stones. The well was very dark and he could not see the little girl until he got down close to the water. Here he found her clinging to the board and almost perished with the cold, the evening being very chilly and the water exceedingly cold. He took her up in his arms and with remarkable strength and skill succeeded in safely reaching the top with his burden. The child was then in a very dangerous condition, her strength having become almost exhausted and suffering greatly from chills. She was wrapped in warm blankets, well rubbed and restoratives were given her after which she was able to tell definitely how the accident occurred. She said that when she fell she went away, away down in the water, and when I came up I saw the board and held on to it.' Mr. Primeau deserves great credit for the prompt rescue he effected. —Lindsay Post.

Hamilton.

DARING BURGLARY.—No little excitement was caused here on Thursday morning last, when it was discovered that burglars had been at work during the night in three different places. A. McIntosh's general store was entered by the back part of the building by sliding a window in the tin shop, then taking the look-keeper off the door between the two shops, giving them access to the general store, where they carried off a quantity of dry Goods, and put them under the sidewalk near the east end of the building. Here they were found in the morning. Mr. McIntosh was from home at the time and his daughter, who was in charge, cannot say how much they have lost. The next place of operation was Mr. F. Curry's store. Entrance was obtained from the back shop room. Here they took away a quantity of jewellery in a paper box and deposited it along with the dry goods above mentioned, where they were found. D. McIntosh's hotel was then visited, an entrance being effected by a window in the rear of the bar-room. This was very daring, as Mr. Mack was sleeping in a room within a few feet from the window; when in, the burglar lit the bar-room lamp, and went to work in a decidedly professional manner. He cut the lock off the cash till, but found only two ten cent pieces in silver. He must have expected a haul. This was all the money found in the three places.—Post Cor.

A gentleman in a draper's shop had the misfortune to tread on a lady's skirt. She turned round, her face flushed with anger, but seeing the gentleman was a stranger she smiled complacently, saying, 'I beg pardon, sir, I was going to be in a dreadful passion. I thought it was my husband.'

Joy Among the Children.

COPLAND'S SWEET CASTOR OIL, equally suitable for children and adults. Endorsed by over 500 doctors in Canada.

The difficulty of administering nauseous medicines, and the desirability of having the pleasant to the taste, induced T. Copland to undertake researches which resulted in the discovery of a Sweet Castor Oil, perfectly palatable, of the same strength and medical qualities as the ordinary Castor Oil, and while equally safe and harmless, yet acting with more certainty, and producing neither nausea nor griping. Some children say it is honey; others call it syrup—all say they like it. One parent says—"My children drink it like water," another—"We had to bide the bottle or they would have finished it right off;" another—"My little girl has taken it twice without any trouble, and does not know what it is, though she hates the ordinary Castor Oil, and we could never get her to take it without a fight;" yet another—"I wish you success of your Sweet Castor Oil; it is a splendid thing—sure to take the place of all the common oil."

The extraordinary demand for this improvement on a staple household medicine has brought fraudulent imitations into the market, but the public can guard themselves against substitutes (which unprincipled parties are attempting to sell on the reputation of this article) by seeing that the name, "COPLAND'S SWEET CASTOR OIL, is on both the wrapper and direction label.

The undersigned having purchased Messrs. T. Copland & Co's interest in the above preparation, are now manufacturing it from the original recipe. NORTHROP & LYMAN, Toronto.

PETITT'S EYE-SALVE,

An Infallible Remedy for all Diseases of the Eye (acute or chronic), Granulation of the Lids, Ulceration of the Lachrymal Gland, Film, and Weakness of the Vision from any cause.

The AMERICAN EYE-SALVE is presented to the public with the assurance of its efficiency as a curative of most diseases of the eye, acute or chronic inflamation, whether induced by scrofulous origin or otherwise, weakness or defect of vision, diminished lens of the crystalline or a diseased state of the tissues constituting that organ. Also, for all persons whose vocation requires an incessant action of the eyes, the salve will act as a charm in restoring a uniform healthy action, where weakness, pain, and misery may have been long threatened with a fatal termination. It is the most simple, safe and effectual remedy ever discovered. The materials of which it is made are pure, perfect, and neatly compounded with elaborate care and exactness, safe in its application, being used externally, and, of course, avoiding the pain and danger which necessarily attends the introduction of caustic minerals and eye-washes. Ringworm and old Chronic Sores, of scrofulous origin, or resulting from whatever cause, yield to the American Eye-Salve. IT IS USED SUCCESSFULLY FOR PILES. Its soothing effect is immediate, and a permanent cure requires but a few applications. The proprietors of "Dr. J. Petitt's American Eye-Salve" while making new and improved machinery for making a neat & perfect box for the Eye-Salve, have changed the Trade Mark on the cover so as to correspond with the Out on the Wrapper, Circulars, advertisements, etc. We call attention to this, as it might otherwise be regarded as counterfeiting.

Not the slightest Affinity exists between the numberless cough mixtures with which the market is flooded and that successful preparation—Northrop and Lyman's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda. It stands alone, distinct, it is like itself and nothing else. It contains the best results of advanced pharmaceutical science. It accomplishes positive decisive results, effectually relieving coughs (when the lungs are not tuberculous or hopelessly affected), colds, laryngitis, and diseases of a scrofulous origin. While it does not cure consumption, it is the most reliable means of defence against the dreaded scourge. The invigorating properties of the hypophosphites reimburse the system debilitated by the constant tear and wear of a cough, while the paroxysms rapidly diminish in violence, in consequence of the nourishing, emollient action of the cod liver oil on the inflamed lung membranes. The phosphorus, lime and soda, in combination with it, are all natural components in the construction of the healthy tissue, which, in a state of decay, has not a sufficiency of the elements. These the hypophosphites supply, increasing the assimilative properties of the blood, and building up and reinvigorating the nervous system, so that it gradually regains its normal structure with a degree of vitality sufficient to resist the further wasting of the tissues. A permanent gain in flesh or, still, in strength is one of the consequences; all along the continued improvement keeps both time and experience from. NEW [illegible]

MANHOOD:

HOW LOST, HOW RESTORED!

We have recently published a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical and permanent cure (without medicine) of Nervous Debility, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediment to Marriage, etc., resulting from excesses.

☞Price in a sealed envelope, only 6 cts., or two postage stamps.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicines or the use of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

George Brown.

Wm. Ewart Gladstone, the British Premier, 18x22 inches. The portrait is a faithful likeness, in black and tint of plate paper and is worth the price of subscription to either paper singly.

We are enabled to offer this invaluable and unequalled agricultural journal in conjunction with the EXAMINER from now till January 1st 1882, for the low rate of $3.00 to all persons subscribing and paying in advance. This is one of the most favorable offers available, as it affords the subscribers a share of the free plant and seed distribution of the Rural New Yorker.

EXAMINER AND CHRISTIAN GUARDIAN.

EXAMINER AND CANADA PRESBYTERIAN.

THE EXAMINER AND HARPER'S PUBLICATIONS.

Harper's Magazine costs the subscriber $4.00. Parties subscribing at the EXAMINER office, can have the EXAMINER from now to Jan. 1st, 1882, and Harper's Magazine for one year for $4.25. At the same ridiculously low rate we will furnish them with the EXAMINER and Harper's Weekly or Harper's Bazaar. For $2.40 we send the EXAMINER with Harper's Young People. These rates are the lowest ever offered for Harper's publications, or the EXAMINER.

THE EXAMINER AND WARWICK'S PUBLICATIONS.

The EXAMINER from now to Jan. 1st. 1882, can be had in conjunction with any one of Warwick's publications for one year, (Girl's Own Paper, Boy's Own Paper, Leisure Hour and Sunday At Home) all first-class, standard, finely illustrated papers, published monthly, at only $2.00.

These unprecedentedly low rates will be available to old subscribers paying up arrears and renewing subscriptions, as well as to new subscribers. They are the most favorable terms ever offered before, by any first-class weekly newspaper in Canada, and embrace a wide range of literature for family instruction, information and recreation. The earlier the subscription is in, the longer time the subscriber gets on the EXAMINER, which, they will observe is offered for fifteen months, at a lower rate than the regular annual subscription.

THE DOMINION BLOOD BITTERS, the great system regulator, blood and liver agent, cure on the hermits, liver and kidneys, and is a superb tonic. 40-3ins.

CASH WANTED.

Subscribers in arrears should make it a point to pay up as soon as possible. There is no longer any valid reason why they should not. The season's produce is now being marketed, and out of the returns the farmer should be well able to pay the small sum required for a year's subscription to the EXAMINER. Cash is a necessity in conducting business, and we depend upon our patrons for supplying the needful. Let everyone who still owes for the EXAMINER for the past year or more, think of this, and rest not till he forwards the amount of his indebtedness. Many hundreds of these small amounts make up a very large sum, and their collection would benefit us immensely.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

WHEN THE Pacific Railway Commission was first mooted, it was supposed that the object was to suppress Dr. Tupper, who had been too forward in the party to suit his leader. When the Commission met however, it seemed that Mr. Mackenzie was the party aimed at. The effect has been to effectually exonerate Mr. Mackenzie from all blame, and to establish the uprightness of his administration. However, by accident or design, the revelations incidentally stumbled upon, have shown up in lurid light, the dishonest and rascally manner in which the people have been robbed under Tupper's management of Pacific Railway contracts, and have irretrievably ruined his character as a public man.

THE OTTAWA Free Press is deservedly severe upon Mr. Secretary Chapleau, but has not a word to say about its neighbor, Mr. Mackintosh, of the Citizen, whose conduct has been infinitely more disgraceful. In analyzing the evidence taken before the Railway Inquisition, the Globe says:

"Turning to the evidence of Mr. Charles Whitehead we find Mr. McIntosh—the proprietor of the Citizen, the organ of the whole Cabinet, the "shark" of the Railway Ring—figuring in the affair of the printing frauds—figuring in his new notorious capacity of a blackmailer. Joseph Whitehead found himself short of money. His son—who says: "I felt that my father had been swindled"—actually forced McIntosh to disgorge $11 000 of his plunder! To what extent the Government organist at Ottawa fleeced Mr. Joseph Whitehead is not known to Mr. Charles Whitehead, but he "should think it would be $20,000 in round numbers!" Mr. McIntosh must have made a very pretty income during the last few years; he has been prominent in every contract fraud already exposed, and it is not likely that so industrious a man has allowed many contractors to escape him."

WHILE SEARCHING for the "Hum" in the Lower Provinces Sir Samuel Tilley found the signs of that sound so very feeble and indistinct that he was forced to make much of the prosperity of the Dartmouth Brewery, concerning whose business according to the Tory organ the Halifax Herald, he hoped they would go on prospering till they would require extended premises for their operations. Mr. Tilley is a well-known eminent temperance advocate (?), and Grip happily hits off his Dartmouth exploit by a cartoon entitled "Ale fellow, well met," in which Sir Samuel, dressed in a gorgeous Windsor uniform and decorated with the regalia of a Son of Temperance, having left the heated temperance meeting, meets a barrel, typical of the Dartmouth Brewery. They grasp hands, and Sir Tilley sniffs a bottle of ale with the remark, "Delighted to know you are prospering!" A dead wall near by is covered with placards calling attention to Bro. Samuel L. Tilley's lecture on "Beer the curse of Canada," etc. The cartoon is a lively picture of the actual position of Sir Tilley Both Sides.

AT THE Duncanville dinner, Mr Baker, the local member for the County of Russell, said: "While I am a member of the Local Legislature, I shall vote to have its existence blotted out." There seems to be no doubt that the abolition of the Local Legislature will be fairly adopted as a plank in the platform of the Tory party in Ontario, who are anxious to return to the old practice of ruling Upper Canada by a Lower Canada majority in the Federal House. So far as Mr. Baker is concerned, however, his self-abnegation is not difficult to understand. He is certain of his sessional indemnity of $640 during the present term, and he is equally certain that he will never be elected again. Last general election he was fairly beaten by Mr. Morgan, who was deprived of his seat by an unfair recount of the ballots. Mr. Baker has got all he will ever make out of the local membership, and with patriotic self-sacrifice is willing to vote for the surrender of the autonomy of the Province. Fortunately there are not enough Bakers in the Provinces to carry out any such scheme as the abolition of the Legislature.

IT SEEMS THAT though Mr. E. Hooper, the distinguished gentleman (?) for whom the County of Lennox was insane enough to exchange Sir Richard Cartwright, has a hide as thick as a rhinoceros, he is at last going to see the propriety of stepping down and out, to seek the seclusion that private life affords. The Reformers of the county have already called a meeting to select a candidate for the expected contest, and it is not impossible that the old member will be again nominated, in which case his election by an overwhelming majority would be certain. The latest phase of Mr. Hooper's case is that after been found a defaulter to the extent of over $30,000 in his office of County Treasurer, he found means to disperse $11,000 which amount was restored to the County. Hooper was at that time a bankrupt, and now his creditors have taken steps, through the assignee, to ascertain where the $11,000 came from, since if it came from Mr. Hooper, it was clearly their money. The investigation is now progressing. Whatever be the result

PETERBOROUGH, OCTOBER 7, 1880

TORONTO AND OTTAWA RAILWAY.

Mr. Wm. Goodersham, Jr., the President of the Toronto and Ottawa Railway, has formally applied to Toronto city council for a bonus of $300,000 to assist in the construction of the proposed road from the Capital of Ontario to the Capital of Canada. The President sets forth that the road will cost, fully equipped, over $6,000,000, of which amount he expects the municipalities along the route to contribute $1,200,000. The consideration promised, is an independent line of railway from Toronto to Quebec, as the Toronto and Ottawa company will either obtain running powers over the Quebec, Montreal, Ottawa and Occidental road or will purchase that road.

There is no question about the advantages to be derived from having another through route to tide water, to compete with the Grand Trunk. It is to be hoped that Mr. Goodersham will be successful in making his financial arrangements to build the Toronto and Ottawa road. What will have to be done is to make sure that the new road, when completed, will remain independent, and will avoid all alliances, whether for pooling receipts, or for an actual amalgamation with the Grand Trunk.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The Provincial Exhibition, all things considered, has been most successful. It has had a great deal to contend with in the fact that the district shows, usually held so as not to clash with it, have been going on during the last two weeks, fearing that to wait until after the close of the Provincial would be too late.

The newest development in the Pacific Railway business is the name of Hon. L. S. Huntington as one of the capitalists who, Sir John says, are going to build the road. We believe the use of Mr. Huntington's name in this connection is justified by the facts, and the circumstance forms an odd and grim commentary on the public expression of certain animosities in 1873.

In the speech made before the Cartier Club, by Sir John Macdonald, on the occasion of his return home from his mission, he stated that he did not expect to live to see the Pacific Railway completed, but he hoped to look down from "another and a happier sphere," upon the accomplishment of that work. We trust that Sir John's sanguine nature has not led him astray, since his aspiration is one which all honest men can join, without respect of party or person.

The celebrated Biddulph tragedy came up for trial before twelve impartial citizens, at London on Monday. James Carrol was placed in the box charged with having been guilty of the murder of members of the Donnelly family in February last. The evidence so far has consisted of a repetition of what has been previously published in the Examiner. Any important developments in the case, with the decision if it be reached, which is not likely, will be found in our next week's issue.

We observe that the Toronto Mail and Globe contain copies of a letter addressed to their editors by Mr. Charles H. Mackintosh, the contract swindler, in which it is sought to be made use of that his nefarious rascalities commenced during the term of Mr. Mackenzie's administration. The fact that Mr. Mackintosh was enabled to embark in so unscrupulous a method of making money was due to the circumstance that he found in the brother of the present Quebec Premier, a nature congenial to his own, and if he was enabled to pluck poor Mr. Whitehead during Mr. Mackenzie's term of office, it was not with the knowledge or connivance of the ex-Premier, but by assistance of dishonest and unworthy servants of the public.

Our contemporary the Review with its over repeated cry of "falsehood, falsehood," insinuates that we were wrong in imputing to Sir John Macdonald the shame and disgrace of having thrown overboard the just claims of Canada for indemnity for the loss and damage occasioned by the Fenian invasion. The Review says that the subject never came before the Commission. That is true; but it is equally true that Sir John Macdonald was a consenting party to the withdrawal of these claims from the purview of the commission, and that in doing so he basely betrayed this country. Had he been such a patriot as Mr. Blake, this country would not have been stripped to suffer the loss from American Sheriffage of some $5,000,000, besides the valuable lives sacrificed, and to have swallowed all the humiliation which Sir John did in his country's name, for the sake of a prospective advancement in the Imperial service.

The Central Fair.

The Port Hope Times of Tuesday says:—The exhibition grounds and the interior part of the building presented quite a busy scene this forenoon, each exhibitor trying to outvie his competitor, and from what we could see there is every prospect of the exhibition itself being worthy of patronage, not only by the farming community but from the citizens. Constables parade the ground to keep order, the location being in two or three cases determined by length and weight with the hap-hazard of corresponding pluck. The directors have all they can possibly do to provide room for the large space demanded for exhibitors, and we noticed not the least notice was our member, Col. Williams who, adorned with a ribbon as his insignia of office, was assisting in the arranging matters for the machinery, cattle, poultry and carriages exhibited in the open grounds. From what we could see this forenoon, the exhibition, if weather permits, will be a busy scene, and it is regretted that the directors have not more space room at their command, there being ample vacant land adjacent. The entries for horses are very numerous, as also those of pure bred cattle.

The Rise in Coal Oil.

Complaints reach us on all hands of the exorbitant prices now being charged for coal oil. The retail price in this city is now 38 cents per gallon, and in many places the cost is much higher. The fault does not lie with the retail dealers, for they assert that the price is shaved as close as the first cost to them will allow. We have been asked how it is possible the world over for the price to take a bound of over 100 per cent. advance in the course of a few months. The task is an easy one. It will be remembered that the present Government issued regulations for the trade, raising the test for American oil to 120 deg. The avowed object, to render the use of that oil perfectly safe, was a good one, and no one would have objected to it on that score. But as has been pointed out its effect in another direction was calculated to be prejudicial to the true interests of the Canadian consumer. Raising the test of the American oil to this virtually prohibited figure, the duty of the Government ought next to have been to reduce the import duty on the article, so as to bring the positions of the Canadian and American oils nearer their relative standing under the old tariff, which was conceded by all reasonable men to be extremely favorable to the producers and manufacturers—too favorable in the opinion of many. But the influence of powerful monetary organizations was brought to bear upon the Government, and they declined to yield, notwithstanding the earnest protests of a large number of the leading journals in the Dominion, backed up by public opinion. And what has been the result? The inevitable ring has been formed, and a huge monopoly has been bought up, or is now engaged in buying, the whole of the available crude petroleum in the oil regions. The smaller refineries, too, have been swallowed up by the mammoth organization in London and the ring have the Canadian public securely by the throat, as those who have had to replenish their oil cans within the past two or three weeks know to their cost.—Hamilton Times.

District News.

Norwood.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Mr. Campbell of Durham, has commenced his duties as head master of the Norwood Public School here, in the place of Mr. H. Dewart who resigned that situation to seek a larger field of labor in our great North-West territory. Mr. Dewart carries with him the best wishes of his many friends in this district, for his continued success.

On Wednesday last, James Clifford, eldest son of Mr. John Clifford, received a kick from a horse that nearly deprived him of life. The boy was leading the animal, and not coming on as fast as he wished, applied the whip when the horse turned and kicked him on the head, inflicting a painful and dangerous wound.

Mr. Jas. Clysdale made two large shipments of sheep and cattle for the Montreal market,—one of twenty-five head of fat cattle and 140 sheep, and another of 47 head of beefers, all in marketable condition.

The proceeds of the festival in aid of the Methodist Church netted over $100.

SCHOLASTIC—CAUGHT A TARTAR—SOWING WILD OATS.

(From our own Correspondent.)

Your correspondent here lost his pen; some of the people found it out and commenced to do very badly.

One good act has been done, i. e. the trustees have engaged J. S. Stevenson as teacher for 1881. We wish Mr. Stevenson success.

A young man by the name of Patterson raised a fuss at the door of church after prayer meeting by striking Mr. E. M. Anderson. (a respectable young man,) who put him in the dust and then left him to reflect on the wisdom of striking a stronger man (there is a moral in this, but there is no room to explain). Next day Patterson was brought up before Mr. M. Knox J. P. who required him to pay about four dollars or go up for a while. The money was paid forthwith, and Mr. Patterson went on his way "a sadder but a wiser man."

A number of young men none of whom are noted for their moral character or good conduct, gathered themselves together on Saturday night, removed J. Spence's milk-stand into the field, built a gallows over it, and hanged a carrot by the neck. One small boy is spoken off in particular as a splendid hand to use profane language, another young fellow practiced boxing with a pine stump in order that he might acquit himself scientifically on Tuesday evening. They should bring some bread from home and not be compelled to eat Mr. Spence's potatoes.

Friday's Show—Barley Sales—Rifle Practice—S. S. Review — Those Waggons.

From Our Own Correspondent.

Preparations are being made on the agricultural grounds for the coming show to be held on Friday the 8th inst. The entries, no doubt, will be numerous in all departments.

Large quantities of barley have passed through this locality for Peterborough during the past three weeks. Much more remains to be sold.

The volunteers were out at rifle practice last week. Some excellent shots were made.

On Sabbath evening of this week, the review of the Sabbath School lessons for the last quarter was held in the Presbyterian Church. The services were conducted by the Rev. Mr. Andrews, in his usual able manner.

The wagon which we spoke of in a late issue of this paper has failed to produce a crop of the same. It still remains to be seen in its former place. There was another wagon a little further away, which the owner has taken care of since then, for fear of having an over-abundant crop of the same, as it had plenty of further heaped upon it—all owing to the National Policy.

Raymore Council.

The Council met at Old Town Hall on the 25th ult. Present—A. R. Kidd, Esq., Reeve, and Messrs. Davis, Hanson, Kelly, and Wason, Councillors. Minutes of last meeting read and signed. Moved by Mr. Hanson, seconded by Mr. Wason, that the motion passed at last meeting of Council appointing Mr. Wm. Kidd as Collector, be rescinded.—Carried. On motion of Mr. Wason, seconded by Mr. Davis, James Calder was appointed collector, and Alexander Smith and Robert Smith were appointed as his bondsmen. The Clerk was instructed to give the Collector a certified statement of the names of the parties, and amount of taxes against each for statute labor, on receipt of properly certified returns from the pathmasters that the work is done, and to authorize the Collector to abate the same on the Clerk's certificate. The time was extended to the 2nd Oct. to return the Collector's Roll. Mr. Drain was appointed to examine 11th con. line, opposite lot 31, and to give Thos. Ritchie a job of crosswaying on the same, the Non-resident taxes, now due on lot 31 in 11th con., to be applied on road there. Messrs. Wason and Kelly were appointed to let a job of crosswaying on lot 11, con. 8, not to exceed $16, to be charged to Divisions 2 and 4. On motion nomination meeting to be held in Town and Agriculture Hall, Warsaw. Polling places, No. 2 School House, Old Town Hall, Town and Agriculture Hall, and John Elliott's house. Deputy Returning Officers, George Kirk, John G. Speer, Thos. Campbell and W. F. Darling. Clerk to have By-laws prepared for next meeting. The Reeve was appointed to attend the adjourned land sale in the interests of the township. Orders paid: To Wm. Kidd, for trouble in attending Council, $3; F. W. Wilkins, for locating road between lot 8, in 7 and 8 concessions, $5; Wm. Stoneburg, as charity, $3. By-laws passed: One to appoint a collector, and one to provide for the payment of money. Council adjourned to second Saturday in December next, to meet at Warsaw.

To the Editor of the Examiner

Sir,—Will you kindly insert the following:—

FAIR WARNING.

To whom it may concern. Dear Sir, or Sir's, I take this opportunity, through the Examiner to inform parties selling coal oil, that if it is not sold at a moderate price to the poor, hard-working men, in Peterborough and surrounding country, that we will commence burning candles, or club together and import for ourselves. What is the cause of this rise in coal oil? Is it the National Policy? If so we will let John A. see that we can do without coal oil, and at the same time not be enveloped in such darkness as he would wish.

I trust, Mr. Editor, that poor men may truly see the position they have brought themselves into by listening to misrepresentations.

Yours respectfully,
A Poor Working Man.

News of the Week.

Epizootic in a mild form still continues prevalent among horses in St. John, and some have died from the distemper.

The Finance Committee of the Belleville City Council have thrown out all petitions for remission or reduction of taxes.

The by-law giving a bonus of $6,000 to the Newcastle Woollen Mills was passed Tuesday, and carried by about 80 majority.

It is not quite certain whether or not the Charlevoix election appeal case will come up for hearing at the term of the Supreme Court now close at hand.

Lord Leitrim writes to the Times indignantly repudiating the suggestion which had been published that he had not scrupled to exact from one Alexander Russell two years penal rent of £40, over and above the actual rent of £20 reserved in a lease granted by his predecessor.

Mr. J. E. H. Lesage, notary, of Montreal, served upon the authorities of Laval University, at Quebec, yesterday, a protest calling upon them at the instance of the School of Medicine and Surgery of Montreal to cease their branch in that city, and threatening legal prosecution if it is not withdrawn.

Richmond Hill, Oct. 4.—Two brothers named Fahey, residing in Markham, about two miles from Richmond Hill, had a quarrel this afternoon about property. The elder brother struck the younger with a mug on the forehead, making a terrible wound, at the sight of which their poor old father fell down dead.

The Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland offers a reward of £500 to any person who, within six months, shall give such information as will lead to the conviction of the two men who attacked Mr. Thomas Boyd and his two sons of Shambough, Kilkenny, on the 8th of August, and a further reward of £300 to any person who shall give such private information as shall lead to the same result.

A Genoa despatch says:—Garibaldi landed this morning and was received with the greatest enthusiasm. He appeared much pleased with his reception. Perfect order prevailed, and the general drove straight to his daughter's house. Garibaldi was escorted through the principal streets by the trade societies, with bands and banners. There was an immense crowd.

Mr. T. W. Handford has resolved to take to the lecturing platform. Mr. A Pitou, the well known theatrical manager, is to take him under his care. He will take him to Boston, where he will spend $500 in getting him properly advertised. Mr. Handford will deliver his lecture on Horace Greeley, which will be sure to take in the New England States. He will go from Boston to other large cities in the States, taking in New York. He will then go south. The tour will last for three months.

The latest event in the history of T. W. Handford was his being kicked out of Mr. Leslie's house on Jarvis street, Toronto, the other day by the master thereof, who found him in the same room with his wife, not a very unusual occurrence to be sure, but one which terribly enraged the husband and caused him not only to put the intruder out but to give him a sound pummeling. It is doubtful whether "Canada's greatest orator and elocutionist" will be able to lecture on "Horace Greeley" as announced. He has been drinking heavily and behaving in the most scandalous manner.—St. Thomas Journal.

The Port Hope Times says:—The total shipment of barley from this port since the first movement of the season, reaches 266,496 bushels, up to Saturday evening, 2nd October, which, according to former estimates, would leave 463,504 bushels to come forward during the fall and next spring, at this port. Prices the last few days have become weaker and lower, with maltsters holding off, and holders somewhat nervous but willing to accept lower prices in preference to storing longer, with some few who are well known to manipulate it by mixing Canada and State barley, although there are several honorable firms.

A man named Wm. Hern was recently convicted at Prince Arthur's Landing of murdering a comrade and sentenced to be hanged. A couple of days afterwards he hanged himself in his cell, and this is the verdict the Coroner's Jury who sat on the case returned:—"That William Hern, a confirmed criminal, has of Thunder Bay district, met having the fear of God before his eyes, but being moved by the temptations of the devil, came to his death about two o'clock on the morning of Sunday, the 26th day of September, 1880, in the gaol at Sault Ste. Marie, by hanging himself with a bed sheet, which he fastened to the bars over the door of his cell."

The Ninth Hastings Review says: One night a short time ago some parties from this village and neighborhood went out for a bee hunt. Having found a tree it was quickly felled, and one of the number proceeded to chop it open. Unfortunately, however, he went to work directly over the whole where the bees were located, a number of which swarmed out and took refuge on the inside of his pant legs, which were a trifle wide at the bottom. It is needless to say they made things pretty lively for him until he got his pants off but the bees were not to be outdone and charged in a body for the inside of his shirt, where they again succeeded in locating themselves. This article too had to come off, and the disgruntled and suffering sportsman was compelled to retire from the field. From the remarks indulged in at the time we judge that the bee trees will be let alone in the future, as far as he is concerned.

The Eastern War Cloud.

London, Oct. 4.—An Athens despatch says: The leaders of the Opposition in Parliament have decided to support a national armament. There are now forty thousand men under arms, and recruits are flocking in.

A Rome despatch says:—Admiral Seymour arrived at Cattaro to-day, and immediately proceeded to Cettinje. Montenegro now urges that the season is too far advanced to permit of farther delay, and declares her willingness to attack Dulcigno immediately, provided she can obtain the effective concurrence of the fleets.

A Castelnuovo despatch says the European fleet is assembled in Teodo Bay, forming a line two and a half miles long. Admiral Seymour's flagship being ten miles from Cattaro.

A correspondent at Vienna hints that the negotiations between admiral Seymour and Prince Nikita, and the negotiations between the ambassadors and the Porte, are not quite harmonious. It is possible there will be a plan with a view of insuring harmony.

Spread the Good News.

As a family medicine and tonic, there is no remedy at present giving such universal satisfaction, and effecting so many astonishing cures, as Electric Bitters. Our druggists report a lively demand for them, at times being unable to supply the many calls. All Bilious Attacks, Stomach, Liver and Kidney Complaints, Diabetes and Gravel, readily yield to their curative qualities. Sold by all druggists, at fifty cents per bottle.

Implements in the Field.—One in riding through the country is surprised at the manner in which farmers leave their valuable farm machinery in the field without any protection from the rain and the sun. A shed of rough boards costs but little, and will pay a large interest on the investment, if used to shelter these machines. Besides we do not see the slow decay, we are apt to forget that it is going on, until reminded by some costly machine which goes to pieces just at the moment when most needed. This treatment of machines is excellent for the manufacturers, but it is one of the prominent reasons why "farming don't pay."

The Red Boot Still Leads the Trade.

W. J. LARMOUR

Having during the past few weeks added largely to his former well-assorted stock, has now much pleasure in soliciting the inspection of intending purchasers of Fine Boots and Shoes, believing he can offer inducements, both in Material and Price not to be approached by any other dealer in town.

Since starting in business my aim has been to cultivate a trade in the Finer and Better Classes of work, with what success I leave the public to judge. The dealer who devotes his whole time and attention to any one line can supply his customers to much better advantage, and to carry out this theory, I have resolved in future to devote my exclusive attention to the manufacture and sale of Fine Work only, believing it to be more satisfactory to all.

In all Fine Lines my stock is now very complete, being well assorted, and of this season's purchase, and I can confidently ask for a continuance of the liberal patronage which has been so liberally bestowed on me since starting in business.

Selling for Cash.—On one point in business all are agreed, namely, those who give unlimited credit cannot sell as cheap as those who sell only for cash. In order to sell at cash prices and to cultivate a cash trade I have resolved, from this date, to give credit only to those who have promptly met their accounts in the past.

Fall Auction.—Fall Auction will open here on the 18th inst. Sheriff Hall is getting another pair of white gloves ready.

"Tenderry."—Emphatic testimony of its super excellence is in ty S. Delightfully refreshing. Everybody uses "Tenderry." 23-15ins Lumber Trade Reviving.—The timber limits belonging to the Scott estate have been purchased by Rathbun & Son, of Mill Point, and this enterprising firm are now making preparations for the sound of the same.

No Quorum.—There was no meeting of the School Board held on Tuesday evening last, there being no quorum. Messrs. Stevenson, Barnham, Shaw, Dumble, Deane and Retherford were the only members present.

Cash Cash.—Those who desire to secure stylish, durable and substantial first-wear can get the best and most fashionable goods at S. White's, George street, near Simcoe. Mr. is selling out a a handsome stock for what it will bring. 23-tf Drowning.—This individual, who has many times tested the efficiency of the Police Magistrate, was brought up on Monday on three distinct charges of furious driving, cruelty to animals, and drunkenness. He was convicted on the latter charge and properly fined.

County Court.—On Monday (the first day of the October term) the Judge of the County Court delivered judgment in the suits of Dean v. Chamberlain, and Watson v. Menzies. The rules in both instances for a new trial were discharged.

A Golden Opportunity should never be neglected—therefore those requiring cheap, comfortable and durable wear for their feet should not fail to examine Mr. W. J Larmour's stock, previous to the closing of his great clearing sale of imported and ready-made work. Remember the stock is all new and this season's goods, and is being offered at prices much below the present ruling wholesale figures. 22-tf

Prize Wheat.—Monday's motion of the weekly Review states:—"Mr. John Carnegie to-day received a bag of the fall wheat that won the Canada Company's prize, at the Provincial Exhibition held at Hamilton." We are certain that the allotment has fallen into good hands, and that Mr. Carnegie will distribute the grain without fear, favor or affection.

A Bailiff's Case.—The Ottawa Citizen of Tuesday, says:—"At the Police Court, yesterday, the Police Magistrate gave decision in the case of Hamilton vs. Foster, which involved the point whether a bailiff could legally deputize anyone to act on his behalf. The magistrate held that he could not do so, and in this opinion he said he was upheld by Judge Lyon.

Railway Break.—On Tuesday evening last a train laden with lumber ran off the track near Garden Hill, and the mails for that day were somewhat behind time. Were it not for the unvarying promptitude with which the mails are now delivered at Peterborough such an occurrence would excite no remark, but the break off in ordinary punctuality, even for half an hour, causes now more commotion than half a day's delay would have occasioned four years ago.

Auction Sale of Dwelling House Without Reserve.—A parcel of land on Cedar street with a comfortable dwelling house, two storeys, six rooms, kitchen and outbuildings, picket fence, good garden, ornamental and fruit trees, in good order, now occupied by William Risbor will be sold without reserve by C. Stapleton, Auctioneer, at Cavanagh's Hotel, on Saturday, 16th of October, at 2 p.m. The dwelling is the fourth house west of the West Ward School. For terms of payment see posters, or apply to the auctioneer. 41-3ins

A Foolish Carpenter.—The man who works up the boom in wages for the Review must be a mournful curiosity. In the first section of this week's weekly, published on Friday, he says:—"A carpenter in town yesterday refused $1.50 a day to work at his trade, giving as a reason that he could get $30 per month and his board, working in shanties as a hewer. Things must be looking up when such wages can be obtained; $1.50 per day a few years ago would have been accepted with avidity by almost any carpenter."

Of course we are bound to believe that the alleged carpenter actually existed, and was foolish enough to refuse $1.50 per day in the insane expectation of getting $30 a month in the shanties. Mr. T. Cavanagh returned last week, having procured situations for 35 men for Parry Sound, at wages ranging from $10 a month to $15, the latter the highest paid, and only to a few exceptionally good hewers. He has hired upwards of 200 men for the shanties of this district at wages averaging about $13.

Approach of the Winter Season.—The unusually early arrival of the cold weather brings up the important question of how to keep warm during the winter. The best man we know to answer the question is Mr. W. Lech, who has been working at it all summer. He has just opened out—and the public are invited to make the closest inspection of the same—an extensive stock of furs of every description and of every variety of styles. From Mr. Lech's knowledge of the fur market and all the influences which move it in one way or another, he was early led to believe that the absurd rise in South Sea Seal would be followed by a corresponding increase in value of other European furs, such as Persian, Russian, Astrachan and Astrachan. Acting on this belief he had his purchases made before the [illegible] began and indeed at the time his supplies had arrived and were [illegible] made up. His forethought was fully [illegible] by the state of the market shown by the [illegible] fair, for the same goods which he had purchased previously, were marked at nearly 20 per cent. advance, which must show to the advantage of the buyer, in all goods bought after that date. In consequence of this advantage he is able to offer the public and his patrons the advantage of first-class furs at the very low "1 price—a price that in first any ordinary fur-dealer could not afford. People who want first-class goods will do well to compare his prices and the class of his goods with other fur goods, and the result cannot be doubtful. Wholesale houses cannot compete with Mr. Lech's retail prices. 41-tf

LOCAL BREVITIES.

—We implore Mr. Vanzo to get the Clerk of the Weather to turn off the water.

—There is every consolation that wood is likely to be somewhat cheaper this winter than last.

—Caroline Fisher, who ventured into the hotel at Auburn Woollen Mills, a short time ago, is recovering rapidly and will not be crippled.

—The Coroner's fuel for 1880 is ready for the Coroner, who will make his preliminary skirmish in the direction of the unfrozen by-fuel tax.

—Hotel-keepers had to start their fires last week, and look very gloomy at the prospect of having eight months of firing up.

—The Mail says that "a man who went support his local paper is a poor specimen of humanity."

—Fortnightly pay-list for labor and material record again. Disbursements for labor, $220-11; lumber, $208.72.—Total, $428.83.

—On Friday last Hercules Andet said Mr. Chamberlain a matchbox, caught down the river, weighing 25 lbs.

—The Rifle Association holds its second shoot on the Cobourg Railway track on Monday and Tuesday, 11th and 12th. A committee of officers are collecting contributions to the prize list.

—Downeyville and vicinity contributed a large share to the grain sold in our market hou e during the past two weeks. The good prices offered by our buyers fetches them.

—Lewis & Boyd, lumber dealers, have sold their vessels, Lathaby and Corrocunal, to J. C. Miller, M. P. P., for use in the Parry Sound lumber trade.

—The very chilly atmosphere gives a timely hint that house plants must be sheltered at once or Jack Frost will mar the beauty of the flowers.

—Mr. M. Curtis has been having some fun with the Review and Times people. We advise our friends to go out on somebody's farm and try and leave the chilluns between a turnip or a great-necked squash and a large potato.

—Thomas and Jeremiah, two warm friends of many of our leading citizens, have returned to town, and taken up their quarters for the winter at the Ontario House. They have already been called on by numerous old admirers.

—Now that Mr. Cahill is back to town, sufferers by those disbelized, ankle-breaking, temper-destroying traps, known as the Simcoe-street crossings, are yearning to see the Street Inspector with his pick and shovel, abating the nuisance.

—The Midland navvies working at the Ashburnham track-laying form a striking contrast with the Grand Junction policeman. They behave themselves like white men, and evidently don't intend to contribute any of their earnings to the Police Court exchequer.

—On Tuesday afternoon last the Bank of Commerce building was struck by an earthquake, or a cyclone, or some other meteoric missile—at least so the clerks thought when half a ton of cornice, more or less, fell to the floor, happily injuring no one.

—P. C. McGhee rescued a wagon and team on Front street last week and lodged them in the St. George's Hotel stables. Next day the team was claimed by Ed. Sutton, of Cavan, whose hired man said he had tied them at McBains storehouse, whence they disappeared.

—Will somebody hold him? He is surfeited with big potatoes, big carrots, big pigs, etc., and coals frantically for a big apple. Won't some of our country friends oblige him with the biggest of everything available? Has any body got any large yarn?

—The young man who had begun to wear a somewhat seedy aspect has now got his ulster home from the office of the gentleman who reinvents gentlemen's wearing apparel, and now proudly parambulates the street, thanking heaven for the blessing of an early arrival of the cold snap.

—The Cow By-Law came into force last Friday. Under this edict parties rejoicing in the ownership of cows will have to keep them within their own premises from 6 p.m. to 6 a.m., from now till May 1st; otherwise the town herds will put the same in pastures in the public pounds.

—An Italian organ grinder, with a strong Limerick brogue, passed through town on Tuesday on his way to a warmer clime. He had an infernal machine on wheels, from which, to crowds of admiring small boys, he ground diabolical sounds that made the man with the musical ear wish he had never been born.

—Our funny and facetious friend of the Review relates "a story of a man who brought a bushel of apples to a printing office once upon a time" when he was quite young, and that he lived to "be over one hundred years. Who will try the "experiment?" Whoever told the young man that story forgot to add that though the donor lived to a great old age, and died without repenting his crime, the confiding reporter who accepted the guileful donation, lingered in great agony from the colic, and died with a solemn injunction on his lips to his colleagues, that they should thereafter keep a man at the front door with a shot-gun to keep out interlopers who come in to fill up the office with vegetables and garden fruit.

Accident.—We regret to learn that ex-Sheriff Hall had the misfortune last week, by the opening of a wrong door, to be precipitated down a stairway into the cellar. He was severely shaken and bruised, but we are glad to know is progressing favorably.

Mr. R. H. Dennistoun, has returned to town from his trip to Europe. He many friends are glad to welcome him back, and their welcome is none the less warm since he returns evidently so much improved in health.

French Missions.—Rev. Charles Tenney preached in St. Paul's Church on Tuesday and on Monday evening, delivered a lecture on the subject of the necessity for aid for completion of the French Missions. We believe the eloquent clergyman was fairly successful in his efforts here.

A Rare Offer.—The WEEKLY EXAMINER and Weekly Globe will be sent free to January 1881 to all who sub-scribe for these journals for the year 1881. Subscription only $2.50, and in addition a splendid steel engraving of the Hon. George Brown will be given away to each subscriber.

A Big Offer.—Bear in mind that every subscriber to the Peterborough EXAMINER and Weekly Globe will get, gratis, a handsome steel engraved portrait of the late Hon. George Brown. The portrait will be about 14 x 20 inches, got up in the best style of modern art, and will be sent to all subscribers about first of the year. New subscribers to the EXAMINER and Globe will get both papers free to January 1st, and all of 1881 for $2.50

Removal.—Those who were delighted some months ago with the appearance of M. Edouard Remenyi will hail with acclamation the news that he is again to return to town. M. Remenyi appears here on the 18th instant, on which occasion he will be supported by Mr. Beale, whose efforts at the organ at St. John's Church will long be remembered by those who were present. Mr. DeCelle, who was with M. Remenyi on his former visit, and Miss Clara D. Bracy, who is spoken of as the Jenny Lind of the present age. 41-1in

Increased Security.—We are informed that in consequence of the greatly increased business of the "Royal" Insurance Company of England throughout Canada, and consequently an increased liability to the public, the Company have deposited a further sum of one hundred thousand dollars to their credit with the Honorable Finance Minister, which increases the deposit of the Company to six hundred thousand dollars, and that they will, as occasion requires, still further increase their deposit. 41-1t

Birth of Sixteen.—Mr. Thomas Fortye well known in connection with the hardware business of Messrs. Bertram & Co., lately purchased a business for himself in Owen Sound. Fleeting through town on his way to Montreal to buy goods, he was surprised by a deputation of young men, who presented him with an address, expressive of their regard, and backed up the same by a solid gold chain and locket, of very handsome design and costly value. The best of wishes go with this little present towards Mr. Fortye, and we hope he will be happy and prosperous in his new home.

A Mistake.—The Review owns Father O'Connell an apology for the vile slander circulated in its columns in reference to the recent pic-nic in the rev. gentleman's parish. The statement there was any such row as reported in connection with the pic-nic is entirely foundationless. The pic-nic, we are assured by persons who were present, was as orderly an occasion as could be desired, and any person who knows Father O'Connell ought to know that it could not be otherwise. The fight between Lusby and Sullivan occurred some four miles from where the pic-nic was held, and had the parties been present at the pic-nic instead of drinking whisky, at Peterborough, we should never have heard of the row at all.

Peterborough Presbytery.—This Presbytery met at Cobourg on the 28th ult, when the reports, and we understand, very satisfactory ones, from the mission fields in charge of the Presbytery were considered. After deliberation it was decided to ask the Home Mission Committee to increase the grant for Minden purposes so as to add another Missionary. A request for $400 additional for Bancroft and Robertson was granted, and the Perrytown and Knowlville charges were declared vacant, in accordance with the recommendation of the General Assembly. The following persons were appointed to take charge of the different fields of the Church:—Assembly Fund Mr. F. R. Beattie; Home Missions, Mr. Cormack; Foreign Missions, Mr. Ballantyne; Colportage, Mr. Bell; Aged and Infirm Ministers' Fund, Mr. Gaskin. Rev. J. Bell made an eloquent address on the above subject, and the students labored among the brands.

ASHBURNHAM COUNCIL.

The Council met on Monday evening. Present,—J. Stenhouse, Esq., Reeve, and Councillors Calnett and Ward.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

The following accounts were presented and ordered to be paid:—

McKee & Davidson	$ 2 00
J. R. Stevenson	4 20
John Craig, work on roads	75 25

An application from Mr. John Budd, Connaught street, to have the approach to his gate repaired was received and referred to the Road Master with power to act.

Councillor Calnett by request laid before the Council an application from Mr. Bickford for a loan of $4,000 to build a station in Ashburnham.

It appeared to be the opinion of the Council that Mr. Bickford should lay his proposition more fully and definitely before the Council before any opinion should be given as to the feasibility of the scheme.

The Council then adjourned.

PERSONAL.

Mr. J. D. Manzie has been appointed Sheriff of the united counties of Prescott and Russell.

Mr. A. J. Kent, of Montreal dropped in on us last week.

The San Francisco Call chronicles the arrival there of Mr. R. Thompson, photographer, late of this town.

Mr. J. B. Trayes, editor of the Port Hope Times, and Mr. F. Whitehead of the same town, made us a call last Saturday.

Mr. Adolphe Peterson representing Messrs. Northeimer & Co., the well-known piano manufacturers, arrived in town yesterday, and was welcomed by many old friends.

Dr. R. V. Pierce, Consulting Physician to the World's Dispensary and Invalids' Hotel, of Buffalo, N.Y., has resigned his seat in Congress that he may hereafter devote his whole time and attention to those applying to the World's Dispensary Medical Association for the treatment of chronic diseases.

Some ladies who lately crossed the lake on board the steamer Moravian, during what is called a "equally" voyage, desire us to return their thanks to Capt. Crawford for the politeness and courtesy extended to them. We do so most gladly, but may remark that courtesy and attention to the wants and comfort of his passengers are a characteristic with the Captain, and he couldn't help it if he wanted to.

RAILWAY NOTES.

Midland R. R. traffic receipts for week ending Sept. 7th, 1880, were:—Passengers and mails, $2,-336.53; freight, $13,694.15; total for week, $14,054.68. For corresponding week in 1879.—Passengers and mails, $2,276.46; freight, $8,884.01; total for week, $11,262.47; increase, $2,872.21. Aggregate from 1st of January, 1880, $267,776.83. Increase over 1879, $72,354.35.

The Midland Railway bonds worth over a year ago only 17c., are now quoted in London at 47½. Holders there are unwilling to part with them. A Canadian capitalist recently tried to purchase $30,000 but could not get them even at the figure (3c.) he offered. There is every probability that the bonds will reach par in a couple of years. The increase is largely due to Mr. Cox's management of the railway and the increased traffic from the boom in lumber and the good times.—Guide.

We understand that the scheme for insurance of the Midland Railroad officials against accidents has been very successfully carried into effect, more than three-fourths of the employes have taken up the insurance, and the Railway Board have very generously undertaken to pay some part of the brakesmen's premiums. Mr. Hay, the inspector of the Canada Accident Insurance Company, has shown considerable energy and perseverance in carrying through a very laudable undertaking.

The Norwood Register, in closing a report of a trip to Midland, contains the following:—"Now, a word about the Midland Road. This is now under the management of G. A. Cox, Esq., the President. Everything his hand touches must prosper. But a short time ago the road was in a delapidated condition, financially and practically,—now it is one of the best paying roads in the Dominion. The amount of freight daily passing over it to points along the line is exceedingly great, and to such an extent has the freight traffic increased of late, that it was found necessary to erect seven or eight more station houses along the line to Midland, and these buildings are now in the course of construction.

The new car "Orillia" made its first trip on the Midland railway on Monday evening from Port Hope to Lindsay. It is a very handsome conch in every respect. The interior is of a tasteful design, the upholstering being of red velvet. The upper border is in green and gold. The top is handsomely figured in salmon color and blue. The wood work is nicely varnished, veneered and polished. The ventilation is all that is necessary. The lamps, three in number, are fixed in brass mountings with the largest size globes. The words "Midland Railway" are in gold letters on a green background at each end of the car. The windows are large with double sashes in. The top of the seat castings are in embossed steel. The exterior is in brown with gold pencil line, and the word "Orillia" in gold letters in an oblong circle is prettily done. The corners of the car and about the door shows very creditable skill with the tools and the brush, the figuring in gold being very beautiful. The words "Midland Railway, No. 11," are nicely painted along the outside near the top. The car reflects credit on the car-works at Port Hope, where it was made. It is said to have cost five thousand dollars, about the price of the average farm in Ops at the present time. It is to be run on Mr. Britton's train leaving here at 5.45 a.m., and its comfortable seats and luxurious appointments will be cordially appreciated by the early travellers.—Post.

The Philosophy of Wearing a Good Hat.

From Homer's time to Tennyson's
The Hat has been a theme
Of poets, sages satirists
But Homer did not dream—
How time with art and science
Could so persevere and find
For man such ease and comfort,
With true elegance combined.
The clumsy, hard, unhealthy thing
Our grand-sires used to wear,
Has given place to ease and grace
Allied with texture rare;
'Tis vain, however well we dress,
Or how the garments sit,
If in the gossamer we mount
There's neither style nor fit.
A poet would not spoil his verse
By "halting line" which jars,
The painter does

DISTRICT NEWS.

Bowmanville.

PAINFUL ACCIDENT.—Mrs. John Connors, of this place met with a somewhat painful accident one day last week by breaking two of her ribs. It appears she was driving to town with a little boy, son of Mr. Hickey, who, through the switching of the horse's tail, lost hold of his lines. Naturally enough the woman became startled and in her excitement threw herself from the buggy, with the above result. The horse attempted to run, but with much presence of mind the little fellow reached over the dashboard, and catching the lines, at once stopped him. Another lady who was in the carriage at the same time made a similar "leap for life" but got off with nothing more than a black eye.

THE PERSEVERANCE has for the last week been making remarkably good progress under the able management of McGimsey Bros., contractors. With the exception of the verandahs the outside work is about completed. The painting is very fine; the only trouble in that line was to have it done well enough in order to contrast with the other work. The slate roof in appearance surpasses everything. As for the pinnacling, there will be no question about that, since Mr. Reeves of Lindsay has that portion of the contract. Father Connolly still hopes to have his Christmas dinner in the new house. It (the house, and probably the dinner) will be one of the finest in the south riding.—Post Cor.

THE AUTUMN.—The trees are again resuming their autumnal beauty, and one cannot fail to be struck with admiration when gazing upon so delightful a scene. Owing to the refreshing rains of the past week the fall wheat crop is looking well, which is a cause of general rejoicing among the farms.

THE CHURCH.—Bible Christian Church, Salem, Sunday, Sept. 26th.—To-day the pulpit of this church was very ably filled by the Rev. Mr. Courtice, B.A. The congregation, though somewhat small, went home greatly edified by the discourse of the afternoon.

Intended for Fun.

'Down in front'—An incipient moustache.

A mosquito always settles before he presents his bill.

Give a pic-nic party rope enough, and they will play copenhagen.

An Englishman, upon hearing the cackling in a poultry yard, exclaimed, "Oh, this is really benchanting."

"Strive to make a good impression wherever you go," said Jones as he pulled his foot out of the mud.

Elopements are becoming quite fashionable. A horse ran away with one of the oldest maids in Philadelphia.

There are no professional beauties in this country. The great number of amateurs would crowd out professionals.

"Are you lost, my little fellow?" asked a gentleman of a four-year-old. "No," he sobbed in reply; "b-but m-my mother is."

"Kiss me, sweet tart," he murmured; and her acidity turned to elliptical sweetness. We looked around the corner and saw this.

An exchange says, "Good wives are wanted in the North-West." Surely, this is not strange. Is there any place where they are too wanted?

A Boston girl received a fragrant bouquet from one of her admirers. "How lovely!" exclaimed the ecstatic fair one; "it fumigates the entire domicile."

The angel of midnight—the woman who opens the street-door to her husband when he is trying to unlock the bell-knob, and then lets him sleep on the hall floor.

A very disagreeable old gentleman dies. A nephew, charged with the duty of preparing his epitaph, suggests, "Deeply regretted by all who never knew him."

A woman in Jericho, Vt., having heard a great deal about "preserving Autumn leaves," put up some, but afterward sold a neighbor that they were not fit to eat."

Relatives are an absolute necessity to some people. If a servant girl hasn't got an aunt who is sick and requires some one to spend the night with her, how is the girl to get out to the circus.

Lord Brougham once, when he was in a facetious mood, being asked to define a lawyer, said: "A lawyer is a learned gentleman who rescues your estate from your enemies and keeps it himself."

A boy of twelve years, dining at his uncle's, made such a good dinner that his aunt observed, "Johnny, you appear to eat well." "Yes," replied the urchin, "I've been practicing eating all my life!"

The chicken was being carved, when little Johnny, pointing with one hand at the chicken and the other at the guest, said: "Is that the chicken you said it was a shame to throw away on the darned old pig?"

'Is this the place,' she asked, as she wandered down on the barren sands, 'where a young lady—a beautiful young lady—fell in the water last season and was rescued by a gallant young man whom she afterwards married?' He looked at her carefully, estimated her at a square 47, with false teeth, and said, 'Yes, ma'am, but I don't know how to swim.'

The Local Paper.

The columns of a paper are the publisher's stock in trade, and the parties who ask us to use them for their special benefit must expect to pay for the same, and we hope they readily will, after due consideration, view the matter in the proper light. So every public-spirited citizen of a place should have a pride in seeing his town and surrounding country improve. Every new house or barn in the town adjourning, every fence, road, shade tree, every new manufacturing establishment erected, every new business opened, enhances the value of property in the widest. Every honest reflecting mind knows this to be true, and you should not forget that the local newspaper adds much to the general wealth and prosperity of the place, as well as increases the reputation of the town abroad. It benefits all who have business in the place, enhances the value of property, besides being a desirable public convenience, even if not conducted in the interest of the ruling political power. If its columns are not filled with brilliant editorials, still it benefits you in many ways. It increases trade, it cautions against imposition, it saves you from loss, it warns you of danger, it points out greater advantages and increases your profits. Now if you want such a newspaper you must support it by advertising your business in it, and assist us in increasing its circulation by getting your neighbors to subscribe with you for it. If you want such a paper you must not consider it as act of charity to support it, but as a means to increase your own wealth as well as that of the place in which you live. The local press is the power that moves the people; therefore support it by advertising in and subscribing and paying for it.

Household.

To peel any kind of fruit easily pour boiling water over it, and this loosens the skin.

To stone raisins easily pour boiling water over them, and drain it off. This loosens them, and they come out clean and with ease.

SWEET POTATO PUDDING.—To a large sweet potato weighing two pounds rub half a pound of sugar, half a pound of butter, one gill of sweet cream, one gill of strong wine or brandy, one grated nutmeg, and a little lemon peel, and four eggs. Line tin plates with puff-paste and pour in the mixture. Bake in a moderate but regularly heated oven. When the puddings are drawn from the fire cover the top with thinly sliced bits of preserved citron or quince marmalade. Strew the top thickly with granulated white sugar and serve, with the addition of a glass of rich milk for each person at table.

Thomas' Eclectric Oil! Worth Ten Times its Weight in Gold. Do you know anything of it? If not, it is time you did

Pain cannot stay where it is used. It is the cheapest medicine ever made. One dose cures common SORE THROAT. One bottle has cured BRONCHITIS. Fifty cents' worth has cured an OLD STANDING COUGH. One or two bottles cures bad cases of PILES or KIDNEY TROUBLES. Six to eight applications cure ANY CASE of EXCORIATED NIPPLES or INFLAMED BREAST. One bottle has cured LAME BACK of eight years standing. Daniel Flack, of Brookfield, Tioga County, Pa., says: "I went thirty miles for a bottle of your Oil, which affected a WONDERFUL CURE OF A CROOKED LIMB, by six applications."—Another who had had ASTHMA for years, says:—"I have half a bottle left, and $100 would not buy it if I could get no more."——Rufus Robinson, of Nunda, N. Y., writes: "One small bottle of your ECLECTRIC OIL restored the voice where the person had not spoken above a whisper in FIVE YEARS."——Rev. J. Mallory, of Wyoming, N. Y., writes: "Your ECLECTRIC OIL cured me of Bronchitis in one week."

It is composed of SIX OF THE BEST OILS THAT ARE KNOWN. It is as good for internal as for external use, and is believed to be immeasurably superior to anything ever made. Will save you much suffering and many dollars of expense.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS.—Ask for Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. See that the signature of S. N. Thomas is on the wrapper, and the names of Northrop & Lyman are blown in the bottle, and Take no other. Sold by all medicine dealers. Price 25 cents. NORTHROP & LYMAN, Toronto, Ont., Proprietors for the Dominion.

NOTE—Eclectric—Selected and Electrised.

Joy Among the Children.

COPLAND'S SWEET CASTOR OIL, equally suitable for children and adults, Endorsed by over 600 doctors in Canada.

The difficulty of administering nauseous medicines, and the desirability of having the pleasant to the taste, induced T. Copland to undertake researches which resulted in the discovery of a Sweet Castor Oil, perfectly palatable, of the same strength and medical qualities as the ordinary Castor Oil, and while equally safe and harmless, yet acting with more certainty, and producing neither nausea nor griping. Some children say it is honey; others call it syrup—they all say they like it. One parent says—"My children drink it like water," another—"We had to hide the bottle or they would have finished it right off;" another—"My little girl has taken it twice without any trouble, and does not know what it is, though she hates the ordinary Castor Oil, and we could never get her to take it without a fight;" yet another—"I wish you success of your Sweet Castor Oil; it is a splendid thing—sure to take the place of all the common oil."

The extraordinary demand for this improvement on a staple household medicine has brought fraudulent imitations into the market, but the public can guard themselves against substitutes (which unprincipled parties are attempting to sell on the reputation of this article) by seeing that the name, "COPLAND'S SWEET CASTOR OIL," is on both the wrapper and direction label.

The undersigned having purchased Messrs. T. Copland & Co's interest in the above preparation, are now manufacturing it from the original recipe. NORTHROP & LYMAN, Toronto.

PEOPLE TORMENTED by the many disagreeable sensations produced by dyspepsia, or are this, nervous and weak, should use the standard tonic—Northrop & Lyman's Quinine Wine. They will find it agreeable and beneficial. It enriches the blood by aiding digestion and assimilation; soothes and invigorates the nervous system, and imparts a healthful appetite. When used as a remedy for bilious and intermittent fever, it produces the happiest results, if taken between the attacks. Convalescence is hastened, and ultimately decay of the physique and constitution is arrested by it. The spirituous portion of the wine, which is of the finest quality, and the aromatics combined with it renders its flavor additionally pleasant. They who use it gain flesh as well as strength, and it exerts a cheering influence upon the mind. It promotes a healthy secretion and flow of bile, sound repose and regularity in the action of the bowels. If judiciously used it may be taken without apprehension of any ill result by persons of the most delicate constitution. A fair trial is all that is needed to prove the genuineness of its claims to public confidence, and to the truth of the general verdict in its behalf. No article of its class compounds itself so strongly to nervous invalids who require bracing up, and is so well adapted to fortify the system against the debilitating effects of the sultry months. It should not be confounded for a moment with other preparations which are represented as "Quinine Wine," but which are worthless. Ask for the "Quinine Wine" prepared by Northrop & Lyman." Sold by all Druggists.

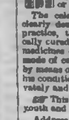
MANHOOD:
HOW LOST, HOW RESTORED!


We have recently published a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical and permanent cure (without medicine) of Nervous Debility, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediment to Marriage, etc., resulting from excesses.
☞Price in a sealed envelope, only 6 cts., or two postage stamps.
The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicine or the use of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.
☞This lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED
IS A FACT ATTESTED BY THE HIGHEST MEDICAL AUTHORITIES IN THE WORLD.

A careful observance of the laws of health, and the systematic and persistent use of Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda will accomplish this result. This preparation has all the virtues of these two most valuable specifics, in a form perfectly palatable, and assimilable to the most delicate stomach, and we make the unqualified statement that Scott's Emulsion is being used with better results, and endorsed and prescribed by more physicians for Consumption—and the diseases leading to it, such as Chronic Coughs, Bronchitis, Scrofula, Anæmia, General Debility and the Wasting disorders of children, than any other remedy known to medical science. The rapidity with which patients improve on this food medicine is truly marvellous.

SEE WHAT PHYSICIANS AND THE PEOPLE SAY ABOUT IT.

MESSRS. SCOTT & BOWNE: 69 West Thirty-ninth Street, New York, September 2, 1874.
GENTS—I have frequently prescribed Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites during the past year, and regard it as a valuable preparation in scrofulous and consumptive cases, palatable and efficacious. C. C. LOCKWOOD, M. D.

MESSRS. SCOTT & BOWNE:—Gentlemen:—Within the last year I have used in my own family, and in my private practice, prescribed very extensively SCOTT'S EMULSION OF COD LIVER OIL with HYPOPHOSPHITES and found it a most valuable preparation, especially in diseases of children. It is agreeable to the most delicate stomach; is truly nutritious, and a very reliable agent as a supporter remedy in consumptive and debilitated subjects. Yours truly, A. H. SANFORD, M.D., Baltimore.

THE FALL SHOWS.

PETERBOROUGH AT THE CENTRAL.

THE SMITH, ENNISMORE AND LAKEFIELD SHOW.

THE EXHIBITION AT KEENE.

Successful Exhibits and Attendance.

We are now fairly in the middle of the Exhibition Season. The Toronto Industrial, the Provincial and the Dominion having concluded; the local Central took place at Port Hope last week, and was fairly successful, though had it been more systemically advertised the attendance of both exhibitors and visitors would have been fully double. The financial results, we understand, are not likely to send much of a surplus to the next Central, if there should be one held. We find that a very general opinion is held in this County and townships surrounding it, that the sooner Peterborough retires from the central arrangement with Cobourg, Port Hope and Lindsay, the more satisfactory for the farmers, and the better for the object of promoting agricultural interests. By dropping the township and riding shows, and having each year a Peterborough Central Fair, the results could not fail to be vastly more beneficial than at present. The prize in money would become accordingly enhanced and the importance of prizes as to merit would be greatly magnified. Farmers who are accustomed to exhibit would be saved the expense, trouble and injury to stock and produce, of hawking them to township and county and central exhibitions—one trip would answer all purposes. This view of the matter will doubtless be fully discussed before another "Central" under present arrangements is entered upon. The following are the prize-takers from Peterborough county at the Port Hope Central:

Smith, Ennismore and Lakefield.

The annual Show of these Townships, united for Agricultural purposes, was held on Thursday and Friday last, at Ladefield, and was the most successful yet held, the entries numbering no less than 571, being over 100 more than last year, while the number of tickets sold was far in excess of any previous year. The first day was devoted to the arrangement of goods in the Hall, where there was a most excellent display of Agricultural produce, fruit and ladies' work. In the latter class especially, both in useful and ornamental lines, the display reflected the greatest credit upon the skill and good taste of the ladies, and shows that such accomplishments are not confined to towns and cities, either in respect of extent of variety or excellence. The principal exhibitors in these lines were Miss Annie Caldwell, Miss McKibbon, Miss E. E. Sherin, Mrs. Wordruff, Mrs. J. Garbutt, Miss Shields, Miss McLean, Miss L. Grills, Mrs. Roland Strickland, Mrs. Urquhart, Miss White White and others. The show of fruit was exceedingly fine, in fact some of the best fruit we have ever seen was displayed, the first prize apples being of special excellence. We Give the prize list below.

POLITICAL APPOINTMENTS.

There seems to be some ground for believing that our contemporary the Times has supplanted its neighbor, the Review, as the recognized mouth-piece of the Conservative party. At all events, of late the latter journal has assumed the same relation to the party that the Ass had to Balaam. In its issue of last week the Review said :

"But the assertion which we wish most emphatically to repudiate is that the Conservatives have adopted the maxim that 'To the victors belong the spoils.' WE LOOK UPON THIS MAXIM AS BOTH IMMORAL AND PERNICIOUS, SO WE COULD NOT SUPPORT ANY PARTY THAT ADOPTED IT AS A RULE OF ACTION. Much as the public appointments may be criticised by the Opposition of the day, Canada is far from being in the unfortunate position of the United States in this respect, and WE WOULD VEHEMENTLY OPPOSE THE INTRODUCTION OF SUCH A SYSTEM."

We greatly fear that some honest but irresponsible person has got temporary possession of the Truly Good Man's chair, and we can easily conceive the anguish of the latter when he comes to read in the columns sacred to the N. P., a declaration so astounding. What! "immoral and pernicious!" Truly here is occasion for the local manager of the party to rend his garments and tear his hair. "He could not support any party that adopted it as a rule of action!" Well! well! And this is the same paper which through good and ill repute, and especially the latter, has not only upheld the party which has practised for the first time in Canada the "American principle," but has attempted to justify and defend the individual instances in which that "immoral and pernicious" principle has been applied. The very first thing the present Government did on coming into office was to remove a number of the duly appointed officials of the Crown, for the sake of making room for party friends, and from the first week of their occupancy of office, to this present, they have pursued this practice, taking in their way according to the present necessities of their hungry partisans, every range of officials and employees, from Lieut.-Governors to carpenters in the Government workshops, and the laborers on the Government railways. Even when the "immoral and pernicious" system was brought under the immediate range of our most immaculate contemporary's pious nose, did that excellent organ suggest even a sneeze? Not any. It quite approved the leger-de-main by which one Inspector of Weights and Measures was juggled out of office and another put in his place—quite as efficient, no doubt, but not more so, beyond having, so to speak, the political "strawberry mark on his arm." We are accustomed to hypocrisy in a good many shapes, in the editorial columns of our contemporary the Review, but for cool effrontery and unblushing impudence, commend us to this organ of the present Government, which in one breath declares that the principle of "to the victors belong the spoils" is immoral and pernicious, and in the next, adopts vas victis as its shibboleth, and clamourously justifies that which it would fain appear to condemn. If the Review were honest it would proceed to carry out the principle which it here enunciates, and its first step would be to renounce the party which it plainly declares it "could not support." But, as all the limited world in which it moves knows, it is not honest, and will continue to condone, excuse, palliate and even attempt to justify conduct which we have it on record in its own words is both "immoral and pernicious."

THE DONNELLY MASSACRE.

The trial of James Carrol, one of the Biddulph gang, for the murder of the old woman Judith Donnelly, one of the five victims of the most horrible crime which has ever disgraced humanity in this country, ended on Saturday night last, when the jury reported that they stood seven for acquittal, four for conviction, and one undecided, and were unable to agree. They were accordingly discharged, and the case stands precisely where it stood three months ago. It is not yet decided whether the Crown will proceed against Carroll on any of the other counts of murder, or against any of the other prisoners, or what the future course of justice will be. It would be unjust to pronounce the men now undergoing trial "guilty," until they had been found so by a jury of their countrymen; but that a crime most foul and unnatural was perpetrated under circumstances of sickening atrocity by a band of men united in premeditated inhuman purpose, there is no doubt whatever, and it does seem a strange parody on the name of Justice, that the law is not able to reach the guilty murderers. The ways of Providence, however, are inscrutable—the "mills of the Gods grind slowly; but they grind to powder," wrote a Roman philosopher centuries before Longfellow shaped the epigram now in common use, and we cannot doubt that in good time, when their crimes are ripe, the monsters who beat to death an aged woman raising her dying appeal to her Maker, and an innocent girl beseeching mercy of fiends, will be overtaken by a retribution under wiser guidance than that of the law officers of London.

POLITICAL NOTES.

A FAR-SEEING POLITICIAN.

There are few who can read the description of the Premier's reception by the Cartier Club of Montreal on the occasion of his return from England—the "face wreathed with smiles," his mandlin joke to his co-representative of Vancouver Island, and his own speech about the mission from which he had just returned—who know Sir John, but must intuitively arrive at the true cause of his exhilaration. His reference before the jeunesse dores of Montreal to the fact that he did not expect to see the accomplishment of the Pacific Railway, but hoped to "look down upon it from another and a happier sphere," would not surprise any one had it been delivered on some post-prandial occasion in the strict privacy of his fellow punsters of the Cabinet; but we are astonished that even such an inveterate joker as Sir John Macdonald, should have gravely developed his expectations for that part of the future, and with as much and as jaunty assurance as if the beatitude he prognosticates were one of the clauses of the bargain he had made with the cosmopolitan capitalists. We are glad to know, however, that his aspirations are so exalted, and that he has faith in their realization, albeit he has certainly followed during his lifetime, whose close he appears to anticipate before 1890 (the term he sets for completion of the railway) a singular course of living to qualify him for that elevation, whence he promises to be the guardian angel of the Pacific Railway.

THE RAILWAY INQUISITION.

With all that has forced itself before the Pacific Railway Inquisition—for all that has come out has been in spite of the care of the Chairman, who sees the coveted Superior Court Judgeship vanishing before the Tapper, Mackintosh, Whitehead, Chapleau scandals—we have not seen a word of the bargain by which Mr. Whitehead secured the Section B contract—of the arrangement by which Charlton fleeced his partners and the Government with the aid of the Ottawa contract broker—of the midnight bargain at Cornwall or Prescott—of Charlton's flight from his wrathful partners, his feigned lunacy, the exposure of the whole proceedings in the Ottawa Times, and the difficulty which surrounded the transfer of the contract to Whitehead before the Cabinet Council. From what we understand the Commission will require to sit again in Ottawa.

AN OLD SUBJECT CALLED UP.

Those who have watched the recent revelations concerning contract frauds in connection with the name of Mackintosh, will smile as they remember the patriotic defence of Mr. Mackenzie's Government by that individual, while they were being attacked by the Mail for alleged injustice to Dennison, Belden & Co., of Albany, and wonder how much he got for his opposition to them and the Mail, on that and one or two other occasions, where there was prospective "loot."

A FELLOW FEELING.

The Review refers to "Mr. Mackintosh's letter," and intimates that those who have exposed that person's swindling are "slanderers." The letter itself is one of the most sublime pieces of cheek ever penned, and the Review knows it offers no excuse for the rascality perpetrated—but who has a better right to defend Mr. Mackintosh than the Editor of the Review?

PARLIAMENT A NULLITY.

In his Montreal speech, and we observe that he has been careful not to make another one since the "fatigue" which then affected him has passed away—Sir John Macdonald intimated that the bargain with the alleged capitalists would go on all the same, whether Parliament were called together now or in January—in fact that the Government would carry out the scheme without regard to the existence of Parliament except as a body bound by its majority to register his decrees without any controlling supervision of the course of government. This is in accordance with Sir John's old-time practice, and we do not wonder that he thinks a majority which sanctioned the Letellier outrage, and the North-West Boundary fraud, would swallow any dose he might be disposed to prepare for them.

ONTARIO THREATENED.

The trickster who now rules the destinies of the Dominion, and who owes his seat in the House of Commons to the pauper Province of British Columbia, has not forgiven Ontario for her verdict in favor of Liberal principles last year. Insidiously his followers are crying up the cell of "too much governed," and are working the way to agitate for the abolition of the Local Legislature—the surrender of our autonomy, our right to manage our own internal affairs. To the cry of "too much governed!" we say "Aye!" and we urge that the country be saved $800,000 a year by dropping useless militia expenditure, and another half million by abolishing an effete and useless senate, dropping the office of Lt.-Governor, reducing the Governor-General's salary to the same status as that of President of the United States, and reducing Common's Sessional indemnity by $400, and Legislative indemnity by $800 per session per member. To abolish Upper Canada autonomy, for which our people fought so hard and so long a struggle, against a party headed by himself, would no doubt be mightily pleasing to Sir John Macdonald, who, as of old, would find it much more convenient to govern Ontario by a Quebec majority than to abide by the appeal to the intelligence of the Province. We are not sorry, however, to see the effort entered upon. By it and by his nefarious conduct in reference to the North-West Boundary of this Province, Sir John has won for himself a reckoning which the people of this Province will know how to pay in 1882, if circumstances do not sooner restore to the sovereign fountain of power the right of arbitrament of their own affairs.

The total shipments of cattle from Montreal to the English markets so far, have been 50,746 cattle, and 69,187 sheep, owing probably to the extreme shipments, lately the English markets are not so encouraging, and the freights are somewhat higher.

The total revenue of the Dominion from the period from July 1 to Sept. 30, was $7,165,899, as compared with $6,695,699 in the corresponding term of last year. The expenditure in the same term was $6,630,361, as against $6 153,992 last year. The statement shows a falling off of one fifth in the revenue derived during this time from Public Works, as compared with last year.

We add our personal congratulations to an old friend.

WE are glad to see that the Shrievalty of the county of Prescott has been conferred upon Mr. Merrick of Toronto. "Jerry" as he is known to all, high and low, in the range of his acquaintance, will fill the office with dignity and uprightness, and will have lost his proverbial hospitality and the happy national traits which he possesses in so eminent a degree, if he does not in a month of residence at L'Original, convert the most resentful Tory into his warmest friend. Mr. Merrick had strong claims upon his party, and they are deservedly recognised by his appointment.

An old landmark of early Canadian history has been removed by the death at the residence of his son-in-law, Mr. Leggo, at Toronto, of Caleb Hopkins, who was a member of Parliament for Halton as long ago as 1829. In 1840, by his casting vote as chairman in Committee he passed the Bill by which our municipal institutions were established. He was a sound Reformer and retained his intellect till the day of his death. A series of letters published in the Hamilton Times within the past two years exhibit marked ability, and will form a valuable addition to the historical records of the country.

A Downing Street circular is published with an Imperial Order-in-Council transferring to the Government of the Dominion all British territories and possessions in North America, and the islands adjacent to such territories and possessions which are not already included in the Dominion of Canada (with the exception of the Colony of Newfoundland and its dependencies) such possessions to be annexed to and form part of the said Dominion after September 1, 1880. The lands in question are understood to be certain islands in the Artic region, concerning which debate took place in Parliament. To avoid disputes, the late Minister of the Interior took the initial steps to secure the action above stated.

In last week's Review is a letter over the signature of "Ego," which bears the editorial stamp so plainly that we challenge the Review to induce any sane, intelligent, self-respecting man, who is "two years" from the old country to attach his signature to it. Callous as the writer is he has sufficient sense of shame left, though placing the incubration in the editorial column, to put it in the shape of an anonymous communication. The writer prates of persons being "ashamed of their party," etc, while he gives the best of evidence that he is ashamed of his very name! One sentence is sufficient to quote: "A person who wants TO MAKE "ANYTHING OUT OF HIS POLITICS, "and there are very few I imagine who "do not want to do so, ATTACH THEM- "SELVES TO THE CONSERVATIVE "PARTY." We do not italicize this sentence to call attention to its singular grammatical construction—which is sufficient in itself to mark the author—but to acknowledge the truth of the statement so candidly made. The Chapleaus, the Mackintoshes, the Charltons, the Wilkinsons, the Frasers, the Barbers, et id omne genus, who go into politics to "make something out of them," invariably "attach themselves to the Conservative party," and we have not the slightest doubt that the writer of the letter alluded to lives in the hope of his reward.

HEAVY CROP—LEG BROKEN—NEARLY A FIRE—RUNAWAY ACCIDENT.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Oats are an unusually heavy crop in this township. Mr. W. Creedy threshed 100 bushels from an acre and a half.

On Saturday last as Mr. John Byres was returning home from Port Hope, he fell out of his waggon breaking his leg. Under care of Dr. Gray of Baillieboro he is progressing favourably.

On Friday last Mrs. John Morrison left her house for a short time leaving some clothes drying by the fire. She returned just in time to prevent a serious accident, as the clothes were all burned, and the floor in flames. She succeeded in getting the fire out without assistance.

As Mr Hunter was returning home with a load of staves along the 4th concession, while going down Lange' hill, some of the staves slipped forward, striking the horses and causing them to run away. The staves were scattered, the waggon broken and Mr. Hunter badly injured. He is now recovering.

LUMBERING—FALL CROPS—FRUIT.

Messrs Ferguson and Bork who intend lumbering again this winter are busy this week prospecting in the lumber regions back of Stony Lake.

Mr Bork also intends taking out a great deal of square timber, which will be drawn to Hastings, where it will be loaded on the cars and taken to Belleville.

The fall wheat and rye crops look well around here, of which there are a great deal sown.

The Norwood road is much used these days by Farmers hauling their grain to Hastings.

The apples in this part are an excellent crop this year, and the farmers are now busy gathering them in good time now for a paring bee.

THE SCHOOL—BIG POTATOES—GRAIN BUYING—SURGICAL OPERATION—THE FRUIT CROP ETC.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Attendance at school during the past month was not up to the mark, owing to so many pupils being required in the raising of the potato crop.

One of our farmers informed your correspondent that he had 250 bushels of potatoes from one acre of ground, several as large as those mentioned in the EXAMINER.

Mr. J. Robertson is buying grain here and giving as nearly as possible the Peterborough prices.

Mr. Sanderson a farmer residing in this vicinity underwent recently a severe operation, being the removal of a calloused lump from his back. The operation was performed by Dr. King, and was quite successful, as Mr. Sanderson is around all right again.

A good deal of fall wheat has been sown this season, and the farmers are busy turning over the ground.

Fruit is an extensive crop.

Mr. John Smith has retired from the pursuit of farming, and is living a retired life. J. S. wants a partner to complete his happiness.

Chicago Ahead.

All the world now looks up to Chicago as the great western metropolis of America, being far ahead of all competing cities; but none the less so, in its line, is Electric Bitters. From their real intrinsic value they have advanced to the front, and are now far ahead of all other remedies, positively curing where everything else fails. To try them is to be convinced. For sale by all druggists, at fifty cents per bottle. 43-14

It is with the utmost confidence in the result that the manufacturers of the "Myrtle Navy" tobacco ask all who have not tried it to do so. The thousands who have done so are living witnesses of its excellence, and are unanimous in the verdict which they give in its favor.

For diarrhœa, dysentery, bloody-flux, cramps in stomach, and colic, whether affecting adults, children, or infants, Dr. Pierce,s Compound Extract of Smart-Weed is a sovereign remedy. It is compounded from the best brandy, Jamaica ginger, smart-weed, or water-pepper, anodyne, soothing and healing gums. For colds, rheumatism, neuralgic affections, and to break up fevers and inflammatory attacks it is invaluable and should be kept in every household. Fifty cents by druggists.

A WISE DEACON.—"Deacon Wilder, I want you to tell me how you kept yourself and family well the past season when the rest of us have been sick so much, and have had the doctors visiting us so often."

"Bro. Taylor, the answer is very easy. I used Hop Bitters in time; kept my family well and saved doctor bills. Three dollars' worth of it kept us well and able to work all the time. I'll warrant it cost you and the neighbors one to two hundred dollars a piece to keep sick the same time."

"Deacon, I'll use your medicine hereafter." 42-3 ins

LADIES, would you be beautiful, have a clean complexion free from blotches, pimples, and other skin diseases arising from impure blood; would you restore the bloom of health to the pallid cheek, the brilliant sparkle to the eye, and elasticity to the step, take BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS, the great blood purifier, vitaliser, and tonic. A sure cure for all forms of female complaints, weakness and irregularities. One dollar per bottle. Sold by all druggists. T. MILBURN & Co., Toronto. 42-2 ins.

No truth is clearer than the Scriptural declaration:—"The blood is the life, * * * and the leaves shall be for the healing of the nations." BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS is purely vegetable, and makes pure blood, renovates, invigorates and restores the system when impoverished by disease. One bottle at the nominal cost of one dollar, will convince the most sceptical of the truth of these assertions. 42-2 ins.

NATURE'S OWN REMEDY, for the prompt, perfect, and speedy cure of cholera morbus, colic, crampe diarrhœa, dysentery, and all bowel complaints in adults, and that terrible scourge, cholera infantum in children, which annualy destroys so many pets of the household. Nature's cure for these devasting maladies is that ever popular medicine. Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, pleasant to administer, safe to take, and ever reliable. sold by all druggists and dealers at 37½ cents per bottle. 42-2ins

"DON'T KNOW HALF THEIR VALUE."—They cured me of Ague, Biliousness and Kidney Complaint, as recommended. I had a half bottle left which I used for my two little girls, who the doctors and neighbors said could not be cured. I would have lost both of them one night if I had not given them Hop Bitters. They did them so much good I continued their use until they were cured. That is why I say you do not know half the value of Hop Bitters, and do not recommend them high enough."—B., Rochester, N. Y.
